$600,000,000 In New Taxes If Bonus Wins —Morgenthau

Statement Sees Threat By Administration to All Bills.

Harrison Insists His Plan Exception

Inheritance Tax Talked; D. C. Hears Roosevelt Not for Bond Pay.

By Robert C. Albright.

The Federal tax club, which has hovered threateningly over every movement for bonus cash payment, yesterday was taken down from the rack by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, and menacingly waved before the Senate Finance Committee.

Congress, he said, must enact from $200,000,000 to $800,000,000 in new annual taxes if it intends to pass any of the pending bonus bills—and that goes for Senator Pat Harrison's so-called "Administration compromise." He suggested graduated inheritance taxes.

The Morgenthau statement dovetailed with word from one quarter that the President has not even read the Harrison bonus-payment-in-bonds compromise and has never formally approved or disapproved of that measure. Congress was reminded again that the President wants his program confined to his own budget limits.

Harrison, who is chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, insisted his bill will involve no additional taxation—that Morgenthau referred to servicing and sinking fund charges. Increasing revenues from existing sources, Harrison said, should carry the cost. Finally, he reiterated a forecast that the President will sign his bill if it passes.

"Views With Concern."

Others read into Morgenthau's words an Administration admonition that may do much to reduce bonus ardor.

"The Treasury," he said, "would view with great concern the enactment of any bill which calls for large additional expenditures without compensating additional taxes.

"It seems to us of the utmost importance that if any adjusted service certificate settlement calling for increased expenditures, or for earlier expenditures than those already taken into account, should be enacted, Congress should make provision for raising revenues sufficient to cover additional expenditures in the year or years in which they are to be incurred."

Morgenthau appeared before the Finance Committee as hearings on the bonus entered their second day. Veterans' Administrator Frank T. Hines will take the stand today. Three outstanding plans are before the group—the inflationary Patman cash bonus bill, which has passed the House; the Vinson bill, leaving financing of the bonus up to the Treasury, and the Harrison "compromise," entailing payment in bonds and in cash.

Harrison estimates his plan will cost ultimately $2,660,000,000—or $500,000,000 more than the present law. It would date bonus certificates from 1918 instead of 1925, enable veterans to collect present value of certificates in bonds, or the full amount about 1942. A premium would be given veterans who hold their certificates until 1945.

To Submit Tax Plan.

"The bill makes no drain upon the Treasury and calls for no immediate additional taxes," insisted Harrison.

But Secretary Morgenthau, in answer to a question before the committee, said his tax warning applied to every plan before the committee. He consented to submit a confidential report on his proposal to raise from $200,000,000 to $600,000,000 more a year from Federal inheritance taxes "on the same basis as the income tax." He gave no details.

"The credit of the United States Government depends very largely, in my opinion, upon scrupulous adherence to the President's program," he warned the committee.

"I don't think we can continue to enjoy the present favorable rates and favorable market for the sale of Government securities if new expenditures are incurred which go far beyond the limits of those which have already been outlined.

"A material decline in the market price of Government securities, which would be very likely to result from large expenditures outside the budget, would work a grave injustice upon all purchasers of Government securities and would tend to slow up the whole recovery program," he said.

Put Up to Congress.

The threat of new taxes has been soft-pedaled on Capitol Hill since the opening of the session. Both Harrison and House Ways and Means Committeemen have held out a hope that increasing revenues will be sufficient to carry the vast New Deal spending program.

The House committee, which must originate tax legislation, plans to defer revenue action until the rest of the legislative program is well on its way. One bill, continuing $420,000,000 in existing excise levies, must be brought out. If additional taxes are needed, leaders

Glass, Breaking Even, Swears Off Betting

By the Associated Press.

Senator Carter Glass has given up the "vicious habit of betting" despite an even break with Vice President Garner.

The Virginia Senator won "two bits" when he wagered Boston would defeat Washington in their first game here last week.

He lost the same amount a few days earlier when he bet on the Athletics.

"I'm going to frame this shiny quarter I won from Jack Garner and stop this vicious habit of betting," he said.

Silver Is Seen At 77½ Cents In New Boost

World Price Is Within Few Mills of High Set by Treasury.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

A sharp increase of 2¼ cents an ounce in the world price of silver yesterday created a widespread belief that the Treasury momentarily would again boost the price it pays for the white metal newly mined in this country, possibly to 77½ cents an ounce.

At 69.875 cents an ounce, the the world price of silver was within 1.235 of the Treasury's price of 71.11 cents for the newly-mined product. The Treasury last jumped its price on April 10 from 64.60 cents an ounce to 71.11 cents when the world figure came within a fraction of the Government's offer.

Would Restore Price.

The Treasury's action on April 10 was taken to mean that it would keep its price for silver ahead of the world price in an effort to restore the white metal to its statutory value of $1.29 an ounce, the object of the legislation under which the Government has been purchasing silver.

Treasury officials declined to reveal what their next step will be. Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau warned "not to bet any money on what we'll do." But it is known the Treasury's silver policy is on an hour-to-hour basis and that a change may come at any time, if the upward level in the world markets is maintained.

In view of what has happened so far this month, the prospects of a world silver price of $1.29 an ounce within a few months were regarded as good, provided the Treasury does not cease its purchasing operations. The average price at New York for silver in 1932 was 27.9 cents an ounce, while the average for last year was 48 cents an ounce.

Thus, while it is beginning to appear that the $1.29 per ounce objective of the silver purchase act may be reached, although the effect on commodity prices so far has been negligible, recent developments likewise have made it clear that it will be virtually impossible for the Treasury to achieve the goal set for it of acquiring sufficient silver to equal in monetary value one-third of its gold stocks.

One reason is that the gold stocks have been increasing faster than the silver stocks of the Treasury. Another is that there is not sufficient bar silver in the world to enable the Treasury to reach the required level.

Proportion Explained.

The silver purchase act, signed by the President on June 19, 1934, declared the policy of the Government to be that "the proportion of silver to gold in the monetary stocks of the United States should be increased, with the ultimate objective of having and maintaining one-fourth of the monetary value of such stocks in silver."

At that time the gold stock of the Treasury had a monetary value of $7,834,460,595, which, under the objective set up by the act, would have required $2,611,486,730 of silver, valued at $1.29 an ounce. The country's silver stock on June 19 last was $847,126,349. Thus, the monetary value of the silver stock

Driver of Bus Held for Jury In Fatal Crash

2 Trainmen Freed; Judge Declares Percy Line Failed His Duty.

By Edward T. Folliard.

Percy C. Line, 34-year-old driver of the bus which collided with a Baltimore & Ohio express train the night of April 11 at a Rockville grade crossing, was held for the grand jury late yesterday at Rockville.

The crash cost the lives of 14 Williamsport (Md.) High School students, who were returning from a chemistry demonstration and school party at the University of Maryland.

Following the tragedy, Line and the engineer and the fireman of the train were arrested on a charge of manslaughter and released in $1,000 bond.

Judge Donald A. DeLashmutt, of the Rockville Police Court, dismissed the manslaughter charge against J. A. Shewbridge, the engineer, and William F. Bussey, the fireman, at yesterday's preliminary hearing, saying they had done all they could to avoid the crash.

Judge Criticizes Line.

But Line, the judge contended, was clearly guilty of negligence and should face the grand jury on a manslaughter charge.

"I think it is the duty of every driver to stop at a railroad crossing and determine whether the track is clear," the judge said. "The best of warning devices are worthless if persons act as Eddie Stevens did."

The judge was referring to Eddie Stevens, assistant golf professional at the Manor Club, who testified yesterday that he drove across the grade crossing at 20 miles an hour without stopping just before the bus was struck.

Line admitted that he, too, failed to stop at the crossing. He said he drove across at a speed of between 10 and 15 miles.

State's Attorney James H. Pugh and W. Preston Lane, attorney for the B. & O., asked him if he knew Ship Rides Out 40-Mile Gale in Trip From Honolulu; Flight Opens Way for Early 'Round-the-World Plane Service.

By the United Press.

Alameda, Calif., April 23.—Pan-American Airways' huge clipper plane flashed into its home base today, completing the first round-trip commercial flight to Honolulu and opening the way to 'round-the-world air service.

The great four-motored amphibian, winging through bright sunshine, swooped to a landing at 5:58 p. m., E. S. T., 20 hours 59 minutes after taking off from Pearl Harbor.

Ten thousand spectators cheered as the 19-ton craft slithered through the waters of San Francisco Bay, a broad wake of foaming white marking its path as it came to rest alongside a float anchored off the landing base.

Thus the clipper's flight spread wings of America's commercial air fleet another 2,400 miles westward, with promise that soon they will reach to China, along Pan-American's 8,500-mile route. Bases now are being established at Midway, Wake, Guam and Manila for the service, which will connect with established air schedules to Hongkong and Canton.

Round-the-World Service Near.

By mid-July these bases will be finished. By next fall travelers may be able to fly around the world.

Across the United States by Pan-American to China, then north and west over Manchukuo and Siberia to Europe, then across the Atlantic to South America and north by established services and back to the United States will be the available globe-circling route. The homing flight of the great plane, in contrast to the westward trip, was made against headwinds that offered a dragging challenge to the clipper, which smashed all records in its outward-bound hop.

Between 9 p. m. Thursday night, approximately three hours after its take-off, 5:59 p. m. (P. S. T.) and 11 a. m. Wednesday (P. S. T), the flying boat failed to pick up a single tailwind, flying at an average of

France Moves 120,000 Men To Reich Front

Artillery Units Also Speed to Border to Meet Hitler Threat.

By the United Press.

Paris, April 23.—The second and fifth batteries of the 100th and 57th Field Artillery regiments were moved up to billets at Thionville, near the Franco-German frontier, tonight as France rushed strengthening of her border fortifications against the threat of German rearmament.

Simultaneously, France threw the first half of a conscript force of 120,000 youths into the "front lines" along the German frontier, first recruits called to the colors under the extended conscription law.

The regular army artillery units, moved up from Nice to the eastern border, included approximately 400 men.

This was only preliminary, however, to further similar movements. Units to be affected include the 141st Alpine Infantry, stationed at Nice and Grasse, in the south, at

House Leader Urges U.S. Arm AgainstInvader

Cary Points to Seething Europe as Big Navy Bill Goes to the Floor.

By Douglas Warrenfels.

American preparation for a possible defensive war was urged in the House yesterday as the $460,000,000 Navy appropriation bill set sail on its voyage through Congress.

Broad-shouldered, outspoken Chairman Cary, of the appropriations sub-committee in charge of the measure, frankly pointed to the troubled European situation as creative of "occasion for alarm."

The bill, which contemplates the largest outlay since 1922 for Uncle Sam's sea fighting forces from regular sources, was described by its floor manager as "a defensive measure." It calls for 11,000 more enlisted men and points toward a treaty navy.

Other Proposals Made.

Other developments of a military nature included:

1. The House Foreign Affairs Committee proposed a plan to have this country become self-sufficient in the production of tin—an important war material.

2. Plans were made at the War Department for extensive war maneuvers in New York and Pennsylvania next August.

3. Indications were the House Military Affairs Committee would approve a bill to establish a separate Department of Air.

4. A bill to authorize construction of a system of air bases costing $110,000,000—apparently to be financed out of the $4,880,000,000 works fund—was reported favorably by the House Military Affairs Committee.

Cary outlined the purpose of the Navy bill to have 24 new ships laid down for replacements toward treaty strength and to buy 555 new planes.

"In view of world conditions," he added, "with war clouds hanging over Europe, with every important nation of that continent expanding its military and navy

Noah's Ark in Order As Big Tower Falls

By the Associated Press.

Gordo, Ala., April 23.—This town's new 100-foot water tower toppled today, with its 68,000-gallon capacity splashing the neighborhood.

Many Negroes shouted in fear, "Judgment Day has come." And many prayed until their more sophisticated friends convinced them "De Lawd ain't comin' in no water tank."

The water supply of the town was cut off temporarily. None was injured in the tower's plunge to the earth.

Capital Budget Held to Figure Of 40 Million

House Conferees Agree to Senate Boosts Up to Original Estimates.

By James D. Secrest.

The 1936 District supply bill will come out of conference with most of the original Budget Bureau estimates and with an appropriation for employment of 35 additional metropolitan policemen instead of the 141 asked by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police.

This was learned yesterday as the Senate and House conferees emerged from their second afternoon session and adjourned for several days.

Substantial agreements have been reached, it was learned, on all but three items: The amount of the Federal contribution, the $8,700 for character education and the $240,000 increase for Gallinger Hospital.

House conferees have yielded on many of the Senate increases, but only up to the level of the Budget Bureau estimates. Beyond that they refuse to go. In several instances the Senators have had to compromise on the increase, accepting a figure between the Budget Bureau estimate and the Senate bill.

Senators Insist on Raise.

The Senators, led by Senator Elmer Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, chairman of the subcommittee, and with the backing of Senator Carter Glass, chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, are prepared to hold out, however, for a raise in the lump sum payment.

Representative Thomas L. Blanton (Democrat), of Texas, fought stubbornly against any change in the $5,700,000 voted by the House unless it be a reduction, but in Senator Thomas he has met his match. As a consequence the bill may be carried to the floors with the lump sum issue still unsettled, or the conferences may be delayed indefinitely.

Insistence of the House conferees that no increases in appropriations be above the Budget Bureau estimates will mean that most of the $1,787,659 added by the Senate for public schools will have to be sacrificed.

Police Item a Compromise.

The agreement to appropriate funds for employment of 35 additional policemen represents a compromise, but it is in accord with the recommendation made to the Budget Bureau by the Commissioners.

Maj. Brown asked for 141 new officers and men, consisting of 100 new privates, six new officers to reopen the Second Precinct Station, and 35 men to fill vacancies that occurred during the years of economy.

The Commissioners approved only the filling of the 35 vacancies, and the Budget Bureau eliminated this item. The compromise means that the Second Precinct Station probably will not be reopened next year, but the additional policemen will enable Maj. Brown to bring the Police Department up to par.

The character education appropriation, which the House eliminated and the Senate restored, is still unsettled as the House conferees agree to recede despite the united demand of public school officials. The $8,700 was approved,

Posts as Head Of Work Unit And of NEC Go to Walker

To Handle Applications as Roosevelt's First Step in Program.

White House Set To Reveal Plans

Richberg, Out as Head of Council, Left Free For NRA Case.

By Felix Bruner.

President Roosevelt yesterday named Frank C. Walker, of Montana and New York, former treasurer of the Democratic national committee, as head of a division of applications and information as the first step in setting up his new organization for administration of the $4,880,000,000 works program.

At the same time, the President announced that Walker would resume his position as executive director of the National Emergency Council, replacing Donald R. Richberg. Walker resigned as head of the Emergency Council about a year ago and was succeeded by Richberg.

The White House statement announcing the change said that Richberg was being released at his own request in order to devote his entire time to the NRA during pending legislation in Congress and litigation in the United States Supreme Court. Richberg recently was named chairman of the National Industrial Recovery Board and he plans to argue the NRA constitutionality case before the court May 2.

More Announcements Due.

Announcement of the appointment of Walker and the formation of the division of applications and information was the first of a series of announcements concerning the new works set-up, it was explained at the White House. President Roosevelt is expected to make public further plans today.

The White House announcement indicated that administration of the works program would be in three divisions:

1. The division of applications and information.

2. A works allotment board, to make recommendations to the President on specific allotments, over which he will have final judgment.

3. Various department heads and emergency organizations to have charge of supervising expenditures and work projects.

"Clearing House."

The division headed by Walker is expected to be in the nature of a "reception committee" or "clearing house." To this organization will go every proposal of every description for allotment of funds. Here these proposals will be analyzed and turned over to the allotment board. The Walker division will have no authority either to approve or reject proposals.

Since the enactment of the works bill, various departments and the White House have been visited by scores of individuals and delegations asking for works allotments. Hereafter all of these people will be shunted to Walker's office in the Commercial National Bank Building. This has been headquarters of the Emergency Council information service since its organization.

Appointment of Walker stirred considerable speculation as to the inner significance of the move.

May Be Important.

There were some indications the President is setting up Walker as his personal representative and that he may become a far more important cog in the works program than the official announcement indicates.

Not only will the public submit its proposed projects to Walker, but also the numerous projects already waiting in the hands of Government agencies such as PWA and FERA apparently will have to clear through Walker.

Whether such procedure would tend to subordinate Secretary Ickes, PWA administrator, as well as Relief Administrator Hopkins, who have not seen eye to eye on the works relief program, was a matter of speculation.

Referring to the newly formed division, the announcement said:

"In this division these plans will be carefully sorted and checked and where engineering or other study is

Corcoran Art Gallery Adds Two Prizes in Art Exhibit

Six Winners of Independent Awards to Name Recipients of Oil and Water-Color Prizes; "Aid Living Artist," Says Minnigerode.

The Corcoran Gallery of Art put the stamp of approval yesterday on the Independent Exhibition of Art now being held at nine of the city's downtown stores by contributing two additional prizes of $50 each.

One is for the best oil painting and the other is for the best water-color work which has not yet received an award in the exhibition.

An unusual feature of this award is that the winning pictures will be chosen by the six artists who have thus far won commendation in these two fields. Bernice Cross, Eben F. Comins and Reeves Euler will select the Corcoran oil winner. Robert Franklin Gates, Roy Clark and Catherine Hubbard will name the winner of the Corcoran water-color prize.

C. Powell Minnigerode, director of the Corcoran Gallery of Art, yesterday explained that these prizes are to be given outright and are not purchase awards. He said yesterday:

"Speaking for the Corcoran trustees, we want, above all, to help the living American artist.

"The trustees of the Corcoran Gallery are sympathetic to this undertaking, especially as it places an emphasis upon the selling of the artist's product. Artists must live. Especially in these times is it highly desirable to have a practical movement such as this independent artists' exhibition. There is no reason why the idea should not be copied in other cities."

The letter accompanying the check for the two prizes sent by Minnigerode follows:

Mrs. Eugene Meyer,
The Washington Post,
Dear Mrs. Meyer:

It gives me great pleasure to inclose herewith a check for the sum of $100 to be placed to the prize fund for awards to be made to the Washington Independent Artists Exhibition which is now being held in this city under your auspices.

I am glad to add the assurance that our trustees were unanimous in their desire to have a modest part in the splendid project which you have in hand for the benefit of the artists in Washington.

In the hope that the exhibitions will all meet with the highest measure of success, and assuring you of our full sympathy with this project, I am,

Very sincerely yours,
C. POWELL MINNIGERODE,
Director.

2,000 Claimed Slain in Battle, Latest in Chaco's Warfare

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

Buenos Aires, Argentina, April 23.—Bolivian troops, fighting desperately on their own soil, claimed a smashing victory against the Paraguayans today at the climax of a six-day battle in the Gran Chaco border war.

The Bolivian command said 2,000 Paraguayans had been killed.

Both sides threw crack regiments into action. More than 40,000 men were involved along a 125-mile front. Villamontes and Charagua were the main objectives.

It was one of the bloodiest battles of the war in which the Paraguayans have been consistently victorious in recent months, pressing the Bolivians out of the disputed border area on most fronts and back into their own territory.

The Bolivians announced from La Paz that they had recaptured Charagua in Bolivia proper, halting the Paraguayan drive into Santa Cruz Province and forcing them back to the Parapeti River.

However, the Paraguayans said they had started a counter-offensive in the center of the line and that the Bolivians, far from victorious, were retreating from Boyube.

To match this, a Bolivian communique stoutly asserted that the Bolivian armies broke through the enemy lines on all sectors, taking "many prisoners," mortars, machine guns, rifles and trucks. They proclaimed they had killed 2,000 Paraguayans and captured 3,000.

In Santa Cruz, reports of Bolivia's recapture of Charagua, key city to the province, caused jubilation. Thousands of Bolivians paraded the city streets, singing their national anthem.

A Paraguayan communique claimed annihilation of a whole Bolivian regiment with bayonets, but admitted that in the face of "the most audacious Bolivian offensive of the war," strategic withdrawals were being made on certain fronts.

The Bolivian attack threw the war into action along a front extending from Villamontes, Bolivia's southernmost remaining city, 125 miles to the north into Santa Cruz province.

Man Soon to Learn From Eyes When He'll Die, Scientist Says

The time is soon coming when an individual will be able to learn from his physician how long he will live.

This prediction was made yesterday before the National Academy of Sciences by Dr. Felix Bernstein, of Columbia University.

Dr. Bernstein told members of the academy he had found that the length of life is directly related with the rate at which the lenses of the eye lose their elasticity.

In other words, he explained, the person who becomes "far-sighted"—that is, needs glasses early in life for reading and close work—is likely to have a shorter life than the person whose eye lenses retain their elasticity to a greater age.

This clew to length of life relates purely to the diseases of senility, such as brain stroke and heart stroke and does not take into consideration death by accident or diseases such as pneumonia, diabetes and epidemic afflictions.

The hardening of the lenses of the eye has been known as a symptom of old age for many years, but its use as an indicator for the forecasting of the life span was not thought of before. The hardening is called presbyopia.

Dr. Bernstein's conclusion from his studies was that length of life, as measured by the changes in the eye lenses, is inherited. This verifies the theory of physicians that descendants of long-lived families themselves live long.

"The conclusion that the natural length of life may become predictable if a proper measure of the physiological aging has become available is strongly backed by these findings," Dr. Bernstein said.

The fact that women live longer than men, Dr. Bernstein said, can probably be accounted for, not by a physiological superiority of women, but by the differences in the conditions of life of the two sexes.

Dr. C. A. Kofoid, of the University of California, amazed the academy with his discovery that elephants, complete vegetarians, "grow their own beefsteak in their stomachs."

He presented evidence to show that a species of protozoa—one-celled animals—live in the intes-

Moffett Breaks Earth on First House Project

Official Dons Overalls in Arlington to Launch U. S. Program.

Saying, "Don't you think we ought to get this job started?" James A. Moffett, Federal Housing Administrator, yesterday opened the throttle of a steam shovel which turned up the first scoop of dirt in the start of the first actual Government housing project, which took place in Arlington County, Va.

More than 500 persons looked on as Moffett, soon to retire as Housing Administrator, donned overalls and climbed into the cab of the steam shovel. In the crowd was Alfred L. Aiken, vice president of the New York Life Insurance Co., whose million-dollar loan made the project possible. Mr. Aiken said that already applications have been received for two-and-one-half times as many apartments as are to be built in the project.

After the steam shovel had been turned over to a professional operator and continued to tear into the earth, Mr. Moffett made a brief speech to the crowd.

"This is but one of the first projects to be made possible with the hearty co-operation between private capital and the Government and will provide work for a large number of men who are without employment," he said.

Turning to Mr. Aiken, he continued:

"I want to thank you for making possibly the loan which has likewise made this project possible."

The project is on the Wilson boulevard near the Woodrow Wilson High School in Fort Myer Heights, half-way between Rosslyn and the county courthouse at Clarendon.

The plan provides for six groups of two-story brick, Colonial apartment buildings. The whole will contain 276 apartment units of from three to five rooms each. Each group will have playrooms and laundries in community basements. Rents will range from $37.50 to $62.50.

Fiance Disappears On Wedding Day

By the Associated Press.

Worcester, Mass., April 23.—His wedding postponed after his strange disappearance, Wilfred I. Howell, 28, was sought throughout New England and in New York tonight by police, who feared he was a victim of amnesia or nervous collapse.

His fiancee, Miss Yolande P. Charest, shocked by the mysterious turn of events on her wedding day, was under the care of a physician at her home.

She was in the midst of preparations for the church wedding when Howell telephoned her shortly after noon yesterday that he had just obtained the marriage license and said:

"Don't worry—I'll be over as soon as I dress."

When the time for the wedding came and went without his appearance either at his home or that of Miss Charest, police were asked to start a search for him.

2 Army Fliers Die In Burning Plane

By the Associated Press.

Monterey, Calif., April 23.—Lieut. Russell E. Laird, of Riverside, and Private Bernard F. Rygwalski, of Cleveland, of the Army Air Corps' Ninety-first Observation Squadron, were killed today in the crash of their burning plane into Monterey Bay.

Several other Army planes and a number of fishing boats circled the spot more than an hour in the hope of picking up the fliers or their bodies. No trace of the men was found and only an oil spot marked the point where the plane went down.

The plane was flying in formation when observers saw smoke begin to issue from it, followed by flames. Laird dropped out of formation and apparently tried to return to shore for an emergency landing. The plane fell near Indian Harbor, 4 miles north of here. Lieut. Jaspar Bell, seeing Laird's difficulty, followed him out of formation and said he saw Laird and Rygwalski get free of their sinking plane and strike out for shore. By the time he could wheel his plane and return to the spot, however, they had disappeared.

The plane was one of those participating in the Army maneuvers under way at Camp Ord.

Jews of Palestine End Festival of Passover

Jerusalem, April 23 (Palcor Agency).—Jews of Palestine tonight observed the last day of Passover, the holiday which commemorates the exodus of the Hebrews from Egypt, while members of their race elsewhere in the world will celebrate another day of the festival.

Though Chief Rabbi Abraham Kook has ruled that Jews buying one dunam (one-fourth acre) of land in Palestine may be regarded as native Palestinian Jews and hence observe only seven days of Passover, thousands of immigrants still follow the custom abroad, observing eight days.

Tonight's services in the synagogues and the musical and dramatic presentations tomorrow in honor of the festival will close a week of celebration.

Cheers Greet Proposal To Oust N.Y. Relief Aids

New York, April 23 (AP).—Cheers greeted the suggestion today that a parade of professional social workers—called by the aldermanic committee investigating relief expenditures of about $18,500,000 monthly—be sent back to the States from which they were imported to fill supervisory jobs on the relief board.

Alderman Edward J. Sullivan said he would again introduce his bill requiring city employes to reside within its boundaries.

Party Frowns On Mugwump Republicans; Hoover Urged To Deny His Candidacy.

By Raymond Clapper

HARD-BOILED Republicans who want a straight-out fight next year are trying to squelch those of their party colleagues who in public utterances continue to flirt with the New Deal.

One such fifty-fifty Republican, so challenged, and asked why he was giving aid and comfort to the Administration, replied that he was misquoted. Newspaper reports of his speech had been prepared from advance copies of his remarks which he had supplied.

Mugwump Republican speeches which devote 20 minutes to condemning the New Deal and 10 minutes to defending it remind one hard-shell of the stubborn Scot who, fighting a losing battle against the union of Scottish churches, said: "It is unconstitutional, impracticable, illogical, and absolutely idiotic, but I hae nae doot it's God's will."

* * * *

Certain Republicans are understood to be urging upon Herbert Hoover that his efforts to revive the party would be more effective if he removed himself unequivocally and publicly as a candidate for the 1936 nomination.

As was stated here some time ago, Mr. Hoover's activities in behalf of the party at present are discounted because of the belief held by many that he is maneuvering to make another try. This impression, at first regarded by party leaders as without foundation, has steadily grown since Mr. Hoover's recent trip East, when he resisted all suggestions that he close the door against his own renomination. Following that his confidential representative here, Lawrence Richey, said that he was receiving thousands of letters, 99 per cent of which urged Mr. Hoover to be a candidate again.

Party leaders are almost unanimously opposed to Mr. Hoover being a candidate again. Until the situation is cleared up definitely, it is likely, as at present, to muddy all Republican discussion.

* * * *

Several Midwestern Republican leaders are gathering at St. Louis to discuss arrangements for holding the proposed Midwestern party rally there. Kansas City, the original proposed location, was criticized on the ground that it might favor the candidacy of Gov Landon of Kansas. Des Moines, another proposed meeting place, was objected to because of the potential candidacy of Senator L. J. Dickinson, of Iowa. Chicago likewise has a presidential possibility, Col. Frank Knox. St. Louis was about the only location in the Midwest that did not have a Republican presidential aspirant lurking in the hall closet ready to leap out and take the visiting Republicans by storm. Party leaders speak of it as "neutral" ground, indicating how much harmony there is under the surface.

* * * *

Meantime, Senator Borah, chopping away at the present party leadership, is conducting extensive correspondence in many States in behalf of an independent Republican meeting, which would be held in Chicago in the late summer or fall.

* * * *

Talk of a Republican-Democratic conservative coalition ticket echoes thin at this stage. While there are numerous Democrats who are vigorously against many Roosevelt policies—men like Glass, Byrd, Ritchie, Al Smith, John W. Davis and Senator Bailey, they are equally opposed to some of the most fundamental Republican policies also.

Conceivably the situation could change so that some one of this type might be persuaded to go on the Republican ticket as a running mate to a Republican presidential candidate. But the chances are much against it. If the Republicans can induce any of this group to indorse their ticket next year they will be getting as much as they could reasonably hope for. Even that crumb of comfort is doubtful.

Democrats who are most opposed to the Roosevelt policies are lifelong Democrats whose roots go deep in the party. They feel their party has been led into dubious fields and their interest is more in restoring their policies rather than in bringing back the Republicans, about whom they said worse things than they have about Mr. Roosevelt.

Huey Long's threat, no doubt, welcome in some Administration quarters, to order Louisiana to secede from the Union and resume her own individual sovereignty, brings up the question as to whether she ever had any.

A certain party contracted to buy a large tract of land situated in Louisiana, subject to abstract showing good title. The abstract of the title was turned over to the purchaser's lawyer for examination. After going over the title the lawyer pronounced it good as far back as it went, but requested a record dating back further than the complete abstract that was furnished.

Herewith is the reply to his request:

Dear Sir:

There are no records or archives available which concern the title to the above-described land any further back than the United States Government.

However, I believe from a historical standpoint, I can enlighten you as to the title in such a way that the objections you have pointed out will be waived.

This land was acquired by the United States Government in 1803 by purchase from France, under what we now refer to as the Louisiana Purchase.

France acquired possession of the land by conquest as the result of a successful war with Spain.

Spain acquired possession of the land by virtue of the fact that a young man in her service by the name of Christopher Columbus, on the twelfth day of October, 1492, discovered it and claimed it for her.

Columbus got his authority for making the aforesaid voyage and discovery from Ferdinand and Isabella, the King and Queen of Spain.

Ferdinand and Isabella got their authority for sponsoring the voyage from the Pope of Rome.

The Pope of Rome got his authority by virtue of the fact that he said he was the Vicar of Christ on Earth.

Christ got his authority by the fact he was the Son of God and GOD CREATED THE EARTH.

Utility Chiefs Ask for Caution In Regulations

Holding Company Bill Result of 'Fraud,' Replies Senator Wheeler.

By the Associated Press.

Electric power officials yesterday branded the Wheeler bill abolishing holding companies a "sentence of death," but in turn heard a charge that the industry's "frauds on the public" had brought the bill into existence.

T. Justin Moore, vice president of the Virginia Light & Power Co., and Louis H. Egan, president of the Union Electric Light & Power Co., of St. Louis, defended holding companies as essential to provide capital and good management for operating power and gas companies affected by the legislation.

Appearing before the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, they denounced the proposed legislation as aimed at the "collapse" of all intermediary power companies, while Moore added that those employed by the various governmental departments to draft the bill "have in mind not merely the correction of abuses, but the promotion of social theories."

"The man who is abolishing holding companies," declared Chairman Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, "is not the soapbox orator denouncing them. It is the man who is perpetrating frauds on the public."

Senator Minton (Democrat), Indiana, joined Wheeler in his view of holding companies, commenting that a "horrible example" was the Insull collapse.

Egan, head of a group of operating companies serving Iowa, Illinois and Missouri with electricity and some gas, agreed frauds should be stopped, but insisted that "in the act of stopping them we ought to be careful not to hurt somebody else."

Both power company officials challenged the right of the Federal Government to step into the regulatory field when, they contended, very little power is transported interstate.

Arguments Heard In McLean Appeal

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, April 23.—An $87,500 judgment awarded to Julius I. Peyser against Edward B. McLean for commissions claimed by Peyser for procuring an offer from David Lawrence, Inc., of $3,000,000 for the franchises and property of The Washington Post, was argued today before the Court of Appeals.

Judge Frank I. Duncan, in the Baltimore County Circuit Court, at Towson, had granted the judgment to Peyser, who contended that the sale of the paper was not consummated because of the "failure, omission and neglect," of McLean. McLean appealed the decision.

Edgar Allan Poe, former attorney general of Maryland, appeared for McLean, while William C. Sullivan, of Washington, and former Federal District Attorney Simon E. Sobeloff argued the case for Peyser.

John W. Doe, Father Of Opera Singer, Killed

Savannah, Ga., April 23 (AP).—John Watson Doe, 71, father of Miss Doris Doe, Metropolitan Opera singer, was killed last night in an automobile accident on the Coastal highway near here. Mr. Doe, Palm Beach (Fla.) druggist and chemist, was en route to Washington to visit a daughter, Mrs. E. C. Black, wife of a captain in the Air Corps.

The auto brushed a truck loaded with scrap iron and Mr. Doe was struck by protruding pieces of the metal. His wife and chauffeur escaped serious injury.

Besides his wife and the two daughters, he is survived by a son, Dudley Doe, orchestra leader. Capt. Black was flying here today from Langley Field to complete funeral arangements.

Lord Tweedmouth Dies In London; Served Army

London, April 23 (AP).—Lord Tweedmouth, 62, former lord in waiting to the King and the son of the second Baron Tweedmouth, who was a lieutenant of Gladstone, died today of pneumonia.

Lord Tweedmouth had a brilliant military record which began with the Household Cavalry in South Africa in 1899 and ended when he retired as a lieutenant-colonel in 1922. He held the Distinguished Service Order.

He once won a bet at Coronado Beach, Calif., that he could walk on his hands up and down a flight of 30 stairs. The wager was a polo pony, which he added to his noted string.

Conferees in House Insisting On D. C. Budget of 40 Millions

however, by the Budget Bureau, and this fact eventually may cause the House members to yield.

Impasse on Hospital.

A third impasse has been reached on the Gallinger Hospital estimates because Senator Royal S. Copeland (Democrat), New York, has taken a personal interest in seeing that the hospital's appropriation was raised even well above the Budget Bureau estimate.

The House cut the Budget Bureau's estimate on Gallinger by $32,300, but the Senate raised the amount $246,042 above the House appropriation, or more than $200,000 above the Budget Bureau figure after Senator Copeland, a physician, had made a personal visit to Gallinger and noted its inadequate staff and facilities.

Regarding the schools, the House reduced the amount for buildings and grounds $140,000 below the Budget Bureau estimate and included only four construction items. The Senate not only restored the items deleted, but added funds for 13 other schools, new and additions, asked by citizens' associations. These will have to be dropped if the present agreement prevails.

May Total $40,000,000.

If the District bill finally emerges from the conference with appropriations approximately the Budget Bureau estimates, it will total about $40,000,000, or nearly $3,750,000 above the House bill and some $2,750,000 under the Senate measure.

The final figures, however, will depend upon the agreement on the Federal contribution, which now varies from $5,700,000 in the House bill to $8,317,500 in the Senate measure.

For the last several years the Senate has been forced to yield finally to the House conferees on this controversial point, but Senator Thomas this year is determined to match obstinacy with obstinacy, and the fight may be prolonged.

Roosevelt Adds Items.

Supplemental estimates for the District amounting to $345,500 were sent to Congress yesterday by President Roosevelt upon recommendation of the Budget Bureau. The appropriations asked are intended to meet unanticipated needs that have arisen during the current fiscal year.

Among the estimates are requests for money for heating schools, made necessary by the long winter this season. Additional appropriations are asked for the District workhouse and reformatory, the jail and the National Training School for Boys because of the increase in costs of food and clothing.

The higher cost of living also is cited in requests for money for the Tuberculosis Hospital, the Children's Tuberculosis Sanatorium and other institutions.

Explaining a request for $4,000 additional for the District Health Department, the Budget Bureau said that an appropriation of $27,783 for prevention of contagious diseases "has been practically exhausted, due in particular to an outbreak of scarlet faver."

Dancer Is Denied A 'Widow's Mite'

Cannot Claim Third of Taylor's Estate.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 23.—A surrogate's ruling today barred Geraldine L. Ott, former Pittsburg, Kan., dancer and singer, from a widow's third share in the $1,250,000 estate of the late Bertrand L. Taylor, sr., whom she contended she married in a common law ceremony.

"Her delay in asserting her status as widow," Surrogate James A. Delehanty ruled, "is cogent evidence of her own knowledge that she did not possess it."

Taylor died in Beverly Hills, Calif., April 6, 1934. His will bequeathing her $10,000 was filed a short time later, and Miss Ott, the daughter of a dentist, sued for the right to election as his widow.

Taylor's children, Bertrand, jr., of New York, and the Countess Di Frasso, of Rome, New York and Hollywood, contested the suit. Surrogate Delehanty's ruling today allowed their petition that the will be admitted to probate.

Thefts of Guns Revealed by U. S.

Figures Show Indirect Arming of Gangs.

The Justice Department yesterday revealed the extent to which the Government has been indirectly arming gangsters—through thefts of firearms from armories and other institutions.

For the 16 months up to April, 164 robberies were reported. The thieves got away with 1,557 pistols, 92 Army rifles, 20 machine guns and 50 other miscellaneous guns.

Besides the recovery of almost half this equipment, the department said that 219 persons have been arrested and 53 cases are being investigated.

May 1 Deadline Set In Foulois Inquiry

Dern Notified of Action by House Group.

By the Associated Press.

The House Military Committee decided yesterday to give the War Department until May 1 to report on its investigation of charges of "gross misconduct and inefficiency" made against Maj. Gen. Benjamin D. Foulois, chief of the Army Air Corps.

The charges were made by the committee, which seeks to oust Foulois from his command. Chairman McSwain (Democrat), of South Carolina, was instructed to inform Secretary Dern that unless a report were submitted by May 1 the committee would summon Maj. Gen. John F. Preston, inspector general, to explain the delay.

After the committee had recommended Foulois' dismissal last June, Dern promised that the inspector general would look into the charges. A few days ago the Secretary said he had not completed the inquiry.

Father Is Charged In Wife's Death

Accusation Against Son Disbelieved by Police.

By the Associated Press.

Greenville, Tex., April 23.—Officers scoffed today at S. P. Darden's story that his wife was killed by a sleepwalking son and filed murder charges against the husband as he wept beside her grave.

Deputy sheriffs hastened to arrest Darden, a Caddo Mills filling station operator, at Clinton, after the funeral services for the attractive 32-year-old woman.

"It would be a physical impossibility for the child to even pull the trigger of the gun," Henry Pharr, State prosecutor, said.

"I can't remember," was all sad-eyed little Jackie Glenn could say.

Darden told the officers that after the shooting he had to shake the boy to awaken him. The father recalled that the boy had played "desperado" with his chums the day before, using wooden guns.

Danube Parley Limited To Austria's Neighbors

Rome, April 23 (AP).—Only the nations which are neighbors of Austria will be invited by France and Italy to the forthcoming Danubian conference, it was said tonight.

It was said, however, that if after the conference gets underway the question of re-armament of Austria, Hungary and Bulgaria comes into the discussion, Rumania also will be invited.

Turkey will not be asked and England will be represented only by an observer.

77½ an Ounce Seen in New Silver Boost

2¼ Cent Increase May Set New Record for White Metal.

was about 10 per cent of the value of the gold stock, whereas the objective was 33 1-3 per cent.

For nine months the Treasury has been energetically buying silver, sweeping clean the bullion stocks held in this country by a nationalization order, and draining silver by purchases from foreign sources, resulting in creating a precarious economic situation for China.

In that nine months the Treasury has acquired approximately 400,000,000 ounces of silver, bringing the country's stock to a monetary value of approximately $1,400,000,000. Since June 19 last, however, the gold stock has increased by $840,786,595, due chiefly to imports, bringing it to a total of $8,675,246,785. Under the silver purchase act policy, that amount of gold would require silver with a monetary value of $2,891,745,595, or $280,258,865 more than was needed when the act was passed.

To summarize the result of the silver operation so far, the Treasury has acquired since June 19 silver with a monetary value of about $550,000,000. An increase in the gold stock has absorbed silver with a monetary value of about $280,000,000, leaving an increase of about $270,000,000 to apply against the original stock. In other words, on June 19 the Treasury needed silver with a monetary value of about $1,760,000,000 to establish a one-to-three ratio with gold. It now needs about $1,490,000,000 to achieve that ratio.

Namely, to bring the monetary value of its silver stocks to a one-to-three ratio with the monetary value of the existing gold stock, the Treasury would have to purchase more than 1,100,000,000 ounces of the white metal.

Volume Too Great.

It is regarded as virtually impossible to acquire such a volume of silver, even at prices far in excess of the statutory price of $1.29 an ounce. Domestic production at present is about 25,000,000 ounces annually. Increased prices may result in that production being doubled, but that would be only 50,000,000 ounces a year.

It has been contended that if China, India and the London silver markets were swept clean of the metal the total acquired would not be more than 650,000,000 ounces. Thus, it appears that under the most favorable circumstances, unless this country starts losing gold rapidly, the one-to-three ratio must be a will-o'-the-wisp.

Treasury purchases have tightened up the world market, decreasing the so-called floating stocks, with the result that the price of the white metal has jumped in remarkable bounds recently and—as long as the Treasury continues to buy—may be expected to continue to do so.

Court Delay Asked In Taft Ruling

By the Associated Press.

The Government has asked a 30-day delay in the Taft Liberty Bond gold case in the United States Court of Claims.

George Sweeney, assistant to the Attorney General, described the move yesterday as nothing out of the ordinary—indicating it was but to give more time for the Government to prepare its answer.

Some observers said the delay might allow Congress time to enact remedial legislation blocking suits of this type.

The Taft claim—which actually involves only $1.07 in any kind of money—could control millions of dollars in called Liberty Bonds and interest, Government officials admit, in case the court ruled his bond coupon had to be paid in the amount of gold for which it called.

It involves a $50 Fourth Liberty Bond bearing 4¼ per cent interest, that was called last April by the Treasury. Refused payment in gold, Charles Taft, of Cincinnati, son of the former President and Chief Justice, elected to keep his bond. Government attorneys say in so doing he forfeits future interest.

Last October, when one of the coupons matured, Taft presented it and was refused payment of $1.07. He then filed suit in the Court of Claims.

House Is Urged To Arm Nation Against Foes

Cary Points to Situation in Europe as Creative of Apprehension.

forces, replacing and rebuilding their armaments, spending untold millions for armies and navies and going to the extent of conscripting soldiers, building the greatest war machines that have ever been built, it is necessary for us to take notice and so prepare ourselves that we may be able to defend this fair land of ours in case an emergency should arise."

Modern Air Corps Urged.

Other world powers, Cary argued, apparently "do not mind military expense" and have refused to follow this country toward disarmament.

"There is only one course to pursue," he declared. "We need a modern air corps and a fleet that is mistress of the seven seas.

"Our safety demands that we build to treaty strength. Had we spent a few million dollars on the Navy in 1914 we would not have been drawn into the World War, thereby saving billions of dollars and thousands of lives."

An appropriations committee report, filed just before Cary began the debate on the measure, pointed out that the Administration asked $29,380,000 to start building the 24 new ships. The committee cut the request in half with the explanation:

"If for reasons deemed to outweigh those here advanced the Administration should elect not to defer construction of such ships, there is nothing in the bill to hinder that course."

A supplemental appropriation, members said, could be obtained for that purpose at the next session.

Included among the new vessels would be an aircraft carrier, two light cruisers, 15 destroyers and six submarines. No capital ships would be started, due to the pact, before January 1, 1937.

Vast Sum Held Needed.

Significance was attached to a prediction in the committee report that after 1941 an appropriation of $550,000,000 a year would be necessary to "properly maintain" the Navy at the strength provided in the 1930 London Treaty.

The committee lambasted as "folly and futility" the former American policy of undertaking relatively little new construction. Comparative figures for the 1922-1930 period showed the United States laid down 21 vessels, Great Britain 86 and Japan 125.

Adequate substitutes for tin "in time of war" would prove of "prime importance," it was reported by the Foreign Affairs Committee. Chairman McReynolds said he would press for approval of the recommendations of his committee, including:

"1. The establishment and declaration of a general policy with respect to certain materials essential to industry and the national defense, in which our natural resources are either deficient or not sufficiently developed.

"2. The creation of a special agency of the Government with powers and duties appropriate to the carrying out of the policy declared.

New Tin Policy Outlined.

"3. The relief of the tin situation by certain specific applications of the declared policy, namely:

"(a) To discourage the importation of metallic tin and encourage the importation of tin ores for the purpose of establishing an American tin-smelting industry.

"b. To cause to be made a systematic and exhaustive search and survey for the purpose of establishing an American tin-smelting industry.

"(c) To cause to be made a systematic and exhaustive research for substitutes for tin.

"(d) To provide for some prohibition of the exportation of tin-bearing scrap from time to time and under certain conditions."

Areas to Be Considered.

The war maneuvers, the first of consequence since the World War, will bring together 50,000 regular Army and National Guard troops from Pine Camp, N. Y., and Mount Gretna, Pa., from August 17 to 31. Included in the Mount Gretna concentration will be the Twenty-ninth Division of the National Guard, made up of District, Virginia and Maryland units.

Under the bill to set up new strategic air bases, the War Department would be required to consider the Atlantic northeast, Atlantic southeast and Caribbean area, the Southeastern States, the Pacific northwest, Alaska and the Rocky Mountain region.

"In the passage of this bill," the House Military Committee declared, "we will sho wthe world that we are prepared to defend ourselves against air attack and thus so discourage attack as to render it practically certain there will be no such attack.

"It is impossible to depict in language the destruction of life and property that might result from an air attack against this Nation unless we are fully prepared to defend ourselves."

Representative Wilcox (Democrat), of Florida, author of the bill, put into the record tentative War Department estimates that the new bases would cost $54,262,750 and improvements to old bases $52,733,100. Among the latter was Langley Field, $4,370,000.

Mrs. Meyer expressed her appreciation of this action on the part of the trustees of the Corcoran Art Gallery in the name of the directors of the Greater Washington Art Exhibit.

"The approval of Mr. Minnigerode and the trustees of Corcoran Art Gallery is the greatest possible encouragement to our board," Mrs. Meyer said. "I am sure that the merchants who have so generously co-operated in developing the plan will also be stimulated to increased efforts by such official recognition of the value of their work to the community. We are all deeply grateful."

Space Now Problem.

Mrs. Meyer said yesterday the exhibition committee is now coping with the problem of finding space for all the many pictures which are being held in reserve at two or three of the department store galleries. In some cases, she said, the stores make room for the extra paintings, but wherever this may prove to be impossible the pictures will be placed in some other appropriate exhibition hall.

All of the exhibition halls were crowded again yesterday, the second day of the exhibition. The sale of pictures continued promisingly, it was reported. Throughout the week the same branches of the District Federation of Women's Clubs which have been acting as hostesses will continue in that capacity.

Ethiopia Accord Reply Considered by Italy

Rome, April 23 (AP)—The Ethiopian reply to an Italian note to Addis Ababa agreeing to conciliation of the East African border difficulties which have strained relations between Ethiopia and Italy was received today and is under consideration.

The terms of the note were not revealed, but it was said they are generally favorable and that undoubtedly a commission of conciliation will be appointed. When and where it will meet has not been decided, but both Cairo and Athens have been mentioned.

Army Training Decreed For Chinese Students

Nanking, China, April 23 (AP).—All male high school and college students were ordered today to undergo at least a year's period of intensive military training.

Chiang Kai-Shek, generalissimo of the Nationalist government's armies, issued the order as part of a program designed to construct a modern, efficient war machine.

At the expiration of a decade, the general expects that China will have become a first rate military power able to cope with any situation. He seeks 100,000 trained reservists each year.

that the Williamsport school authorities, in contracts with bus companies, required a full stop at grade crossings. He said that he had never heard of such requirements.

Judge Says He's Guilty.

In holding Line for the grand jury, Judge DeLashmutt said:

"I say he is guilty of negligence. It is up to the grand jury to say whether he is guilty of gross negligence."

Line, a hollow-eyed, partly bald little man, was apparently stunned by the decision. According to Robert B. Peter, jr., his attorney, he has been unable to sleep or eat since the tragedy.

Earlier in the day, Miss Louise Funk, Williamsport teacher, who had shepherded the students on their ill-fated journey, had testified that Line had no warning of the approach of the train.

She said she heard neither the whistle nor the bell of the locomotive. Six students who survived the crash corroborated her testimony.

Children Support Driver.

The railroad attorneys put on several witnesses, men and women, living in the vicinity of the railroad crossing, who said they heard the whistle of the train distinctly.

Attorney Peter, in pleading for the release of Line, said:

"I think the greatest tribute to Mr. Line is the fact that the children who survived that tragedy and the parents of those who lost their lives have stood by him."

But Judge DeLasmutt felt that Line ought to have halted his bus before crossing the tracks, and so held him.

300,000 Women Sign To Vote in Philippines

Manila, April 23 (AP).—The interest of Filipino women in politics—they will cast their first votes soon—is exactly six times what the men thought it would be. And they had to tell how old they were to prove it.

Reports today at the close of special registration indicated that more than 300,000 have qualified to vote May 14 in the plebiscite on ratification of the constitution for the forthcoming commonwealth. Department of Interior officials at Washington had predicted a maximum of 50,000.

The showing elated women leaders, who are bearing in mind that after the commonwealth is established, the women must muster at least 300,000 votes in a special plebiscite if they are to retain their right to suffrage.

Railroad Head Scores U. S. Ownership Move

Utica, N. Y., April 23 (AP)—Proposals for government ownership and operation of railroads were attacked tonight by Frederick E. Williamson, president of the New York Central Lines, before the Utica Chamber of Commerce.

Williamson said government ownership would "intensify sharply the present staggering financial strain upon the American people" and would immediately add $21,000,000,000 to the public debt. Added to that, he said, would be $500,000,000 a year to make up operating deficits and to offset the loss of state and local taxes.

Crawford Named Lumber Code Head

New York Engineer to Administer Compact.

The National Industrial Recovery Board yesterday appointed Col. C. H. Crawford as forest products administrator to be in charge of the lumber code and of codes for allied products. The appointment was described as a step to promote speedy and effective administration of the lumber code.

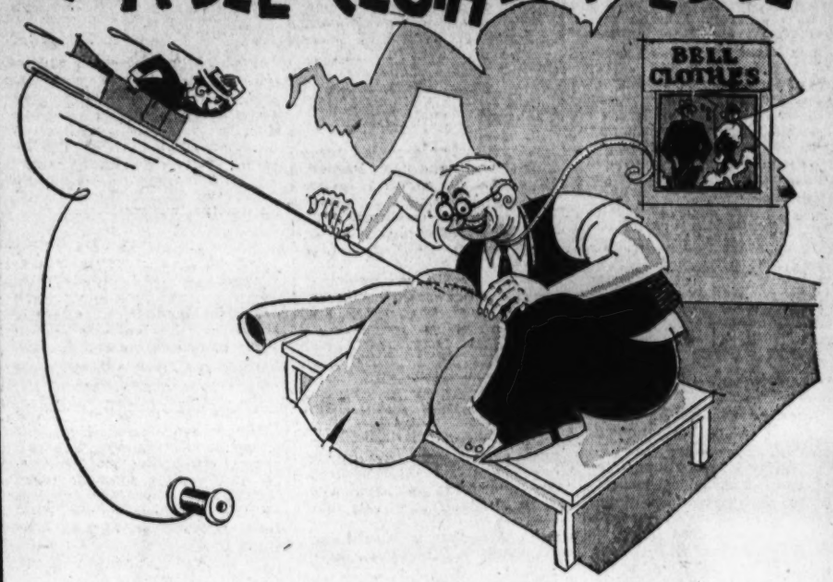
The appointment follows the controversy resulting from the Government's action in dropping the Belcher case, in which NRA had been declared unconstitutional by a Federal Court. After the action had been protested, NRA promised revision of the code.

The order appointing Crawford authorized him to exercise the powers and functions heretofore vested in the NRA board in connection with the lumber code. Col. Crawford is a New York consulting engineer. He has been with NRA since February.

Ten More Pastors Arrested.

Sachsenberg, Germany, April 23 (AP). Ten leading Confessional Synod ministers were arrested today for signing a letter to Martin Mutschmann, governor of Saxony, attacking German Christian activities. The arrests today brought to 14 the number of dissident pastors headed for concentration camps.

FROM THE "RUMBLE SEAT" OF A BELL CLOTHES NEEDLE



A TALENTED, cheerful craftsman sits at a bench. In his lap lies an unfinished suit of Bell Clothes. Let's hop into the rumble seat of the needle he holds and see what happens on the inside. Watch carefully now.

Very deftly he shapes the collar—stitch by stitch—piece by piece—he fondles it, almost, so proud is he of his work. Next, knowing fingers move to the sleeves. With flawless, painstaking motion they achieve perfection.

There, you have several scenes from the long reel that would unfold itself if you could follow the Bell needle through an entire garment. But these scenes tell you, very eloquently, why Bell is the BIG name to the man who would ordinarily pay $30, $35 or more for his clothing. We stick to quality and our customers stick to us!

Hundreds Dead In Iran Quake; Shocks Persist

Teheran Dispatches Report 600 Dead; Thousands Hurt, 3 Towns Razed.

By the Associated Press.

Teheran, Iran, April 23.—A series of earth shocks rocking northern Iran (Persia) since April 12 continued tonight after killing an undetermined number of persons and doing unestimated damage.

Reports from Mazanderan Province said 483 persons died in that division alone. Lack of communications facilities prevented any accurate survey of the devastated regions.

[Dispatches from Teheran published in Paris said 600 persons were reported killed and thousands injured in the Iran quakes, which destroyed the towns of Dodangueh, Tchadangueh and Lezard-Jarib, and caused widespread panic. The Paris advices said the quakes, continuing, were impeding rescue efforts, racking buildings as rescuers penetrated them in search of victims.]

The Iran press reported the heaviest damage was done at Suleda, where many buildings were destroyed and most of the populace left homeless.

The undersecretary of domestic affairs left Teheran to take charge of relief activities.

Formosa Relief Work Taxes Agencies to Limit

By the Associated Press.

Taihoku, Formosa, April 23.—Agencies of mercy were taxed to the limit today in rushing supplies of food, water and medical necessities to the distant sections of the island where survivors of Sunday's earthquake were in sore need.

While the scarcity of water in one part of the island lent terror to the populace, people in another section were imperilled by flood possibilities.

Tropical heat brought suffering to many whose homes were destroyed in the series of shocks which cost at least 3,152 lives and left more than 10,000 injured.

Pipe lines lay in ruins and reservoir waters were poured to waste by the quakes. Hasty repairs of railway lines enabled relief workers and physicians to get to the interior.

Surveys showed that approximately 2,000 square miles inhabited by 250,000 persons were laid in waste.

The Tansu River was close to the flood stage. Heavy tropical rains have been falling in recent weeks.

The Japanese destroyer Shimakaze reached Byoritsu with a cargo of supplies.

New Hitler Attack On League Is Seen

Der Fuehrer in Mountain Home, Framing Note.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, April 23.—Adolf Hitler's next move on the chessboard of European diplomacy tonight was known only to himself. A spokesman at the foreign office—the same spokesman who predicted Hitler's brief note last week sternly rejecting League of Nations condemnation of Germany's re-armament—said "an additional reply" was likely.

This further statement, he said he believed, would "pick the Geneva resolution to pieces in detail and * * * restate our position."

This official, however, admitted he based his belief merely on probabilities, asserting no one in Berlin knew what Der Fuehrer was working out at his mountain home at Hauswachenfeld.

At the foreign office, meanwhile, it was learned Undersecretary Bernard W. von Buelow has been putting out feelers as to how Prince Ernst von Starhemberg's recent visit to Rome may be reconciled with the oft-proclaimed idea of nonintervention in Austria. The Austrian vice chancellor and Fascist leader conferred with Premier Benito Mussolini last week.

Church Editors to Hear Talk on Birth Control

Birth control as a problem of the whole community will be discussed today before the Editorial Council of the Religious Press by Dr. Hannan M. Stone, medical director of the Birth Control Clinical Research Bureau of New York.

The Editorial Council, holding its annual meeting at the Wardman Park Hotel, is composed of editors of Protestant religious journals. Its chairman is Dr. Paul S. Leinbach, editor of the Reformed Church Messenger. Dan B. Brummitt, editor of the Central Christian Advocate, is vice chairman, and the Rev. Samuel McCrea, of the Federal Council Bulletin, is secretary.

So far only men have been moved with most of their equipment to follow.

These seasoned troops probably will be used chiefly to train the new recruits, flocking to the colors from all over the country.

From every city, town and hamlet, from farm and factory, the youths came, to serve 18 months, in uniform instead of 12, as before. The period of service was extended to make up the shortage in youths of military service age, due to the drop in births during the lean World War years of 1914-18.

$20,000 Allotted To Navy Building

A $20,000 allotment to alter and repair the Navy Building was announced yesterday by the Public Works Administration, along with an allotment of $4,200 to make soundproof the Signal Corps' radio room in the Munitions Building.

The grant of $30,000 to Dickinson County, Va., for school building construction and alteration was reduced to $22,600. The loan and grant of $160,000 for a municipal light and power plant in Culpeper, Va., was increased to $162,100.

Other increases included: Moneta, Va., grant of $20,600 for a new school building, raised to $22,800; Montgomery County, Va., grant of $7,000 for a new school, increased to $7,400.

No NRA Discord, Word On Marshall Incident

Everything is lovely within the NRA, in spite of the fact that the name of one of the board members, Leon C. Marshall, last week appeared on a statement of the Brookings Institution declaring that NRA was retarding recovery.

This "harmony" statement is made on no less an authority than an office memorandum sent to NRA employes yesterday by Donald R. Richberg, NRA board chairman.

Repeating his previous statement that Marshall furnished only factual material for the Brookings report, Richberg added he was making the announcement to stop "the spread of unfounded rumors of any disagreement or misunderstanding between Dr. Marshall and the other members of the National Industrial Recovery Board."

NRA Favors Price Level Set By Competition

Barriers to Fairness Must Be Eradicated, Policy States.

The NRA in a statement of price policies yesterday said that "the goal sought is the establishment of conditions under which in a free and open market competition may determine a fair price."

At the same time the NRA board declared that a price policy should "not be perverted by such influences as ignorance, malice, deception or collusion."

"Such barriers to the effective operation of competition must be removed," it declared.

Exceptions Seen in New Law.

Explaining the statement, W. A. Harriman, administrative officer, said he did not expect major code changes to result before enactment of the new NRA law. He said there would likely be exceptions for certain industries even under the new law.

Speaking of the general objectives of price policy, the board said:

"It must promote fairness between the parties to an industry and make its contribution to the betterment of the standard of living. A control of production is inevitable under any industrial system. A long experience has led us to leave that problem to the open market.

"In a few industries, in which competition has proved unusually disorderly, it may be necessary to intervene to bring production into line with demand, but such intervention should avoid 'restriction of output' and should aim at the kind of equation between production and consumption as the market is supposed to effect.

Economy of Plenty Held Aim.

"The strategy of policy must find expression in a multitude of decisions. But its end is single—an economy not of scarcity, but of plenty."

Discussing open price filing, the board said:

"The essential characteristics of an open price provision of a code in conformity with the newly announced policy state that the prices be genuinely available to all customers and members of the industry, and that the prices filed are actual sales prices."

The board declared that waiting periods before filed prices may become effective have been found inadvisable as a general rule. The board declared "the burden of proof is upon the industry which wishes to employ it."

"Open price filing can not be indiscriminately applied to the entire range of American industry," the board said.

Cabinet Group Calls Hearing In Cotton Row

New England Congressmen to Offer Relief Plans Tomorrow.

By the United Press.

A sub-committee of the Cabinet group appointed by President Roosevelt to study the problems confronting the cotton textile industry yesterday arranged a hearing for New England Representatives tomorrow.

The hearing was arranged by Assistant Secretary of Commerce John Dickinson, who told Representative William P. Connery (Democrat), Massachusetts, that the sub-committee would be glad to hear congressional recommendations. Connery said the group might be accompanied by cotton textile manufacturers.

At the same time, a charge in the House by Representative Allen J. Treadway (Republican), of Massachusetts, that the committee was "stacked" against the industry and might as well have been a "committee of Japanese textile manufacturers" brought forth a counter-attack from Representative Lindsay Warren (Democrat), of North Carolina, who charged the textile agitation is part of an organized campaign against the AAA program.

Action Demanded.

Other New England Republican Congressmen rallied in opposition to the cotton processing tax and in support of a high tariff on textile imports.

Representative Joseph W. Martin (Republican), Massachusetts, criticized the Administration for spending billions of dollars to build up the national defense while "permitting our defense to be undermined through destruction of our industrial fabric."

Representative Edith Nourse Rogers (Republican), Massachusetts, demanded "immediate action" to relieve the industry's situation, and said "there is something radically wrong when not one mill but several close within a week."

Dickinson revealed it would take the Cabinet sub-committee at least three weeks to compile available data relative to the textile industry.

Martin told the House that he hopes to lead a group of approximately 50 Congressmen to the White House in an effort to speak directly to President Roosevelt on behalf of the industry.

Sees Ruination.

Senator Jesse H. Metcalf (Republican), Rhode Island, charged in a speech last night that the Administration's cotton program "is bringing ruination to both the cotton grower and the cotton manufacturer" in three ways:

1. Pegging cotton prices by the Administration's loan policy has caused a decrease of cotton exports to foreign countries.

2. The processing tax and the loan policy have caused prices of manufactured cotton to rise so high as to decrease the domestic market for cotton textile products.

3. Resultant price rises have caused an increase in importations of cheap textile products from other countries, notably the Orient.

"The Secretary of Agriculture is attempting to pull a smoke screen over the true facts," Metcalf charged. "He declares that importations are relatively small and unimportant. Any man with even a little business experience knows that small importations of cheap articles can set up a price standard which the American manufacturer must meet."

Metcalf, author of a bill to repeal cotton processing taxes, declared that the country is in dire need of an emergency program to provide immediate relief rather than a long-range plan designed primarily for future years.

Detective Is Wounded By Accidental Shot

A motherly admonition to remove his service revolver from the reach of their 6-year-old daughter, Shirley, was the indirect cause of the accidental shooting late yesterday of First Precinct Detective John K. Baker. His condition is not serious.

Baker was lying on a bed in his home, 829 Quincy street northwest, when his wife, Dorothy, asked him to remove the gun from the top of the bureau.

As he placed the gun in a drawer under his left shoulder, it was discharged. A bullet struck under his armpit. He is in Garfield Hospital.

100 YEARS of Government Failure IN BUSINESS

THOMAS A. EDISON, that great genius of the electric industry, declared in 1929:

"There is far more danger in public monopoly than there is in private monopoly, for when the government goes into business it can always shift its losses to the taxpayers. If it goes into the power business it can pretend to sell cheap power and then cover up its losses.

"The government never really goes into business, for it never makes ends meet. And that is the first requisite of business. It just mixes a little business with a lot of politics and no one ever gets a chance to find out what is actually going on."

The best that students of the subject have been able to find out about what has gone on in some of the government ventures into business is the following sad story:

FEDERAL PROJECTS	STARTED	ENDED	RESULT
U. S. Shipping Board	1916	——	Operating loss 1922-1933 about $255,000,000.
Alaska Railroad	1923	——	Deficit $8,948,000 from 1924 to 1934
Reclamation and Irrigation	1902	——	Payments by water users less than interest on U. S. investment
Inland Waterways Corp.	1924	——	Failed by $7,000,000 to earn interest and taxes on own investment
STATE PROJECTS
South Carolina—Charlestown to Columbia State Road	1823	1829	Tolls $100,000 less than expenses
Ohio—Highway development	1836	1842	Loss of $2,000,000
Virginia—James River and Kanawha Canal	1823	1860	Loss $7,200,000. Abandoned
Pennsylvania—Canal System	1826	1858	Loss of $57,825,000
Pennsylvania—Portage R. R.	1831	1857	Sold at sacrifice before completion
Illinois—Meredosia Springfield R. R	1837	1847	Cost $1,000,000, but abandoned
Indiana—Madison Lafayette R. R	1831	1843	Loss $1,600,000
Michigan Southern R. R.	1837	1846	Sold for less than half of cost
Bank of State of Alabama	1820	1857	Became insolvent. Loss $14,000,000
Florida—The Union Bank	1833	1840	Failed. State assumed $9,000,000 debt which it later repudiated
Bank of State of Illinois	1823	1843	$2,000,000 State debt incurred later repudiated
Mississippi—Planters Bank of Natchez	1830	1837	Collapsed. State assumed $2,000,000 debt, which it later repudiated
RECENT STATE ACTIVITIES
Rehabilitation of N. Y. State Canal System	1903	——	$286,702,000 spent by July 1931 on Barge Canal—tonnage now less than third of 1877-1882 average
North Dakota
State Flour Mill	1919	1923	$80,000 operating loss. Now idle
Home Builders Association	1919	1923	Estimated loss $424,000
Bank of North Dakota	1919	——	Operating loss $1,041,000 from 1919-1933
South Dakota	1918	1933
State Loan System, State Insurance, Cement Plant, Coal Mine, Surety Bonding Bureau, Guarantee of Bank Deposits, Retail Gasoline Business, etc.			Capital loss $1,750,000; operating loss $5,500,000. Ultimate loss estimated $20,000,000 to $35,000,000 In 1930 S. D. public debt $82.23 per capita, highest in U. S.

(These facts are mainly from "Government Experimentation in Business" by Warren M. Persons, published by John Wiley & Sons, Inc.

"There are very few exceptions to the generalization that state and federal business undertakings have been business failures. That is to say, ventures that were planned to be self-supporting and self-liquidating have, in fact, not been so. Deficits have meant recourse to taxpayers, except in those cases in which states have repudiated their debts." This is Dr. Persons' conclusion to his study of "Government Experimentation in Business."

THE WHEELER-RAYBURN BILL now pending in Congress means more government in business. It places local electric companies engaged in interstate commerce (and this includes about 91% of all local electric companies) under distant control from Washington. This control is so severe that it is practically management of even the details of these companies' business. Actual government ownership and operation of local companies may well result from the destruction of utility holding companies which the bill proposes.

The bill contains one outrageous provision to which little attention has been given. It provides that if in the judgment of the Securities and Exchange Commission any public utility holding company is insolvent or unable to pay its debts, the Commission may start proceedings for the reorganization of such company under Section 77B of the Bankruptcy Act. It also provides that in any such proceeding the court must, upon the Commission's request, appoint the latter as sole trustee.

Here is an opportunity for the government through the Securities and Exchange Commission to acquire, without compensation, the control, management, and even virtual ownership, of such holding companies and their subsidiaries.

OPPOSE WHEELER-RAYBURN BILL

If you want less government in business, less taxes, and more recovery, urge your Representatives and Senators to vote against the Wheeler-Rayburn Bill and all other similar legislation. Ask them to tell you promptly of their attitude on the bill.

Publishers Cite Business Gains At Conference

Small Dailies Unanimous in Hailing Upturn; Noyes Reelected.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 23.—Cheering news of the past year in the business and circulation offices of small American newspapers found expression today in discussions of publishers at sessions preliminary to the forty-ninth annual convention of the American Newspaper Publishers Association.

In floor discussions of affairs of importance bearing upon the small newspaper publisher, and in informal out-of-session exchange of views, items of increased circulation and advertising sounded an optimistic note. Among the speakers there was none who reported bad business.

Early attendance figures showed an increase over those of last year, 460 members having registered to date, in comparison with fewer than 400 for last year's convention.

Davis to Open Session.

Howard Davis, president of the A. N. P. A. and business manager of the New York Herald-Tribune, will deliver the president's opening address tomorrow preliminary to all-day discussions on the code for the daily newspaper publishing business. Non-members and interested publishers have been invited to participate in code discussions.

Tomorrow's principal speakers are to be Col. R. R. McCormick, of the Chicago Tribune, on "Freedom of the Press"; John Stewart Bryan, publisher of the Richmond (Va.) News Leader, "Newspapers and Propaganda," and Verne Joy, publisher of the Centralia (Ill.) Sentinel and retiring president of the Inland Press Association, "Newspaper Promotion."

Arthur Ryan, Holyoke (Mass.) Transcript, reported to the small newspaper publishers' gathering of the inauguration of a Saturday tabloid by the Transcript. Its effect was highly successful, he said, in increasing reader interest, increasing advertising revenue and for its "tonic effect" upon the Transcript editorial staff.

Adverse Reception Vanishes.

The Transcript, publishing full size five days a week, was adversely received in tabloid form on Saturday by the public at first, Ryan said, but after a year of appearance it has now proven to be a popular Transcript addition.

A similar tabloid feature—an eight-page tabloid comic for Thursday publication—resulted in a 14 per cent increase in the circulation of the Dallas News and Journal since January 1, Ted Dealey, of the News and Journal, stated.

E. Arthur Sweeney, of the Greensburg (Pa.) Review Tribune, found his reader interest strengthened by the adoption of "newspaper prestige week," while both L. B. Costello, of the Lewiston (Me.) Sun and Evening Journal, and Raymond B. Bottom, of the Newport News (Va.) Press and Times Herald, found that increased local picture services were having results in increased advertising and circulation.

Public Duty Emphasized.

The duty and special requirements of the newspaper in a small town were outlined to the session at its opening by E. H. Harris, publisher of the Richmond (Ind.) Palladium-Item, chairman of the small-newspaper special session.

"The intrinsic difference between the large and the small newspaper," he said, "is to be found at the point where neighborly interests lose their reader value. So long as we cater to a citizenry that is interested in and demands neighborly news, we continue to be a small newspaper . . .

"Within this class must rest the future welfare of the country because its members control State and national legislative bodies. As publishers of newspapers in these communities, we are charged with the responsibility of enlightening our readers and keeping them emotionally stable during confused periods, such as is the one through which we are passing. This is a responsibility which we have assumed and one which we can not sidestep."

Noyes Is Re-elected.

The board of directors of the Associated Press, in its organization meeting today, re-elected Frank B. Noyes, publisher of the Washington Star, as president.

W. J. Pape, Waterbury (Conn.) Republican, was elected first vice president, and Houston Harte, San Angelo (Tex.) Standard, was elected second vice president.

Other officers re-elected were Kent Cooper, secretary; Jackson S. Elliott, assistant secretary, and J. R. Youatt, treasurer.

Mr. Noyes, Robert McLean, of the Philadelphia (Pa.) Bulletin; Paul Patterson, of the Baltimore Sun; E. Lansing Ray, of the St. Louis Globe Democrat, and Clark Howell, of the Atlanta Constitution, were continued as members of the executive committee.

Stuart H. Perry, of the Adrain (Mich.) Daily Telegram, was named to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Adolph S. Ochs, of the New York Times.

Driving While Drunk Charged.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., April 23.—Lee Canby and W. H. Brown were arrested yesterday on charges of driving while intoxicated. Canby posted bond for appearance for trial before a county magistrate. Brown's case will be disposed of in city police court.

Walker to Be Works Unit Head And Returned as Chief of NEC

necessary, such study will be obtained from the regular Government departments best qualified for the work. A preliminary comparison of the usefulness of all of these plans will be made by the division and the plans themselves will then be segregated to conform with the relief, which in turn will be based on the number of unemployed persons within a proper geographical area.

Many Projects Studied.

"As fast as these plans are cleared through the division they will be submitted to a works allotment board, the details of which will be announced in a few days. It is worth noting that a very large number of projects already have been studied and reported on by the various governmental agencies during the past six months. These projects are ready for delivery to this new division for clearance.

"The other principal function of this new division will be to act as an information service on the disposition of projects which have been submitted and, in the case of projects which have been approved and on which work has been begun, as the source of information on the progress of work on such projects."

The announcement said Walker will take over his new duties today.

The President's announcement revealed only a small part of plans for the works set-up. The allotments board, which the President has described as a "round table" organization, is expected to be a rather large organization and may include individuals outside the Government. Weeks ago it was announced that Gen. Robert E. Wood, president of Sears, Roebuck & Co., would serve in an advisory capacity.

Some Overlapping.

Personnel of the three proposed works groups necessarily will overlap. The National Emergency Council is composed of the President, all members of the Cabinet and the heads of all emergency organizations. Some of these department heads are expected to be members of the allotment board and many of them, particularly Secretary Ickes, Harry L. Hopkins, emergency relief administrator, and Robert Fechner, director of emergency conservation work, are expected to have much to do with spending the money. The other member of the group of chief spenders, Rexford G. Tugwell, Undersecretary of Agriculture, is not a member of the Emergency Council.

Drafting of Walker to assist in the works program had not been generally forecast. While the President had indicated he planned to form an allotment board, he had not given previous indication of his plans for the application division. Since the beginning of the Administration Walker has been a frequent visitor at the White House and frequently has conferred with the President since his resignation as head of the Emergency Council.

Hopkins Called In.

The White House announcement followed a meeting of the National Emergency Council with the President. After the session Richberg said he was planning to "go in hiding" for 10 days while he prepared the NRA case he will present to the Supreme Court. Shortly before the announcement was made Hopkins was called to the White House and conferred with the President for half an hour.

Meanwhile, Secretary Ickes intimated he would begin conferences soon with union labor leaders looking to a revision downward of the PWA wage scale. At the same time he announced a number of grants from PWA funds.

Ickes would not comment on the speech in the Senate Monday of Senator Huey Long, in which he called the Secretary of the Interior a "Chicago chinch bug." Asked if Long had carrie dout his threat to "pin Ickes' ears back," the Secretary merely wiggled his ears with his hands to show they were attached normally.

Proposals Discussed.

At the White House several callers discussed specific works proposals.

Representatives Thomas H. Cullen and Christopher D. Sullivan (Democrats), of New York, conferred with the President on a proposal for allotment of $20,000,000 to start a Sixth avenue subway project. The completed project would cost from $80,000,000 to $100,000,000.

Undersecretary Tugwell discussed with the President the proposed tree-shelter belt in the West.

Secretary of War Dern went over with the President plans for a trans-Florida canal.

A delegation from Waycross, Ga., presented a proposal for a road through the Okeefeenokee swamp.

A group from Texas, headed by Lieut. Gov. Walter Woodul, discussed a plan for a $5,000,000 dam and hydroelectric plant on the Brazos River. The delegation was accompanied by Representatives James P. Buchanan, O. H. Cross and Luther A. Johnson, all of Texas.

Danville Granted $87,200 for School

PWA Reduces Front Royal Loan to $9,900.

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Ickes yesterday changed a PWA loan and grant to Danville, Va., of $319,500 for school buildings to a grant of $87,200. He said the city had sold its bonds privately.

For the same reason he reduced the loan and grant of $35,000 to Front Royal, Va., for a municipal building to a grant of $9,900.

Two More Candidates Seek Riverdale Offices

Two new candidates for public office appeared in Riverdale, Md., last night just before the deadline for filing notices of intention to run in the election on May 6. The last-minute candidates are Harry A. Barker, who will seek to be mayor, and Dr. R. A. Bennett, who will run for councilman from the fifth ward.

At the same elections, the town will decide whether it wants its tax rate raised from 25 to 30 cents to pay for garbage collection.

U. S. Witnesses Trace Ransom In BremerTrial

Prosecution Seeks to Link 7 Suspects With Kidnap Cash.

By the Associated Press.

St. Paul, April 23.—The Government today finished its fingerprint testimony and began its effort to convict seven defendants in the Edward G. Bremer kidnap case of handling part of the $200,000 ransom money.

George Heisey, assistant district attorney, offered in evidence serial numbers of the ransom bills. Several Federal agents testified the numbers were obtained from the American National Bank, where the ransom was prepared, sent to Washington and then distributed to various banks in the Chicago district.

Of the seven accused of passing ransom bills, John J. McLaughlin, is a former Chicago politician, and William Vidler, Philip Delany and James J. Wilson are from that city. The other three the Government has accused in this particular phase of the kidnap plot are Oliver Berg, Joliet, Ill., prison convict; Jess Doyle, Kansas City, and Edna Murray, the "kissing bandit."

Betty I. Baerwald, who was employed as a maid at the home of Harry Sawyer, reputed "finger man" in the abduction, said she had seen Fred Barker, slain brother of Arthur "Doc" Barker, and William Weaver, a fugitive under indictment in the case, at Sawyer's home here late in 1933.

Earlier in the day, Aaron Kohn, Washington, fingerprint expert who yesterday testified he found the print of "Doc" Barker's index finger on a gasoline can discarded near Portage, Wis., a few hours before Bremer was freed, continued his exposition of similarity on 14 points of the print found on the tin and Barker's finger print.

Kilmarnock Levy $1, Double That of 1934

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Kilmarnock, Va., April 23.—At a meeting of the own council of Kilmarnock the levy was set at $1. The levy for previous years was 50 cents. An amendment proposing a levy of 80 cents was defeated.

Members of the council thought it advisable to increase the tax levy to take care of a deficit, which has been increasing for the past few years. R. H. Chilton is mayor.

have pointed out, they will be attached to that bill.

Morgenthau's 400-word statement, read from prepared manuscript, placed squarely before Congress the responsibility of raising money to pay for any elaboration of the President's legislative program. He declined to go into merits of individual bills pending before the committee.

"The Treasury is, however, deeply interested in any problems which involve additional or earlier expenditure of public funds than those for which careful preparation has already been made in budget and financing plans," he told the committee.

"I believe it is true of all the so-called bonus settlement plans which you have had under consideration that each one of them calls for greater or earlier payments from the Treasury than were contemplated in the original adjusted service certificate plan and payments during the fiscal year 1936 for which no provision has been made in the budget of that year."

Despite the Treasury's warning, representatives of the two large former service organizations continued to plug for cash payment—the American Legion, for the Vinson bill; the Veterans of Foreign Wars, for the Patman plan. Representative Wright Patman, of Texas, author of the latter, insisted the budget "will not be affected" by his bill.

Town Commissioner 14 Years Defeated

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Thurmont, Md., April 23.—H. D. Beachley, for 14 years a town commissioner, was defeated at the annual municipal election yesterday by Clayton Creeger. The vote was Creeger, 48; Beachley, 39. Samuel B. Bennett, incumbent, was reelected, receiving 74 out of 83 votes cast. William J. Stoner, mayor for nearly 13 years, was reelected without opposition.

Municipal elections will be held at Emmitsburg, Mount Airy, Walkersville and Woodsboro next month. Emmitsburg, where a fight is on over a proposed bond issue of $10,000 for a sewerage disposal plant, will elect May 7. While no candidates have appeared, Micheal J. Thompson, burgess, has indicated he will seek reelection. One commissioner also will be elected.

Filer-Horner Nuptials Held in Frostburg, Md.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frostburg, Md., April 23.—Miss Harriet Filer, daughter of John Filer, and Merrill Horner, of Greensburg, Pa., were married Sunday by the Rev. Lewis B. Browne, rector of St. John's Episcopal Church. The attendants were Miss Grace Filer, sister of the bride, and O. Horner, brother of the bridegroom.

Mr. Horner, a graduate of Juniata College, holds a Government position in Washington, where the couple will live. Mrs. Horner, a graduate of Beall High School, has been a resident of Washington for several years, where she has been a nurse since her graduation from Sibley Memorial Hospital.

Officials Renamed At Westminster

3 Councilmen Returned for 2-Year Terms.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Westminster, Md., April 23.—Joseph L. Mathias, Walter H. Davis and Frank Shaeffer were reelected as local councilmen for two-year terms at a public meeting here last night.

John H. Cunningham, banker, warned the officials against increasing the tax rate, as the local sewerage project, now nearing completion, had necessitated an increase of 28 cents in the tax rate last year.

D. Eugene Walsh, city counsel, reporting on the sewerage construction, presented a financial statement showing the project, including repaving of the streets, will cost approximately $278,000, or $19,000 less than the sum derived from the sale of bonds and a Federal grant.

It also was reported negotiations are under way to have the State road commission take over the main thoroughfares here, but that action was being deferred until the new commission is organized.

FDIC Shows U. S. Absorbing Loans by Banks

3-Billion Increase Is Noted in 6-Month Period, Dec. 31.

By the Associated Press.

Figures that showed Government securities absorbing one-quarter of all assets and more than one-third of all loans and investments of Federally insured banks yesterday were made public by the Deposit Insurance Corporation.

They listed the condition as of December 31, of 14,137 institutions whose total assets of $46,439,270,000 represented an increase in a six-month period of $3,003,482,000. Present-day figures were not available, but officials said they were inclined to the belief that Federal borrowing today was taking more, rather than less, of the banks' assets.

Evidencing the vital part played by Government securities in the banking business were compilations by the FDIC showing that the $11,712,894,000 invested in this paper on December 31, was 36 per cent of all loans and investments by the insured banks. Included in the compilation was every commercial bank except 1,058 small State institutions.

The corporation's report, which covered 5,462 National banks, 980 State banks which are Federal Reserve members, and 7,695 non-member State banks, showed that loans and discounts of these institutions fell off $585,524,000 in the six-month period ended December 31.

The increase in total assets from $43,435,788,000 on June 30, 1934, to $46,439,270,000 on December 31, was attributed to an increase in deposits which jumped from $35,813,595,000 to $38,996,340,000. Much of this boost was reported due to huge emergency Government outlays for relief which immediately found their way back to the commercial banks in the form of deposits.

The statement showed also that membership in the corporation had grown by 241 institutions during the half-year period, National banks increasing by 45, and State member banks by 22, while State non-member institutions increased by 174.

Clipper Skipper Takes the Helm

Clipper Is Safe in California, Gale-Battered on Ocean Hop

7,000 feet much of the way. At times the winds reached velocities of 35 to 40 miles an hour, and crosswinds took up the work of battering the speeding plane when the headwinds were left behind.

"Your first round trip on schedule over the longest leg of the transpacific route has been successfully completed on an exact engineering schedule and, in accordance with the standards of the Pan American system," a message to Capt. Edwin C. Music of the clipper crew from Juan Trippe, president of the company, said.

13,000 Pieces of Mail.

"The results fully justify inauguration of through service to the Far East."

Capt. Musick's crew on the return flight was the same as that which flew to Honolulu. The members were W. Turner Jarboe, jr., radio officer; R. O. D. Sullivan, pilot and second in command; Victor Wright, engineering officer; Fred Noonan, navigator, and Harry Cannaday, junior officer.

Stored in the hull of the luxury airliner were 13,000 pieces of mail, first ever to make the crossing between California and Hawaii by air.

The Honolulu-to-Alameda flight came just one week after the Clipper plane hopped to Pearl Harbor from California in 17 hours 44 minutes. Its return trip marked the third Honolulu-to-California flight on record and the second round-trip crossing ever made. Commander Charles Kingsford-Smith flew both directions, but at widely separated intervals.

Amelia Earhart Putnam, making the only solo flight across the Pacific on record, flew from Honolulu to Oakland January 12, 1935, in 18 hours 17 minutes. Kingsford-Smith made the West-East flight in 14 hours 59 minutes.

Most of the flight was made over clouds and fog, with visibility excellent above the dense banks.

Guided by Radio Beams.

While 2,200 miles out the plane picked up directional radio beams from the powerful ground station at Alameda and rode them straight to its base. A station at Makopu Point, 19 miles north of Honolulu, aided in guiding the ship.

At 1 p. m. (Eastern standard time) the crew brought the ship down to an elevation of only 600 feet.

Fog and partly cloudy skies spotted the route as the fliers neared the coast of California. At times their speed was cut to less than 100 miles an hour, making the average for the flight far less than the 136 miles attained on the westward hop.

Welcoming the incoming plane was a large delegation of officials, including San Francisco's mayor, Angelo Rossi; Lieut. Gov. George J. Hatfield, and mayors and chamber of commerce and business representatives of the bay region.

The air mail "covers" placed aboard the plane by postage stamp collectors and others for the first round trip flight between the islands and California were delivered to B. Willoughby, superintendent of air mail, San Francisco, and Ford E. Samuel, Alameda postmaster. The delivery included 4,016 pieces of mail placed aboard in Honolulu.

Green Memorial Rites Tomorrow at Court

Annapolis, April 23 (AP).—Memorial services for Judge Nicholas H. Green, of the Anne Arundel County Circuit Court, will be held on Thursday in the courtroom.

The services were to have been held tomorrow but George E. Rullman, president of the County Bar Association, announced the postponement because of the death of Daniel M. Murray, dean of the Howard County bar. Chief Judge F. Neal Parke, of the Fifth Judicial Circuit, and Associate Judge William H. Forsythe, jr., asked the postponement in order to attend the Murray funeral.

PWA Funds Held Illegal On Power Job

Carolina Judge Enjoins County From Using Utility Moneys.

By the Associated Press.

Greenville, S. C., April 23.—Federal Judge H. H. Watkins today held that the use of Public Works Administration funds to establish a local proprietary business in competition with an existing utility was unconstitutional, in enjoining Greenwood County and the PWA from carrying out plans for construction of the Buzzards Roost power project.

The injunction was sought by the Duke Power Co. and was directed against the county and Secretary Ickes. An allotment of $2,852,000 for a county-owned hydroelectric plant at Buzzards Roost, on the Saluda River, had been made by the PWA.

Three major questions were involved in the ruling by Judge Watkins. He held:

1. That the power company had the right to seek the injunction because it was a taxpayer in Greenwood County and because its business would be seriously impaired by construction of the project.

2. That the proposed loan was not in compliance with the statute creating the Public Works Administration and that the power company was correct in contending the cost of the construction would exceed the amount to be appropriated.

3. That the proposed contract between the PWA and the county was unconstitutional.

In connection with the latter ruling he asserted the power plant could not come under the constitutional provision allowing regulation of Interstate Commerce because it did not propose to do business outside the State of South Carolina.

He ruled also that it could not be allowed under the general welfare powers of the Constitution since it was not national in scope, being limited to a relatively small area.

Judge Watkins said the proposed power plant would be in effect a proprietary and not a public enterprise since its primary purpose would be to sell power to private interests.

The rates to be charged, he said, would furnish a yardstick to regulate the rates of the Duke Power Co. and its business would be seriously impaired.

Named Court Aid.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., April 23.—R. J. Schleuss, one of the younger members of the Berkeley County Bar, has been named commissioner in chancery here by Circuit Judge D. H. Rodgers. He succeeds Harry A. Downs, who gave up the work because of illness and a desire to center on general practice.

Barracks to Be Built In Hitler's Home Town

Vienna, April 23 (AP).—The home town of Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler of Germany and five other Austrian cities will get new military barracks this year in line with the government's re-armament program, it was learned today.

Housing facilities for troops and equipment will be erected at Braunau, Schaerding, Ried, Freistadt, Gmunden, and Ischl. All except Freistadt are near the German frontier; that town is on the Czechoslovakian line.

Shirley Temple, 6, Has Lonely Birthday

Hollywood, Calif., April 23 (AP).—Shirley Temple, child film star, "celebrated" her sixth birthday anniversary in isolation today.

A cold forced postponement of a party planned for her. She was to have entertained some 50 guests, children of the newspapermen who "cover" Hollywood. She probably will have the party next week.

Mash Seized, Still Destroyed.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Georgetown, Md., April 23.—A small still was discovered on the premises of William Martin, of Wilmington, and was destroyed by Federal revenue agents under direction of Charles Callahan, inspector in charge at Salisbury. No one was found at the still, but 500 gallons of mash were confiscated and held as evidence.

Toledo Factory Shut by Sloan In Auto Strike

2,340 Chevrolet Workers Lose Jobs; Company Denies Closed Shop.

By the Associated Press.

Toledo, Ohio, April 23.—Approximately 2,340 workmen indefinitely lost their jobs today as officials of the Chevrolet Motor Co. closed its Toledo branch factory when a strike was called by the United Automobile Workers Federal Union.

"Grave danger" that the strike might spread to other automobile factories were expressed by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor.

The exact number of men on strike was undetermined. However, James Rowland, chairman of the union's strike committee, said 90 per cent of the workers are union members. Green, in Washington, added that in the recent automobile labor board election, 1,800 of the 2,200 men then employed in the plant favored the union as their bargaining agency.

Wage Increase Offered.

This election showed the factory is one of the few in the automobile industry where a majority of the workers are union members.

Fred Schwake, business representative of the union, said 600 of the 1,100 workers on today's first shift began the strike after company officials refused to grant the union's demand for a closed shop, and several other requests, although the firm offered compromises on several points and a 5 per cent general wage increase.

Late today, company officials demanded a vote by the workers on the company's entire list of counter-proposals. The union scheduled a meeting tonight but gave no indication whether a vote would be taken.

Alfred P. Sloan, jr., president of the General Motors Corporation, parent of the Chevrolet firm, asserted in New York the corporation would not sign an agreement for a closed shop.

Sees Election Forestalled.

"The vital question," Sloan asserted, "is whether General Motors Corporation is willing to sign an agreement for a closed shop recognizing the local union as the exclusive representative of all the employes of the Toledo plant. This, General Motors will not do."

Sloan expressed belief the strike will forestall the final election scheduled for tomorrow to determine the membership of a committee to represent the employes for collective bargaining.

Richard L. Byrd, member of the National Automobile Labor Board, said in Detroit the board has not been asked to intercede in the Toledo dispute but that it is watching it closely.

5-Day Week Refused.

In addition to offering a general wage increase of 5 per cent, the company's counter proposal to the union offered recognition of seniority rights, no discrimination against union officials, and a willingness to meeting with duly accredited representatives of its employes upon questions of grievances.

It refused, however, to sign a contract calling for a closed shop, a five-day week of 7½-hour days, a minimum wage of 70 cents an hour, and abolishment of the "speed-up" system.

A company circular issued today said the plant has been working 43 hours a week and been paying more than 70 cents an hour to 60 per cent of its employes. Fewer than 100 workers have been receiving less than 53 cents an hour, the circular added.

The shut-down was orderly and only about 100 union men were stationed on a picket line, Schwake said.

tinal tracts of elephants. These protozoa change the elephants' diet into "meat," Dr. Kofoid said.

Shows Orientals Impassive.

The East Indian cult of Yogi was the topic of a paper delivered by Drs. Walter R. Miles and K. T. Behanan, of Yale University. These two scientists experimented to determine the effect of the Yogi breathing exercises preliminary to mental concentration.

Their conclusion was this: That if the artifical breathing patterns influence concentration, their influence is psychological rather than physiological.

The popular conception of the Oriental as being cold and impassive was upheld in experiments described by Dr. G. M. Stratton, of the University of California. Emotions of Chinese, Japanese and Americans were tested by having a heavy hammer strike a blow within a few inches of the outstretched hand of men of each racial type.

The Orientals showed much more control than the Americans, Dr. Stratton reported. The Americans showed a tendency to pull their hands away, while their breathing and respiration quickened and their blood pressure rose.

Types of Memories.

There are two and perhaps more kinds of memory, Dr. Carlyle F. Jacobsen, a psychologist from Yale University, declared after describing experiments which showed that monkeys could retain old memories, although most of their brains had been cut away.

This scientist disclosed that apes which had the frontal lobes of the brains removed lost no knowledge of their well-learned habits or of long remembered past events. He did find that the animals thus treated lost another form of memory used in retention of the various phases of an immediate problem.

In this experiment, Dr. Jacobsen removed the front portion of the animals' brains after they had been taught to perform simple tasks. When the wound had healed it was found that they could not perform these tasks nor could they learn to do them again. But they could remember some things learned long before, such as finding their way through a maze.

Four Get Medals.

Four medals were presented last night at the annual dinner of the academy. The first, the Agassiz Medal, was awarded to Haakon Hasberg Gran, of the University of Oslo, Norway, for his work on the factors controlling organic production in the sea. In his absence the medal was received for him by Wilhelm Munthe de Morgenstierne, the Minister of Norway.

The Henry Draper Medal was awarded to Dr. John Stanley Plaskett, director of the Dominion Astrophysical Observatory, Victoria, British Columbia, for his labors in stellar radial velocities. The medal was received for him by Frank Dawson Adams, foreign associate of the academy from Canada.

James P. Chapin, of the American Museum of Natural History, received the Daniel Giraud Elliott Medal and honorarium of $200 in recognition of his work entitled "The Birds of the Belgian Congo."

August Vollmer, member of the staff of the department of political science at the University of California, was awarded the Public Welfare Medal in recognition of his application of scientific methods into crime detection and crime prevention. For many years he was chief of police of Berkeley, Calif.

D. A. R. Plans to Open Washington's Office

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, April 23.—Fort Loudoun Chapter, D. A. R., has announced plans to open the little stone building where George Washington kept his headquarters while he was stationed in Winchester. The building, 190 years old, is in a good state of preservation.

It was in this building that Washington established his office while he was in the employ of Lord Fairfax as a surveyor. He also occupied it while supervising the erection of Fort Loudoun in 1756-1757.

Legislator Asks Sale Of Wines on Sunday

Richmond, Va., April 23 (AP).—State Senator William Worth Smith, jr., of Louisa, a former candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, today issued a public statement virorously opposing the sale of beer and wines on Sunday. The statement in part follows:

"I supported the measure to legalize sale in the interest of temperance; but not in the interest of excessive drinking. It must be obvious today to good citizens that the sale of beer and wine on Sunday from places not regulated or protected is not in the interest of temperance."

Men Cling 2 Hours To Capsized Canoe

Centreville Pair Safe After 14 Hours' Exposure.

By the Associated Press.

Centreville, Md., April 23.—Two Centreville citizens were safe in their homes here today after 14 hours of exposure last night following the capsizing of their canoe in the Chester River.

The men, Owen L. Phillips, 55, and W. Herman Moffett, 40, were sailing an 18-foot log canoe from Lakeford, the estate of George F. Moffett, of New York, to Wrights Wharf, where it was to be inspected.

A stiff wind was blowing at the time and the craft capsized in the middle of the river. For more than two hours, Phillips and Moffett hung to the canoe in the river before it drifted ashore on the Kent County side of the river about 12 miles from here.

Weak from cold, the two men agreed to separate and walk for help, but were too exhausted to go far and spent the night on the beach. They are expected to recover.

Signatures Similar, Check Passer Is Held

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charles Town, W. Va., April 23.—A man giving the name of Raymond A. Price was arrested here today at the Farmer Bank & Trust Co. after presenting two checks, one for $60 on a Boonesboro, Washington County (Md.) bank and the other for $65 on a Petersburg, Va., bank for deposit and then asking for $25 on the deposit.

Assistant Cashier J. Richard Russell became suspicious when handwriting in the two checks appeared similar, and with Cashier L. G. Albin, held the man in conversation while he called Policeman D. H. Ambrose.

Price is said to be on parole from a former Hagerstown sentence, and wanted in Harrisonburg, Va.

Strawberries Flourish In Princess Anne

Princess Anne, Md., April 23 (AP).—Cold and rainy weather this spring has not damaged to any extent the thousands of acres of strawberries planted in this county.

All the early varieties of berries have been in bloom for some time and the later varieties are just beginning to bloom. The average Marion Station grower plants from 10 to 20 acres each year. Early stands of string beans were damaged by cold weather last week, farmers report.

Horsepower on the Hoof

WE don't keep cows but we do keep horses.
There's a reason.
Our horses are trained to know where our customers live.
They know the routes as well as the drivers.
They make it their business not to forget an established consumer.
Their dependable horse-sense assures regular delivery.
The driver doesn't have to drive. He is free to deliver milk and retrieve empty bottles.
He just signals that all is well with him, and Dobbin does the rest.
We use motors, too.
We do not use motors because they happen to be more characteristic of 1935, nor do we use the original horsepower because it provided the transport of ancient times.
We have no stomach for newfangled notions merely because they are new, nor for old-fashioned ideas just because they are old.
As with everything in this business, we ask ourselves: "What will enable us to give the public better service, better value?"

Everything that Science really knows about making cigarettes is used in making CHESTERFIELDS

LIGGETT & MYERS TOBACCO CO.

The cigarette industry could never have been what it is except for these modern cigarette machines . . .

They make good cigarettes and smokers know each individual cigarette receives the most careful inspection.

You'd hardly believe such attention to detail possible unless you could see it with your own eyes.

When the Chesterfield tobacco comes to the cigarette making machines it has been blended and cross-blended.

Then it is cut into long even shreds just the right size to smoke right and burn right.

Every Chesterfield Cigarette has to be perfectly made to get by our inspectors.

Until you open the package yourself the cigarettes are scarcely touched by human hands.

Mild ripe tobaccos, skilled workers and the most modern up-to-date machinery all help to make Chesterfield the cigarette that's milder the cigarette that tastes better.

Odds Against Secession.

Huey Long's reiterated intimations of secession by Louisiana somehow lead one to recall the man who suffered severely from seasickness on his first ocean voyage. At first, he told his friends afterwards, he was afraid he would die. Later he was afraid he would not.

The Senator's argument, springing from Administration pressure to prevent the Long machine controlling relief expenditure in his State, is that the Federal Government can not have it both ways. Louisiana should not be called upon to contribute to the national Treasury if Louisiana can not control Federal expenditures at home. "Do not forget that," he rumbles. "This Boston tea party can work two ways."

Unfortunately for the Senator's logic, he has chosen in relief expenditures a very poor example to support his thesis. The FERA records show that last year the Federal Government contributed $19,073,777 to Louisiana relief expenditures. The State contributed nothing. Local communities in the State contributed $415,338, or 2.1 per cent of the total.

As long as there is any chance that the Federal Government will continue to pay 97.9 per cent of Louisiana's relief bill the chances of a Fort Sumter at New Orleans will continue small.

Mr. Ickes' Areopagitica.

Secretary Ickes has told the annual meeting of the Associated Press that the people of this country are convinced newspapers fill a useful purpose not to be supplied by any other medium. They "would not for a moment brook any attempt to infringe upon the freedom of the press." Every American will hope that he is right.

For restriction of the press, whatever its shortcomings, would be one of the first signs of the complete break-down of democracy and liberalism. Even though Soviet Russia has been greatly sinned against by irresponsible "news" writers, a story from that country serves to point the moral. An official speaker was extolling the glorious successes of the Communist regime. As an example, he referred to the beautiful buildings and municipal improvements to be seen in a certain city. A member of the audience spoke up to say that he had visited the city in question and had seen no such sights. "That's the trouble with you people," the speaker answered, "you don't read your newspapers thoroughly enough."

In more serious vein, an article recently published in a Berlin journalistic trade organ tells much the same story. Propaganda Minister Goebbels, the writer, frankly confessed that the average German now gets his news through gossip and has lost all faith in the strictly censored newspapers. Just how German editors are to win back the confidence of their readers without being allowed to print the full news and appropriate comment, the Reich official did not vouchsafe. But it is not the least of the problems of the Hitler régime.

Since the early days of Tom Paine, freedom of the press has been a fetish of America. That a high Government official should at this juncture declare the necessity of continued devotion to this principle is reassuring. Mr. Ickes spoke in New York City, where the press has pulled no punches in lambasting him for his dust-up with Mr. Moses. In spite of these attacks, the Secretary by implication defended the public service involved in them. Such integrity of thought is the stuff that best bulwarks the American system against the overthrow threatened by those who, sincerely or otherwise, work to jettison the constitutional guarantees of freedom of press and speech, and the right to free assembly.

Believe It Or Not.

According to an apparently well authenticated report, a Government bureau has been discovered which is anxious to avoid responsibility for spending more money. And—believe it or not—this bureau is attached to the Department of Agriculture. An unnamed spokesman for this aberrant agency, the Soil Erosion Service, states that instead of the $150,000,000 which some Congressmen are urging the President to appropriate for its use, "$80,000,000 will be plenty for the next two years—maybe too much."

Skeptics may find it hard to believe that a "high official" is willing to admit openly that there are limits to the spending capacity of a governmental agency. However, experience and commonsense are on the side of the anonymous defender of spending moderation. Indeed the effective utilization of the not inconsiderable sum of $80,000,000 within a two-year period, for the sole purpose of controlling soil erosion, calls for extraordinarily careful preliminary planning. That undertaking might well tax the knowledge and test the administrative capacity of the most competent executives in any intra-departmental bureau.

The question as to the manner in which $80,000,000 or several times that sum might be usefully spent by soil erosion experts is not nearly so engrossing, however, as speculation concerning the identity of the official who confessed that if too much public money is poured out at once, a loss of efficiency might result.

Up To The President.

Secretary Morgenthau injected into the Senate Finance Committee's hearing on the bonus an old-fashioned argument that falls rather strangely from the lips of a New Deal Cabinet member. "The Treasury," he says, "would view with great concern the enactment of any bill which calls for large additional expenditures, without compensating additional taxes."

This advice, of course, is fundamentally sound. Mr. Morgenthau's fear that Government securities may depreciate if Congress indulges in a spending spree is a sober and solemn warning. It is unfortunate that its effect is somewhat dissipated by the cavalier manner in which the current public works program has been embarked upon.

In view of this, Congress will find it more difficult to accord Mr. Morgenthau's counsel the attention it deserves. There is a feeling in some quarters that, since the Administration has secured enactment of its own spending program, it should not object to a similar indulgence sponsored by members of Congress. Consequently, there is a disposition to lay the bonus on the White House steps in spite of the fiscal difficulties which might result from another $2,000,000,000 outlay. This attitude has been encouraged, moreover, by unpleasant rumors that the President would sign the misnamed Harrison compromise, if it should be accepted by both houses.

Responsibility for either defeating the bonus or approving it, therefore, is gravitating directly toward the White House. It is not too late for the President to prevent this unwarranted outlay, if he has the courage to maintain the position he repeatedly took when political pressure was less acute. Secretary Morgenthau's warning suggests that the President is still determined to avert this strain upon the budget. But left-handed thrusts against the bonus will not be sufficient to defeat it.

The Administration will find it essential to take a vigorous stand against the demands of a vociferous veterans' lobby, or weakly surrender to what Mr. Morgenthau clearly visualizes as a perilous course of action.

Felicitations!

We are reminded that yesterday was the birthday both of the Bard of the Avon and of the child wonder of the screen. As Dr. William Lyon Phelps justly observed: "April 23 is sacred to the memory of William Shakespeare." That is what a professor emeritus of English literature is expected to say. And there are thousands of people, both those who are thoroughly familiar with Shakespeare and those who are not, who were undoubtedly grateful to the sage of Yale for the notation.

There is a little less than no basis for comparison between William Shakespeare and Shirley Temple except that both happened to be born on the same day. But there is the indisputable fact that the little actress, however limited she may be by the taste of her admirers, is also giving the best she has to a world which is all a stage. Just six years of age, she is nevertheless the recipient of the special award of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences. Only two others have ever won this presumable distinction—Charles Chaplin for his superb pantomime and Walt Disney for the creation of Mickey Mouse.

Shakespeare's works will live until the end of time. They are of the very essence of immortality. In all probability, Shirley Temple's fame is as ephemeral as the fashions set in her name. Yet already, in her brief span of screen life, she has made a truly Shakespearean contribution to the pleasure of her devotees. For hers is the healing, childish gift of innocent happiness. And that is "not of an age, but for all time."

O. Henry, Apothecary.

Drug stores have long since passed the stage where their stock consisted only of pills, patent medicines, pain-destroying liniments, all-powerful ointments, tobacco and cordials. Almost anything that a customer may ask for can now be found in the heterogeneous collection of present-day pharmaceutical parlors. Food, liquor, dolls, books and cosmetics are but a few of the usurping attractions that have almost relegated prescriptions to the status of a side line. Long, leisurely, unexciting days for clerks behind drug counters are a thing of the past. It is part of their training nowadays to recommend a current best seller with the skill their predecessors used to diagnose and prescribe the proper pill.

The contrast between the old and the new drug store is made strikingly clear in a valuable piece of O. Henryana that has just turned up in Texas, where that famous author lived before he became a literary figure. The discovery is a ledger, meticulously itemized by O. Henry when he worked for a druggist in Austin. Its first fifty-seven pages of bookkeeping in longhand attest to busy days for the young clerk. On the other hand, the fact that he had many idle hours at his disposal is shown by the latter half of the ledger, which is filled with uncompleted manuscript in the same handwriting!

There is a possibility that some of the cheery, co-operative, white-jacketed clerks found in drug stores today might develop, if given opportunity, into O. Henrys. But there is not much probability. Time as well as talent is lacking. And the pity of it is that no one could do more justice to a story of the difference between the quiet of the outmoded pharmacy and the hurly-burly of the modern drug store than the late O. Henry himself.

Two Separate Issues.

Opposition to Marriner S. Eccles as governor of the Federal Reserve Board has been aimed largely at his views and policies rather than his personality or his technical competence. Mr. Eccles is an advocate of the Keynes theory of vast public outlays to cure depression. He is also author of the omnibus banking bill now before Congress. In the former, and in part of the latter, field his views have met with vigorous Senate opposition. The resulting controversy over principles seems to have been largely responsible for the delay in his confirmation.

The collapse of this opposition indicates failure on the part of Mr. Eccles' critics to find any justification for a protracted fight. Apparently he gave a good account of himself when he appeared before the Senate Banking sub-committee. His grasp of the principles of banking has directed the controversy away from himself and toward the policies for which he stands. Hostile Senators could no longer conduct an active fight against Mr. Eccles without indirectly opposing an integral part of the Administration's policy. And that fight should be made on a basis of principles, not personalities.

Senators too often oppose confirmation of individual appointments because they do not favor the policies that such officials are entrusted to administer. Obviously that course partakes of sabotage rather than constructive opposition. Once a policy has been chosen, the President must have the privilege of selecting sympathetic executives to sponsor it. Since the special subcommittee has revealed nothing to disqualify Mr. Eccles from serving as governor of the Federal Reserve Board, the full Banking Committee has done well promptly to send a unanimous favorable report to the Senate.

Opposition to undesirable provisions in the Eccles banking bill will not be affected by this decision. That is an entirely different issue. For Mr. Eccles may be 100 per cent personally, and still indorse legislation which, in the national interest, should be severely revised before enactment.

Psychology At The Circus.

To celebrate their third birthday, Jimmy and Johnny Woods, famous identical twins, were taken to the circus by their mother. During the first two years of his life, Johnny received strict training in morals and manners from the Normal Child Development Clinic in New York, while Jimmy was left to his own devices at home. The purpose of the experiment was to determine the effects of rigid discipline on a child from earliest infancy.

Enterprising reporters were on hand to watch the children's reactions at the circus. Surely no better place could be found for getting inside information on human nature. And Jimmy, the home boy, did not disappoint. He oh'd and ah'd with the rest of the gaping spectators at the antics of the acrobats. He even shrieked "yoo hoo" in democratic fashion at a scantily clad blonde atop an elephant's back.

But Johnny, taught at 9 months of age to leap off 6-foot platforms into waiting arms, was a little scornful of the whole proceedings. While Jimmy, sterling example of the old trial-and-error method, clung cautiously to his mother's skirts, Johnny tried to attack the elephant and emulate the aerialists. Apparently his instructors failed to include any lessons on discretion being the better part of valor.

As long as Johnny is in the clinic, he reacts according to schedule. But his instructors, and other psychologists all over the country, may err in accepting that fact as a basis for a lot of generalities on the art of bringing up a child. If a child psychologist really wants a problem worthy of his efforts, let him exchange places with a weary, harassed mother and take a 3-year-old to the circus. That is guaranteed to revise any theories that any expert might have on the subject.

The unused income tax "pink slip," which marked up a printing expense of $9,615, was probably one of the least expensive of recent Government slips.

Why A State Bird Anyway?

From the Philadelphia Inquirer.

Having turned down the goldfinch as the State bird, the New Jersey Legislature might well desist from any effort to agree upon another. It is a rather childish game, this choosing of a bird or flower as a territorial symbol. Neither birds nor flowers observe State lines, though their abundance may sometimes be local. Since most birds are migrants, their range is wide.

Perhaps the New Jersey objection to the goldfinch, which is one of our finest singers, is because of its seasonal plumage. When summer is over its bright yellow body loses its luster, and the male takes on the somber coloring of the female. Those uninstructed in bird lore would hardly know a goldfinch in winter if they saw it. Nor does it appear that the States that have selected birds to represent them hold them in any exceptional honor.

Setting The Stage For A Comeback.

During the temporary absence of Mr. Elderman, The Post's cartoonist, a symposium of editorial reaction to current national and foreign affairs will be published from day to day in this space. The reprinted drawings will not necessarily represent our own viewpoint, but are selected as reflections of considered opinions on the passing scene. The editors of The Post wish to make full acknowledgement of the courtesy of their contemporaries in granting permission for this procedure.

Letters To The Editor

The Post welcomes letters from its readers. All communications must be signed with the writer's name and address. Upon publication initials or pen names will be used if requested. Letters are subject to condensation, and in no case should they exceed 250 words.

Share Croppers.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have just read a letter in The Post of April 19 entitled, "Share Croppers' Distress," by one who signs himself American Reader. His evident ignorance of the subject of which he writes indicates he has no first-hand information concerning conditions on plantations in the South.

The venom manifested toward the Southern planter in his letter, and especially toward the class he refers to as aristocrats, suggests he is a Yankee and, if this be a fact, he could better employ his pen by exposing and denouncing the conditions of the workers in the mills and factories of New England, with which he is doubtless better acquainted. These people are subjected to a form of slavery and exploitation which finds no parallel in the South either in the factories or on the plantations.

Now, what are the facts regarding share croppers on plantations in the South? While not denying perhaps a few isolated cases of abuse and exploitation, the answer is found on a plantation in the South in which the writer is indirectly interested, and which is typical more or less throughout the South. Some cotton and much tobacco are raised on this plantation. The tenants are all Negroes and live in good houses rent free. They are given their firewood and cow pasturage without cost.

The landlord stakes them each year for the fertilizer and other things that are necessary to put in and harvest their crops. They have no responsibility for the taxes on the place, which, by the way, are ten times what they were 25 years ago, or for its upkeep. Barns for curing the tobacco and storage houses for the cotton and tobacco are supplied by the landlord without cost. The landlord looks after their spiritual and material welfare, supplying them with medical care when necessary, for which, in many cases, he is never repaid.

When it is considered that these tenants have comfortable homes rent free, that they pay no taxes, that they are assured of fuel and food without cost beyond their own labor, and that they are free of all responsibility beyond the planting, tending and harvesting their crops, they are in many ways far better off than the landlord.

As for American Reader's gratuitous sneer at Southern aristocrats, I can assure him they are the best friends of the people they employ, and that whatever may be their faults in some respects, they have, as a class, those humane instincts and that sense of noblesse oblige that generally characterizes the true gentleman—facts which are well understood and fully appreciated by those who work for them. It is, indeed, a great misfortune that there are not more of their kind in our country.

"Get Clear of Bonus."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Please permit an opponent of the soldiers' bonus to present reasons in favor of its payment.

I opposed the original provision for compensating our soldiers on the ground that it commercialized their patriotism. But that view having been rejected by Congress, it seems difficult now to interpose valid objections to enlarging the compensation by a cash payment, when the Government is having difficulty in distributing all of the funds which it has provided. Why not anticipate this actual obligation which the Government has assumed and get clear of this recurring disturbance to our national repose?

The objection that the payment of the bonus now will be a strain on the credit of the Government seems totally at variance with the views of those supporters of the $4,880,000,000 relief bill, who contend that the Government may safely increase its bonded indebtedness to $50,000,000,000, thus placing us on a per capita parity of indebtedness with England.

If it will be sound to increase our indebtedness to such extent in a period of years, why may it not be now increased to the moderate extent of the $2,000,000,000 necessary to cure the bonus wound? There is surely no more vice in somewhat enlarging the bonus by a cash payment than there was in the original compensation passed by Congress.

Arguments For Antilynching Bill.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The introduction of the Costigan-Wagner antilynching bill in the Senate this week occasioned a blast of Southern oratory, garnished with such phrases as "the sanctity of our homes," "the honor of our wives and daughters," "the integrity of the white race," etc. Many white women of the South, as well as the North, are growing weary of the assertion that lynching is a defense of our homes and virtue.

Lynching is today what it has always been—a weapon to terrorize, degrade and exploit an underprivileged group. Those who condone lynching, whatever may be their stated reasons, are on the side of oppression and lawlessness. A Federal antilynching law would not function exclusively as a punitive measure, but would act as a deterrent to a crime which is a national disgrace.

The rapidly growing sentiment for the Costigan-Wagner bill indicates that Americans in all parts of the country are coming to a realization of the truth. They will not much longer permit sectionalism to retard our progress toward a greater civilization by obstructing Federal legislation with traditional falsehoods.

GERTRUDE B. STONE.
Washington, April 18.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The opposition of Southern Senators to the Costigan-Wagner antilynching bill is a disgrace to civilization and must be seen as an inhuman barrier to social progress. That any man or group of men might oppose the bill is inconceivable to one sincerely believing in the social welfare of humanity regardless of race or creed. This opposition resembles Nazi Germany more than the abode of those gentlemen from points south of the Potomac.

Southern Senators do not want the antilynching bill passed because it would remove their best weapon for keeping cheap labor in the mills and on the plantations and make it almost impossible to keep the lower Negro and white classes satisfied with their degraded position.

Senator Smith and Senator George know that it is not a question of State's rights, or of protecting Southern women, but of keeping the present despotic government in the saddle in those most backward States of the continent; and these Senators know the majority of Southerners, because of their marginal and submarginal status, are unable to vote or improve conditions; and the women, because of the fact they have not received cultural and social emancipation from the bondage of the past, are only able to put out paper protests against existing conditions.

When it is a question of justice and social welfare for the people I consider the question of State's rights trivial and irrelevant. Should one section jeopardize the safety and well-being of a nation by having the privilege to remain lawless and barbarian? If the Southerners believe in State's rights why do they attempt the conversion of savages in foreign lands before they remove the savagery from their own society? If the Christians in the South can lynch and burn and wantonly imprison innocent people for countless "alleged" crimes why can't the men of the jungle have the same right?

Only a person who has lived in the South for a number of years can realize the necessity of passing the Costigan-Wagner antilynching bill. To oppose the bill is to admit of class and racial prejudice, and to admit that is to deny all claims from the Bourbon Democrats that this is a free democracy. The bill should be a law.

The Old Lady of the Atlantic.

No steamship had a more remarkable career than the Mauretania, which is now, after 28 years of service, to go to the scrapheap. Her sister, the Lusitania, gained a tragic prominence during the first year of the World War. But the Mauretania escaped a German torpedo to wear with pride the blue ribbon of the Atlantic for 2 years. Even after the Bremen had taken this token away from her she made one voyage in only 7 minutes' longer time than her rival. Now she is to be merely a memory to the many who crossed in her, as those earlier holders of records, like the Etruria and Campania, were in their day.

Only lovers of the sea can appreciate the affection a ship arouses. She seems a living creature, even though steam has supplanted sail. "The liner is a lady," as Kipling wrote, and there was a peculiar appropriateness in calling the Mauretania the Old Lady of the Atlantic. She was modeled more finely than many of the huge steamships, with long, sweeping lines and a sharp bow that made one think of her as a great yacht. True, she had become somewhat outmoded with the passage of the years. But she kept to the last the charm a lady should have, and there will be keen regret at her passing.

The Post Impressionist

Freedom Or License?

Post Office, Wednesday.

THERE was a time—after we ourselves had written all the free verse we cared to write—when we thought that we would never sponsor any free verse. There was never a time when we did not feel that to begin the lines of any sort of verse with lower-case initials was a funny affectation. There have been moments when——

But all this was long before somebody sent us the verses which we publish today.

The poet calls the first "What's the Matter With the Mat?—Or, Whotell's Got My Lifebuoy?"

I get so angry when the bathtowel
is soggily damp, and likewaise
the mat.
But worst of all is finding the mat ain't there—and the soap also.

Then indeed do I become most irksomely wrathful
and long to sc-ream
and pinch sensitive plants.

For who under the
at-this-time
non-extant sun wants to
soap around the house in an attempt to be sanitary?

A serious matter, you see, Sadie's own processes of beautification. (We had forgotten to say that her name is Sadie Blake.)

Other people's beautification, however, is different. Other people's troubles are always funny—especially other and older women people's.

Thus does Sadie write "Seen in a Mirror in a Ladies' Restroom:"

She was fat and muscle-bound
and flaby-chinned.
Her petticoat hung,
her dress was wrinkled, and brilliantine was injudiciously streaked through her indifferently waved hair.

Yet she preened before the mirror as though careful hours had been required for her toilet—as though admirers swarmed her doorsteps, yearning to protect her from the rigors
and ardors of Usual Living.

"Ha!" said her bright, snappy, black eyes—
and haughty defiance thrust her chin upward.

Her body was old, but her eyes and her illusions were young as Pan and unquenchable
as thirst . . .

The Post-Impressionist's impression is that this was a brave woman—brave even if unconsciously pathetic. Probably

" . . . careful hours had been required for her
toilet."

And very certainly no admirers at all ever would so much as pause at her doorstep if she did not preen "before the mirror!"

A little cruel there, Sadie.

We'd like to see how you will rewrite that poem

"Once you have come to forty year!"

But when, Sadie, you write of existence in the abstract, you express uncommonly well the common pessimism of youth:

LIFE IS LIKE . . .
A ball of yarn given to a kitten to play with and tease into obstinate snarls . . .

An icicle tortured
by winter winds into glassine wonder of prismatic colors—
which melts with dismal
but absolute surrender at the warmth of a hearty sun . . .

A roaring fire of wooden logs, crackling, popping,
shooting stars:
morning, if the fire be unbanked through finds on the hearth only a shifting inanimate heap of dull
gray ashes . . .

A gentle
administered with such tactful subtlety
by a Master Anesthetist that one is
conscious of pain-racked interludes and dull moments of hopeless uncertainty in the lapses
from stultifying

Press Agents Abound In Spite Of Depression

Blue Pencils Restrained By Admission That Truth Is Stronger Than Fiction.

By Ralph E. Renaud.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

New York.

ONE New York industry which is still holding up its head in the depression is press agentry, or, if you prefer the fancier name, public relations. Indeed, if it is not exactly prospering, it is at least picking up. Stanley Walker, in his best-seller, "City Editor," estimates that there are 5,000 press agents in the metropolis. But, considering the ramifications of the profession which scarcely touch the newspapers, there are probably that many more.

In prestige the press agent runs all the way down from big business with its barons of ballyhoo and princess of propaganda, such as the late Ivy Lee, the versatile Edward M. Bernays and the vivacious Carl Byoir associates, to the exceedingly small potatoes who merely keep their eyes peeled for cracks through which they can crowd an item into the trade papers. The big fellows not only have individuals and corporations for their clients, but governments as well.

In the Dickstein investigation Ivy Lee testified that he was drawing $25,000 a year from the German Dye Trust and through them was advising the Hitler government regarding its American relations. The Byoir associates were getting somewhat more, also from the German government. In his two books discussing the formation of public opinion Bernays has revealed how Lithuania was put on the map and carved out of the old Russian Empire through the judicious use of organized propaganda. Bernays, by the way, vigorously rejects all the sinister definitions of propaganda and describes it simply as any form of special pleading, subject to the same standards of ethics as the law, for instance. Any other aspect of propaganda, he holds, is improper propaganda.

IVY LEE was undoubtedly the pioneer of the dignified Public Relations Counsel which almost every corporation employs today. His greatest feat was transforming John D. Rockefeller from the ogre of the oil trust into the benevolent old philanthropist now cherished by the public. It was Lee who invented the scheme by which John D. distributed dimes wherever they would do the most good and collected a nice little human interest story on every 10-cent outlay. That remains the greatest monument to press agentry in America. It was Lee, too, who first added numbers to names and managed to have his clients speak always before important groups. That is now part of the fundamental psychology of the new science of publicity.

Dexter Fellows, who will soon be in Washington ahead of the circus, still represents the old-fashioned press agent, sure of his welcome in newspaper offices, and content to do his work through personal contact rather than widespread campaigns. He is the advance man rather than the public relations counsel, polished, kindly and the perfection of his type.

The theatrical press agent has undergone a change. Smart boys, real artists, are crowding into that field and it is astonishing how many of them turn out to be our best playwrights. Russel Crouse, for instance, is representative of the Theater Guild and also part author of Broadway's reigning success, "Anything Goes." Some of the most charming theatrical essays which appear in the newspapers are written by the press agents and never changed.

THE relation of the newspapers to the press agent also has undergone a change. It used to be a high crime to mention any sort of commercial product in the news columns, but the blue pencil, in that regard, is more tolerant than it was. The editor is no longer certain that every press agent story is going to be a fake and some of them are frankly printed on their merits, either as amusement or information.

What the city editor complains of most is that many of our industrialists simply won't talk on anything except through their press agents. This has developed the "canned statement," which never gives all the news a good reporter wants, but is quick and convenient. If the black plague should suddenly remove every press agent from the scene of his operations the gaps in your newspaper would startle you. Some of the choicest news now comes in automatically through publicity channels. Perhaps the press agent himself has learned that truth is stronger than fiction. Certainly as the media of transmission continue to manifold, the function of the publicity man will widen into fields undreamed of in the past. And it is now happily arranged so that old press agents, when they die, can always get a soft job in some Government department.

PADDY, the only dog in New York entitled to wear a brown derby, is back home after being pupnapped. Al Smith himself, the Oliver street boy who rose in the world until he became night superintendent of the Central Park Zoo, gave Paddy his brown derby. Paddy also has the distinction of having been born on St. Patrick's Day, which is quite an asset in New York City, especially around the seventeenth of March, and if you happen to be an Irish terrier.

Paddy is the mascot of the Humane Society of New York. He often barks over the radio for his society and recently became a hero in his own right when his yapping saved a small yellow kitten lost in a chimney. The kitten, promptly named Chimney Flue, on her discovery, and Paddy are fast friends now. Indeed, Paddy has done a lot for his four-legged brethren and during "Be Kind to Animals Week" collected a whole basket-full of nickels and dimes on Fifth avenue, attired in his Brown Derby and this placard:

"Greeting, good people. Attention I pray,
I'm only a dog, but I've something to say.
In behalf of my four-footed buddies I'm here
To ask for your help. Do I make myself clear?
I'm not used to speaking in public, you see,
But this cause is worth it, I think you'll agree.
Give a nickel or dime—give all you can spare
So these true friends of man may have shelter and care.
They're helpless and lonely—will you heed their call?
They sent me to ask you. I speak for them all."

• • • •

AT the society headquarters they insist Paddy wrote the verse himself, being pretty smart in his own right. But a few days ago he disappeared and not a trace of him could be uncovered. Finally, Paddy being well known in the radio studios, Kate Smith broadcast an appeal for his return. The next morning the phone rang at headquarters and a woman's voice said Paddy might be found at a certain corner of a certain street. He was there, tied to an iron fence with a stout rope. His jaw was swollen and he was generally battered up, but with true canine honor he would not tell who the pupnappers were. He is now said to be writing out the saga of his experiences in another verse dedicated to the yellow kitten.

A STOCKING strike threatens at Public School 60, in the Bronx, where some of the lasses are up in arms over the compulsion to wear black cotton hose and "reform school" uniforms. Regulations for a school costume have been enforced there for several years now, but rebellious spirits declare they will no longer submit to such regimentation.

School authorities insist the rule is for the benefit of poorer pupils who can't afford pretty stockings. Some of the parents maintain they don't pay taxes to give their daughters inferiority complexes. There is quite a row about it and the whole stocking controversy will be unraveled after Easter.

Mickey Mouse now has a family tree. Prof. Jean Capart, a Belgian lecturer on Egyptology at the Metropolitan Museum, has dug up a picture of a mouse standing with straddled legs and arms akimbo amid a group of bemused Nile dwellers of 3,000 years ago. Precious papyri make it certain that this ancient mouse cavorted before the Egyptian public much as Mickey does today, though without the benefit of mechanical animation. Undoubtedly Mickey's original ancestor! The Greek anthology also contains a number of poetic references to amusing mice in Alexandria, Egypt, not Virginia.

One-fifth of all the private detectives in New York are women. What—dicks in high heels! Who is a fellow going to trust nowadays? And, oh, yes, one-third of all the highways in New York City are still dirt roads. There are 400 miles of dirt road on Manhattan alone and the Borough of Queens still has 1,500 miles of unpaved roadway. No wonder they still speak of the highways and byways of the metropolis.

Eastern Shore Clubs To Convene Thursday

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Snow Hill, Md., April 23.—The Eastern Shore District of the Maryland Federation of Women's Clubs will hold its semiannual meeting in this city Thursday as guests of the local Women's Club. Carlisle Bargeron

The Substitutes.

INFORMATION that Mr. Chip Robert is going down to Augusta Ga., to tell the textile operatives meeting there a lot of funny stories with a view to getting them in a good mood again emphasizes the painstaking care which has been given to detail in our national plan. With an amazing foresightedness the planners have apparently overlooked nothing. Every possible contingency seems to have been taken care of in advance.

BARGERON.

For some time it has been apparent that Chip was being saved for something. Some observers were inclined to think it was for the long pull. There are several hereabouts who are in the same category. Only a few days ago mention was made in the press of Mr. Roosevelt's having several men around him who had no apparent purpose in life or at least had no part in the "plan," but who in reality served as his contact men with Congress. This was, of course, the bunk. These men are simply being saved for something.

Mr. Roosevelt's adherence to football tactics in running the Government suggests they are the reserves, the substitute players who would be called into the game when the others tired. There is no telling when something will bob up that will call for using them.

• • • •

Take Chip, for example, no one would have guessed he would be directed to don his robe at this time and get into the game. When Chip came up to Washington he was given the title of Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, but that the Administration really had a reserve role in mind for him was evidenced by the fact that they promptly took his main work away. This was the administration of the Treasury building program. It was given to Admiral Peoples, so about all Chip has had to do since was just to keep warmed up in the event he would be called upon.

So well trained has he kept himself, too, that he will be able to step right into the Augusta assignment. He won't have to trot up and down in front of the substitute players' bench a single time. All he has got to do is to pull on his headgear, trot out onto the field and give his name to the referee. And what a hero he will be if he can kick a goal.

• • • •

The textile operatives are coming to be a serious thorn in the Administration's flesh. There are about three different things they want, elimination of the processing tax on cotton, the exclusion of Japanese imports and whatnot. The Administration is not in a position to help them, not without considerable trouble and embarrassment, on a single score. What better then than to send Chip down to them at their Augusta meeting to tell them some jokes. It is not recalled that any one of the substitutes has ever been called into the game and given such a heavy responsibility. The textile fellows are in a bad mood. It will be up to Chip to tell jokes as he has never told them before. He will, in fact, have to keep them roaring all the time. But gosh, if he clicks, the field will be wide open to him.

Win or die, sink or swim, is what should be Chip's motto on this assignment. He is getting such a break as none of the other substitutes have had. It may mean the making of him.

This opportunity of his, in fact, proves that we don't recognize history when it is happening. Over the past two years nearly everyone around here has been mentioned as a presidential prospect — Henry Wallace, Harold Ickes, Harry Hopkins and the rest. And a notable development has been the creating of under-studies for two of them, Wallace and Ickes, under-studies who could step right into their shoes. It followed that if Wallace and Ickes were presidential potentialities their under-studies had to be, too.

Well, how about Chip? Who is there to say that in his story-telling he is not under-studying Mr. Roosevelt. The truth is that he can tell a better story now. But the Augusta engagement will give him an opportunity to show it. If he makes good it may easily be "Chip for President!"

No End of Books

Manuscript Poetry, It Being The Season When Loud Singeth Cuckoo.

By Theodore Hall.

CALL it the spring sickness if you will, but your correspondent is going to turn this into a poetry column today. A swatch of verse from Mr. Derek Beamish, of 1201 Thornton place, combined with a certain devilish salubrity in the air outside this window, gives opportunity and motive at once. Not to mention some tendencies in the verse itself—which, with a bow of thanks to Mr. Beamish and a word of admiration on my part, I shall now let you taste for yourself.

The first poem itself, as you'll see, was enough to set me off.

From a Desk Chair.

I LOOKED out of my study and the sky was blue,
I saw the top boughs bending in a wind that came from Norway—
There wasn't any going; there was just my work to do
Till the pages wavered and the type grew queer and blurry,
Till the book I held before me took me like a China clipper
Sixty leagues to windward to an island once I knew;
The Olden People live there—but, here's desk and squat ink bottle,
And I look out of my study and the sky is blue.

In Ambuscade.

I THOUGHT, of course, from where I sat,
She'd wonder straight where I was at,
And so I watched her on the beach
Keeping my head just out of reach
If she should turn; but she sat still,
Slipped back her bonnet, tucked a frill
Into the quaver it should hold,
Stretched out her slim legs to the gold
White sand which glittered in the sun,
And stared afar; I held it fun
To wait a space, if she should miss
My being near; I planned a kiss.
Somewhere just then she spied a friend
And waved and smiled—I could not bend
My heart from crying 't strange that she Should so live on, and without me.

Mentor.

AND I, if I could, would show you how to wear
This insistent coronet called living,
But for the faint and natural misgiving
That what I wear is so less sure a crown,
Being but thought upon and held less dear,
And all I know is that the world is round,
Gusty and tremulous, and we are here.

Pour Le Sport.

TOSS it with a golden coin
If you love or love not me;
My sharp caring cannot join
Your impartiality.

Heads, I see all Heaven's eye
Shine in your's; tails, I submit,
Oh, toss it true as Caesars die,
Mercifully definite.

So. And what I might have had Goes glimmering; well, run away
And try it with another lad—
I have no more heart to play.

Abdication.

TAKE him, my dear, he's quite the good
Grand thing you think he—and all say—is.
I know. Oh hell and gone! I should Throw copper pennies out to Cadiz
Or even farther, if she would Think half as much of me, or could.

Beatrice.

SOME day when Chronos flings me far away
Across the broad-backed ocean mile on mile
Onto some green and sun-enameled isle
Where cockatoos and golden parrots play,
Some day when all I know and hear say
In this gray place is faded by the wile
Of Circe-years, then I shall see your smile
And wonder why I did not speak that day.
For dreams in exile, like affrighted birds
To some strange woodland tremor, flock in awe
Around the reaching of the heart which lies
Unquenched for lack of tears, unsaid for words;
So from a hill in Padua Dante saw
The noon-day starlight in her vanished eyes.

(I don't like to break in, but I just want you to notice the rather surprising range of Mr. Beamish's moods. Above is as sweet a sonnet as you would ask, and below are two poems which go off as far as a new compass point could. T. H.)

Contemporanea.

WHEN you glance at me and find Hid in this myoptic eye
What the elder gods designed
For high feats and panoply,
You may wonder, you may fret
That the age has tricked you yet.

Gone are all the knights of yore
Jousting for a lady's sleeve,
Gone is the gay troubadour
Singing on a summer eve.
These are parlous times for love—
What can we be thinking of?

But I have armor just as bright
As a taxi in the night.
My proud plumes are flung as high
As a scraper of the sky,
And underneath this new blue serge
Let me plead my antique urge.

Hilda.

WHEN she was little and her legs were spindly
Boys would pull her pigtails,
Throw stones and stick their tongues out;
She remembered it.

She put her hair up and her smile thinned;
She never had breasts;
All winter her heart tightened for spring—
Spring was new pain.

Young laughter over the hedge pointed at her
Sharp as Christ's finger;
On a firefly summer evening they took her away
Where it wouldn't matter.

Three Thrillers

By

Wm. Lyon Phelps

AMONG the new novels there are three absolute ripping hairraisers—stories that hold your breathless attention from start to finish. Books that are intended to do this should succeed in doing it; there is nothing duller than a dull murder story. Thus it is a pleasure to me to recommend books that I know positively will make the reader forget his troubles, forget the depression, and above all, forget himself.

First, I recommend "She Fell Among Thieves," by Dornford Yates. This English writer is the only one who has succeeded in producing stories of fantastic adventure that remind one all the way through of "The Prisoner of Zenda." He has done the trick repeatedly, but never better than in this latest novel. There is the strange castle, there is the female devil in charge of it, there is the beautiful young damsel, there are the two gallant young Englishmen.

Second, I recommend a new detective story called "Fer De Lance," by Rex Stout. The only bad thing about it is the title; no one is going to pronounce the three words in the title correctly and many are going to forget the exact title anyhow. But every page of this murder story is exciting, the fat detective is a marvelous magician of the intellect, the man telling the story is exceedingly attractive, and altogether the book is precisely what its author intended it to be, perfect of its kind.

The third book of murder is "Death in the Air," by Agatha Christie, who made a tremendous hit with her first book, "The Murder of Roger Ackroyd." "Death in the Air" is not so continuously thrilling as the two preceding books just mentioned; because it is our curiosity rather than our love of action that is kept continuously taut. But there is a steady crescendo of interest and toward the end—well, read it and see.

5 Couples Wedded In Easter Nuptials

Miss McFerren and Miss Weigle Among Brides.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Waynesboro, Pa., April 23.—Five weddings of interest took place over Easter.

In Spry, Pa., Miss Elizabeth R. McFerren, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles McFerren, this city, became the bride of Joseph Steiner, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Steiner, this city.

Miss Evelyn L. Weigle, daughter of J. D. Weigle, was married Sunday to Harold L. Mathews, son of Mrs. Cora Mathews, of Hanover, Pa. Mrs. Mathews is a graduate of Shippensburg State Teachers College. Mr. Mathews is associated with the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. They will make their home in Hanover.

Yesterday afternoon Miss Catherine A. Paull, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Guy M. Paull, and Gerald S. Sterling, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Sterling, Hagerstown, were married in the parsonage of St. Paul's United Brethren Church, Hagerstown. They will make their home in Baltimore.

The wedding of Miss Rhoda Rosenberger, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward R. Rosenberger, this city, and Charles Bishop, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Bishop, Quincy, took place Saturday afternoon in Winchester, Va.

Miss Ethylmae Wilhide, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry C. Wilhide, became the bride of John M. Stevens, son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Stevens, this city, in the St. Paul United Brethren Church, Hagerstown, Sunday afternoon.

Tombstone Falls, Kills Father of 8

Naval Academy Laborer Is Victim of Accident.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., April 23.—A Naval Academy laborer, the father of eight children, was crushed to death today by a falling tombstone in the academy cemetery here.

Grafton B. Mills, 40, of Iglehart, the laborer, was one of a group of workmen straightening a large granite stone. The upper part of the monument fell from the pedestal, pinning Mills to the ground. He was taken to the academy hospital, but was dead when he arrived there.

He had been employed at the academy for nine years. A board of inquest was named by naval officials to co-operate with Police Magistrate Louis M. Hopkins, acting coroner, in investigating.

Guild Home Built By Somerset Folk

Princess Anne, Md., April 23 (AP). Residents of the Mount Vernon district of Somerset County have completed repairs to their community house—a project they carried on without asking aid from the FERA or any other governmental agency.

More than 20 volunteer carpenters worked without pay to place new shingles on the roof of the house, known as the Guild Hall of Grace Episcopal Church. Members of other congregations aided in providing funds for the work.

Medical Association Convenes at Danville

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Danville, Va., April 23.—The South Piedmont Medical Association held its spring meeting here tonight. Dr. G. A. Stover, of South Boston, is president.

A symposium on "Medical Economics" was held during the afternoon in which Dr. I. C. Riggin, Richmond, State health commissioner, and Dr. Phillip Moncure, of Norfolk, president-elect of the Virginia Medical Society, participated.

Anti-Lynching Fight Due Again In Senate

Ghosts Of Past Haunt Battle, Sometimes Sham, Over Ancient Issue.

By Elliott Thurston.

THOSE who cherish some of the older traditions of the Senate will have an opportunity in the next few days to renew their faith in the permanency of at least one custom in this world of change. The Senate is about to stage another filibuster over what used to be called the "force bill," which reappears currently under the guise of the Costigan-Wagner anti-lynching bill.

This measure has a long and curious history. It used to be promoted annually by gentlemen whose districts were inhabited by a sufficient number of Negro voters to make a difference on election day. And it used to be resisted, passionately, by an even larger number of gentlemen, largely from the Southern States, who talked much as Senator (Cotton Ed) Smith, of South Carolina talked the other day about protecting the womanhood of the South. Often the debate is painful. It touches deep emotions and superstitions.

THE year 1922 brought forth what was perhaps the best of the annual battles over the force bills, as a long succession of them—some to govern Southern elections—has been called, beginning even before Civil War days. In 1922 the late Henry Cabot Lodge, of Massachusetts (Back Bay and Nahant) was extremely solicitous about protecting Negro victims (possibly one should say voters) from the atrocity of lynch law—so-called, according to the historians, from one Charles Lynch, a Virginia planter, who seems to have devised a custom in Revolutionary times of stringing up suspected Britishers by the thumbs until they cried, "Liberty forever," or perhaps "Uncle," or some other confession of capitulation.

A hint as to the reason for Senator Lodge's solicitude may be gleaned from a speech once made here by a Negro member of the Republican national committee, who eloquently reminded his audience that this "flower of New England manhood," held his seat in the Senate only by reason of the fact that "20,000 journeying Georgians" paused at the polls in the Bay State to vote for him. Senator Pat Harrison used to derive a certain sadistic pleasure from recalling this speech to the mind of the aristocratic Senator from Massachusetts.

Anyway, Mr. Lodge, who came up for re-election the following year, was more than eager to press for enactment of the Costigan-Wagner bill, then known as the Dyer bill, inasmuch as neither Mr. Costigan nor Mr. Wagner had then reached the Senate and resurrected the measure under their own names. The late Knute Nelson, sturdy old Roman of Minnesota, headed the Judiciary Committee. He asked Senator Borah to take charge of the anti-lynching bill. But Mr. Borah replied that he had studied it thoroughly in some of its previous incarnations and was convinced that it was hopelessly unconstitutional. "I know, but that's why I want you to take charge of it," replied Mr. Nelson. "I want somebody who is familiar with it to take it over."

SO hearings were held and the Judiciary Committee concluded, unanimously (save for the late Senator Sterling, who reserved decision) that the bill was unconstitutional. Whereat Mr. Lodge, much perturbed, appealed to Mr. Nelson for reconsideration. The Bay State, not to mention others, might fall into the hands of the political enemy unless this bill was favorably reported and pressed by the G. O. P. So Mr. Lodge pleaded piteously. Thereupon Mr. Nelson appealed to the committee, frankly but firmly. And thereupon enough of the members reversed their constitutional convictions to report the measure to the floor.

Then came a filibuster such as will be witnessed in the Senate once more in the next day or so. The late Oscar Underwood, Democratic leader, arose in his place and notified Mr. Lodge and all his cohorts that not a wheel would be turned, not a lick of business would be done in the Senate until the objectionable bill was withdrawn. For several days the oratory raged. The South filibustered, openly and at times ferociously.

Possibly the debate would have gone on longer and been even more bitter but for the fact that Mr. Lodge, in advance, had arranged everything. He was to push the bill. Mr. Undergood was to fight it to the bitter end. After putting on a sham battle long enough to be of political benefit to both sides, they were to drop it and go back to the business before the session. While the battle raged, it seemed very real.

• • • •

SINCE then the anti-lynching bill has not been obtruded that far until this session. But it has once more emerged as the next order of business on the Senate calendar. Mr. Costigan has given notice that he will press for its final passage. The Solid South is again united against it, ready to die filibustering rather than surrender on this elderly issue. Mr. Borah and other constitutionalists are as sure as ever that the measure is unconstitutional. Senator Wagner himself, able lawyer and erstwhile judge, gulps slightly when pressed on the matter of constitutionality. But then, there is Harlem!

Probably the struggle will not last long this time, either. The NRA, social security and other such matters must wait until the filibuster subsides, which will be when the latest proponents of this bill give in. While it lasts the conflict will be warm and especially interesting for antiquarians. It will be strongly reminiscent of so many past days in the Senate. One will have no difficulty in seeing the ghosts of Lodge and Underwood and the other departed Titans fighting again this glorious if sometimes sham battle.

Child Fatally Hurt in Fall.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., April 23.—Frank Baumgardner, 7, was fatally injured by a fall while trying to climb a ladder in a barn on a farm near here where his father worked. He suffered a skull fracture and died in a hospital here yesterday. An operation failed to save his life.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Proof the Worst Is Over.

(As indicated by Easter parade returns from coast to coast.)

New York.—The country may now be said to have passed the crisis. Two millionaires appeared in the 1935 Easter parade with silk hats they owned outright.

Between Fifty-ninth and Forty-second streets there were several reports of a former railroad magnate wearing white gloves with holes in only two fingers.

Gen. Hastings B. B. Cuttysark 3d added greatly to the feeling that the worst was over by parading in a morning coat with only one button missing.

Flash: Mr. and Mrs. Wizzleton-Wizzleton, of the Easthampton Wizzletons, were reported on responsible authority to have come to church in a seven-passenger sedan with tires in both spare tire wells Things must be looking up.

• • • •

Chicago, Ill.—Final returns from the 1935 Easter parade support the feeling of optimism expressed in other cities. Only 16 per cent of the prominent men observed in the parade had patches in their formal trousers. This is a decline of 1.02 per cent over 1934.

Col. Hallowell Deepdish 2d, well-known figure in the steel trade, was observed in a spring overcoat on which no repair work seemed necessary.

Mr. Jasonsby K. K. Lufflewonk, well-known shipping magnate, was observed among the Easter paraders shortly before noon. He had shoes on both feet.

An unconfirmed report is that very few of the white carnations worn in the buttonholes of the upper classes this year were artificial.

• • • •

San Francisco, Calif.—With returns from only two wardrobes missing, a gain of 12 per cent in the number or new walking sticks carried this year can be definitely claimed at this time. A drop of 3 per cent in the number of silk hats hired for the day is also reorded.

Mr. and Mrs. L. Dilliby Scolloputt were seen in church with their children this year. For the last three Easters they had to leave one home as a matter of economy in clothing.

• • • •

Boston, Mass.—Massachusetts is glad to add to the unfailing evidences of an American on the upgrade. Only one outstanding society man was observed in badly soiled spats. Nearly all Easter plants placed in windows were apparently this year's.

It's the Public Which Sounds Melody Score

D. C. Night Clubs Play Popular Numbers as Patrons Clamor.

What are the most popular songs of the day? And where are they sung?

Night club performers keep a grip on the musical pulse of the public, and, when that pulse runs at a high rate over this or that number, performers must oblige.

And sometimes, for no plausible reason, a song will "have a run."

They Demand More.

Last week, the Lotus Restaurant announced that its prize singer, Judy Ellington, would feature "Melancholy Baby" during the floor show. This week, not only Judy is sobbing the sad song, but Mary Jo Hamilton, of Childs Gingham Club, and Marie Fowler, of La Paree, hover over the microphone with their tender message.

Poor "Isle of Capri" has had a hard time of it. Every orchestra leader, every singer, every night club manager, and many a patron will tell you they are sick unto death of the song. But, dear public, with pulse running high, demands that Hi-Hat's Paradise Islanders sing it on an average of twelve times per hour—once every 5 minutes. And the Lotus announces this week that Lou Davie, featured singer, will do the "Isle of Capri" on the floor show.

In addition, Sidney, of the Mayflower, reluctantly admits that he's still getting requests for the number. Sidney prefers to tell you that his public wants to hear "I Won't Dance" and "Lovely to Look At," both from "Roberta." Also, says Sidney, the latest hit, "Haunting Me," and a close runner-up, "Every Day," are pulling in requests. He says to keep an eye on another new one, "Bridal Waltz," which might become famous over-night.

"Every Day" Every Day.

Speaking of "Every Day," Ray Beck, at La Paree, sings it on the floor this week, and uses it as his theme song on three weekly air programs.

Moe Baer reports that "June in January" is the topic at Club Habana.

So it goes.

Here today, gone tomorrow, are these songs of the night spots. Here's hoping for an early demise of "The Isle of Capri." The others are okay.

'Torture' Suspect Charges Frame-up

N.Y. Prisoner Again Denies Coleman Murders.

By the Associated Press.

Fredericksburg, Va., April 23.—Reasserting that he had no connection with the "torture murders" of Mr. and Mrs. John T. Coleman, elderly Spotsylvania County couple, John Shell, colored, who is being held in Haverstraw, N. Y., charged with the double slaying, said last night he "was being framed."

Shell denied any knowledge of the Colemans or of the location of their home, 12 miles south of here. Mr. Coleman's gold watch, found in his possession when arrested, was given him by "a man in Philadelphia," Shell declared.

Shell is fighting extradition to Virginia, where he is under indictment for the murders. He was named as the slayer by Jackson, also colored, who is being held in Henrico County jail for safe keeping.

Dr. Dunnington Is Voted Award In Chemistry

Retired U. of Va. Professor, 84, Honored for Distinguished Service.

Reprinted from yesterday's last edition.
Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., April 22.—Dr. Francis P. Dunnington, 84-year-old retired professor of chemistry at the University of Virginia, has been named to receive the 1935 Charles Hearty award for distinguished service in the field of chemistry in the South, it was announced today in Atlanta by Prof. J. Sam Guy, of Emory University, chairman of the committee, making the selection.

The award, established in 1933 and given annually by the students and faculty of the Georgia State College for Women, will go to Dr. Dunnington this year as a tribute to his nearly 50 years of outstanding, teaching service at the University of Virginia and some 67 publications by him on research projects, the committee said.

Dr. Dunnington was made professor of chemistry in the university here in 1872, and served continuously until his retirement on the Carnegie Foundation in 1919. Among his successful research experiments was his discovery of the universal distribution of titanic oxide in soils.

He is a fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, and is a member of the American Chemical Society, the British Association for the Advancement of Science, the London Chemical Society, the American Electrochemical Society, and other scientific and honorary organizations. During his teaching career he was an active contributor to various scientific journals.

The presentation of the Hearty award, a gold medallion, will be made during May. It was established in honor of Dr. Charles Holmes Hearty, of Georgia.

Harrisonburg School For First-Aid Opened

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., April 23.—Dr. Grant F. Hartzell, of the American Red Cross staff, last night opened the first-aid and accident prevention school here, under auspices of the Rockingham Red Cross Chapter.

The school will be conducted three hours each night for ten nights. Public school teachers, firemen, industrial foremen and others are taking the course and are expected to impart information to classes in their own groups. The school, the first held in the Shenandoah Valley, embraces Rockingham, Augusta, Shenandoah, Page, Rockbridge, Highland and Rappahannock counties.

C. & O. Revenues Rise With Cost

Income Increases 3.3%, Expenses 4.3%.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., April 23.—Increases in both revenues and operating expenses of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway Co. in 1934 were revealed at the annual meeting of stockholders here today.

Gross revenues increased $3,519,555, or 3.3 per cent, over 1933, while operating costs went up $2,488,996, or 4.3 per cent, it was reported. The ratio of operating expenses to revenues was 55.5 per cent, or 0.5 per cent greater than in the previous year. Revenue coal and coke tonnage increased 5.9 per cent, total tonnage improved 6.7 per cent, and passenger revenue was up 13.5 per cent, the report showed.

The Best Dog Is—the Wolfhound

Daniel Partridge 3d Thinks Breed Is Most Beautiful of All Animals in Motion; Insists They're Smart, Too.

The perfect expression of the poetry of motion is the Russian wolfhound. And that is why Kniaginya, an almost snow white specimen of the breed, considers herself a member of the Partridge family of 214 South Lee street, Alexandria, Va.

Of course there are other reasons why Daniel Partridge 3d, one of Washington's well known young lawyers, likes the Russian wolfhound—now that he has had one to get him acquainted with the breed. "I have always wanted a wolfhound since I was a boy," he declared. "I wanted one because I consider the wolfhound the most beautiful of all animals in motion. They tell me that the whippet runs faster over short distances, but, for the real poetry of action, one must watch a wolfhound in the woods."

Ginya, as she is affectionately known around the house where her longer Russian name, meaning a princess, would be a nuisance, comes from royal parents, according to her master. Her very whiteness, except for a few tiny lemon spots, is testimony to the fact that her father was a champion from the grand duke's kennels, where only the whitest of wolfhounds were allowed. Despite her color, Ginya keeps herself clean without many baths or much grooming.

"Some people think that Russian wolfhounds are beautiful but dumb," Mr. Partridge continued. "I think the breed suffers from inhibitions, certainly not dumbness. Ginya doesn't express her affections like other dogs, like the little mutt we have. She doesn't jump all over you or make an awful fuss about you. Where another dog, out walking, will return to jump on his master once in awhile, Ginya brushes up against my knee occasionally. She likes attention as much as any other dog and will come up and paw me for it but she wants attention in her own way. It is slander to say the breed is not intelligent. I wouldn't have any other type of dog now."

A peculiarity of the breed, officially known as Borzois, is the fact that they seldom bark. For this reason, they make an ideal dog for apartment house life, provided the owner has some way of getting his pet into the country for exercise. Ginya, according to Mr. Partridge, can run 35 miles a hour for three or four minutes and keep up a pace of 25 miles an hour for quite a little time.

Mystery Shrouds History.

The history of the breed appears to be more or less shrouded in mystery, although there are several theories advanced as to their orgin. The dog, however, was not intended for dog show benches or apartments. Not more than a century ago they could be found only in Russia, where they were prized for their ability to withstand cold and fight wolves, frequently bringing back their enemy alive.

The Russian wolfhound is a graceful, aristocratic animal, combining courage, muscular power and great speed. He is distinctive because of his long, lean head; his nicely arched back; straight, almost bladelike legs; his long, low well-feathered tail; his long, silky coat of white with lemon or sable spots. The nose is large and black; the eyes dark and intelligent. He stands 29 inches or more at the shoulder.

Yourloff Back As Ace Dancer At Club Troika

Ethel Pastor Held Over Again, Is Singing Comedy Numbers.

By Kay Ware.

Youry Yourloff, the rotating Russian hoofer who so neatly stood Club Troika patrons on their ears earlier in the season, has returned and the Troika bosses are singing again. Youry has been on tour the past six weeks with Arturo Toscanini's Philharmonic Orchestra, doing some of his classical stepping. And to the Troika he has brought back a number of new routines, including a dashing Russian peasant number.

Ethel Pastor, Troika's songbird, has been held over again for the umpteenth time and will probably finish the season at that stand. Ethel is still singing musical comedy numbers, but lately she had added a few familiar opera arias.

The Easter exhibit at the Mayflower is in the promenade and shows a miniature village, railroads, a mill with real water wheel and tiny houses. Lounge guests seem to get as much enjoyment from it as the children do.

They're not a dance team. Yet, they certainly do dance. They're not a singing duo. But they sing splendidly. And what's more, they combine dancing and singing into some very clever numbers. Perhaps a "musical comedy" pair would be the best description. Yet that overlooks the youthful exuberance and sense of comedy they possess. Meaning Elizabeth Houston and Danny Harden at Heigh-Ho.

They are really brother and sister, have very excellent voices and can tap out a difficult dance routine. Elizabeth was in "Face the Music," "Smiling Faces" and other shows before she joined Dan. He was a featured player in "Sweet Adeline."

Thumbnail Portrait.

Miss Marta De La Torre, now featured at Casino Russe, is a Cuban violinist. First musical instruction was from her parents, Gabriel De La Torre and Lina Campuzano. Then the Cuban government sent her to the Royal Conservatory in Brussels, Belgium, where she studied with Cesar Thomson and won four first prizes in violin, harmony and composition. Later she toured Europe and, while in Spain, was chosen by Joaquin Turina, the famous Spanish composer, for the premiere of the "Poema de una Sanluquena" in a joint recital in the theater San Fernando of Sevilla.

The Royal Palm Revue in the Shoreham Hotel floor show this week comes to Washington direct from Miami, Fla., after a season's engagement. It features a Ziegfeld beauty chorus, in an assortment of song and dance numbers, including one named "Button My Shoe" and one that is mostly feather fans. The entire production is staged and conceived by Flo Kelly. Alma and Roland are the ballroom team, and Bea Lockhart does a feature solo.

Eddie Collis is the master of ceremonies. Dance music is furnished by Maxim Lowe's Orchestra, with Barnee wielding the baton. Barnee also plays for dancing in the lounge cafe at the Shoreham during the late afternoon.

At the Dude Ranch Milton Barrett is going in for spring planting. To quote, "When these posies break into bloom, we will have the most beautiful spot between Baltimore and Washington."

There is a new song and dance artist at the ranch. Petite brunette name of Jerry Ralston. Dancing to Ralph Garren and his Dude Ranch Orchestra. A pleasant 20-minute drive from Washington.

Another Thumb-Nail Portrait.

Blond Southern gentleman John Slaughter, Willard's bamboo room, favorite song, "In a Boat Out to Sea" (his theme song) . . . shudders at sail boats . . . likes speed boats . . . would like to play more golf . . . got his start in pit of small Georgian theater at tender age . . . Alma Maters: Alabama and Washington and Lee . . . boasts membership in Alma Tau Omega . . . thinks Bermuda and medium steaks smothered in mushrooms make up Heaven . . . is very proud of his two clever singers—Ernestine Gardner and Fenton Froom . . . dives for loudest tie available after four sessions a day at the Willard in a black tie . . . is the answer to the prayers of clothiers, because of his reputation for smart dressing . . . and is secretly looking forward to a summer by the sea.

Dance music of the week—Emory Daugherty's at La Paree. Quickest with musical service—Emory Daugherty, who says, "Certainly, we'll play a tango," and sure enough, does so by the time you've half crossed the floor.

Winter Garden Revue is rather better looking on the whole than most revues. In addition, their closing number—all in black and white—is something to applaud at. And the more we hear of Ray Beck the better he seems to be. Knows how to use both his voice and the microphone, has a good collection of songs.

The Lotus is going in for bunny dances, cherry blossom waltzes, boleros, adagios and Moorish dances. Take your pick.

Dance teams of Reynard and Stasid, Wayne and Wynn, Grace Miller with soft-shoe numbers, Francis De Vola with Spanish ones complete the list of principals.

Judy Ellington scores again with her singing. Best hit yet is her interpretation of "Dinah."

Tuesday was amateur night at the Rendezvous, at Eighth and H streets northeast. Besides those performing for competitive honors were Archie Hawk, tap artist and soft-shoe dancer, and Dean "Nick" Paney, tap dancer and songster. Tea dance Sundays, 4:30 to 7. Dancing nightly from 9. No cover charge.

Club Habana's New Team

Gina and Giana, above, are the new dancers at Club Habana. Theirs is a smart ballroom grace, and clever routine.

Broadway

By Ed Sullivan

Broadway at 52d St.

It is a morbid truth that charity, on Broadway, too often is kicked in the stomach. Professional promoters, shrewd and cold-blooded, take advantage of the blind, the crippled and the diseased to line their own pockets with gold. There are exceptions to the rule. If Dutch Schultz were to conduct a benefit show, you could rest assured that every penny of the money raised would be devoted to honest-to-goodness charity, ably administered. Chiefs of the so-called beer baronies, born and bred on the sidewalks of New York, thoroughly acquainted with the misery and squalor of the tenements, are truly charitable. I have seen a lot of them in their conduct of charity shows and they are the soul of honor. Tammany leaders and New York judges do a tremendous amount of charity. Judge Gustave Hartmann's annual affair at Madison Square Garden draws in close to $50,000, and the expenses of administering this do not amount to more than $15,000, leaving $35,000 for charity.

• • • •

The reason for this discussion is that Alan Corelli, secretary of the Theater Authority, allied with Actors Equity, has just investigated 89 proposed "charity" shows. He found that more than half of them are rackets. He found, too, that the racketeers in charity are largely society people. Impoverished by the depression and desperate for money, a group of Park avenue bluebloods are earning a prosperous living by promoting these phony benefit shows—and pocketing most of the money for themselves. Lady Thelma Furness and Gloria Vanderbilt, who raised $1,700 legitimately for the blind at a recent affair, would have been victimized unwittingly by these society sharpers had it not been for Corelli's intervention. They were going to turn over the $1,700 check to the suave promoter, but Corelli told them, instead, to send the check directly to the priest for whom they initiated the affair. They did. Corelli then went to the priest and told him the exact situation, warning him that within a few days the promoter would call on him for a gratuity. "I told the priest that there was no moral reason for him to give up any part of the money, which the Vanderbilt sisters had raised—and I trust that he took my advice."

• • • •

"These society vultures manipulate in the background," explains Corelli. "They are smart enough to identify themselves with a bona fide charity, one preferably with a religious background. Given that set-up, they throw a smoke screen of other society names around it and proceed to send out their tickets. They appropriate for themselves 50 per cent of the net receipts or even more. The charity itself is lucky to get anything 'at all.' Corelli has become so suspicious of "charity affairs" that he now wouldn't bet you that white is white. There is a crippled boy, on the East Side, who for years has sent out letters to Broadway columnists. Just recently actors have received letters from him, asking them to appear at a party to be given in his honor. "I'll make a bet with you," said Corelli, "that this kid has been grabbed by a smart promoter. I'm going down there now to investigate, to find out what racketeer is hiding in the background, pulling the strings that will empty some dough into his own pockets."

• • • •

The No. 1 comic of the screen, for my money, is W. C. Fields, and I trust that you do not disagree. There is a robustness to Fields' make-believing that is magnificent. You can pity the performer who has to work with him on the same screen, for Fields will run away from the best of them. "Mississippi" isn't a particularly excellent picture, but he makes it worth while. "Some of my best friends are Indians," to me, will remain as the funniest situation-gag of the current season. With Fields handling one type of comedy, and Bill Powell dominating light comedy roles, the screen is fortunately equipped.

• • • •

The spring season is well upon Broadway. Connie Immerman transplants his Harlem show into the Palais Royale tonight, Ben Marden opens his Riviera Thursday night with an Earl Carroll show, Pavillon Royale is already taking shape out on Long Island, and the hotels are spring cleaning their roof gardens. Premiere of the Immerman show will draw the whole town. Some of us have insisted that a colored show is the only possible novelty on a street surfeited with girl shows. The haggard Mr. Immerman, exhausted by his strenuous labors, is hopeful that we're right, but too tired to worry about it.

Darryl Zanuck, dashing for the Coast plane, sums up Hollywood's bewilderment as to its eventual location: "Dear Ed: Just leaving for plane. Looking forward to seeing you in Hollywood, New York, New Jersey, Florida, Maryland or North Carolina. Take your pick. Regards. (Signed) "DARRYL."

Peggy Hopkins Joyce, I see by the papers, will sing at the Detective Association Endowment affair at the Astor. Dinny Mahoney's fine Italian hand can be seen in this decision, for he is a great friend of Peggy's. The last time Peggy sang was on one of my radio programs. She warbled "Home On Harvest Moon," and was surprisingly good. When she came to the line: "I ain't had no lovin' since January, February, June or July," Peggy smiled and the audience roared.

Fairfax County Spelling Match Set for May 11

Superintendent Woodson to Preside; Schools Send 2 Pupils Each.

The Fairfax County match in the National Spelling Bee will be held Saturday evening, May 11, at 7:45 o'clock in the auditorium of Fairfax Elementary School. W. T. Woodson, division superintendent of schools, will preside and Miss Roberdeau Allison, of Fairfax, will pronounce the words.

Each school in the county will be permitted to send its two best spellers to the match to vie for the honor of representing the county in the area finals of the contest, which is sponsored by The Washington Post. The meeting is open to the public and as the match promises to be lively and interesting, a large audience is expected.

The judges for the Arlington County match, in Washington-Lee High School, on Friday, May 10, at 7:30 p. m., are announced as follows: The Rev. Walter Lockett, Lyon Village; Walter K. Handy, Barcroft, and Mrs. Jessie Moran, Clarendon. Arrangements for the match are in charge of Fletcher Kemp, county superintendent, and Miss Florence Gravatt, supervisor of instruction.

Two counties have changed the time of their matches and schools entered have been so advised.

Charles, Warren Change.

The Charles County contest will be held Wednesday, May 1, at 8 p. m., in La Plata High School. The date remains the same, but it will be held in the evening instead of the afternoon.

In Warren County the match will be held Monday, May 6, at 7:30 p. m., in the Warren County High School at Front Royal. This change was made necessary by a conflict of dates with other scheduled activities.

SS. Peter and Paul School in Cumberland has held its preliminary class matches and the five best spellers in each of three classes will spell against each other on Friday to determine the champions of the school.

Sperryville High School, of which H. B. Winfrey is principal, has enrolled and will send four spellers to the Rappahannock County match next Tuesday at 7:30 p. m., in the Washington High School auditorium. Washington and Sperryville are allowed four representatives in that match, and the smaller schools two each. Enrollment in this county will be open until Saturday.

Beauve School Enters.

Our Lady's School, at Beauve, Md., has been entered by the Rev. James F. Duffy, S. J., making 15 schools in the St. Marys County match, to be held Saturday night, May 4, at 7:30, in Margaret Brent High School, at Helen. Arlene Grow and Richard Pilkerton, both seventh grade pupils, will represent Charlotte Hall Elementary School in that match, Miss E. Reeves announces.

Passapatanzy School, in King George County, has been enrolled by Miss Bettie S. Coakley. Arrangements for this match are being made now and will be announced shortly.

Additional word lists for study are available and may be obtained by writing Alice Fox Pitts, spelling bee director, The Washington Post.

One Survivor at Least Will Watch "Battle"

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., April 23. Of the 180,000 persons who fought in the woods and fields about Chancellorsville 72 years ago, only one so far has signified that he will attend the re-enactment of that battle by Virginia Military Institute cadets and Marines on May 2.

He is Napoleon Bickelman, who enlisted with the first 500 men who left his part of Pennsylvania at the outbreak of the Civil War, and is one of the three survivors of that group. Mr. Bickelman was a captain when Lee surrendered at Appomattox. He is now 93 years old.

Church Committee Picks 3 Members

Manokin Body Administers Temporal Affairs.

By the Associated Press.

Princess Anne, Md., April 23.—Three new members have been named to the church committee of the Manokin Presbyterian Church here, which was founded in 1672.

The church is one of the oldest Makemie Presbyterian organizations in the United States and was granted its charter by the Maryland General Assembly in 1830. The committee holds its property and administers the temporal affairs of the church.

H. Fillmore Lankford was elected to succeed himself on the committee in the post he has held for more than 40 years. William B. Long was named to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Columbus Lankford, and W. Marshall Scott was elected to succeed J. Arthur Powell, who resigned. Other members of the committee are E. H. Cohn, G. N. Pusey, and G. H. Myers.

D. C. Guard to Take Part in War Games

121st Engineers Selected for Maneuvers.

The 121st Engineers of the District of Columbia National Guard were named yesterday at the War Department as one of the units to participate in the first Army maneuvers to be conducted in New York and Pennsylvania from August 17 to August 31.

Maryland units selected include the Fifty-eighth Infantry Brigade, the First and Fifth Maryland Infantry regiments, the Fifty-fourth Field Artillery Brigade, the 110th Field Artillery Regiment, the 104th Medical Regiment and the 104th Observation Squadron.

Virginia units designated to take part include the Ninety-first Infantry Brigade, the First Virginia Infantry Regiment, the 116th Infantry Regiment and the 111th Field Artillery Regiment.

All of the District of Columbia, Maryland and Virginia troops will be under the command of Maj. Gen. Milton A. Record, commanding the Twenty-ninth Division. Record's units will make their headquarters at Mount Gretna, Pa. About 60,000 men will take part in the maneuvers, which will be under the direction of Maj. Gen. Dennis Nolan, commanding the First Army. In addition to the Mount Gretna base, where 16,000 soldiers will be housed, more than 35,000 will camp in the area of Pine Camp, N. Y.

Peery Hears Plan For Rural Power

$7,800,000 to Be Spent in Virginia Program.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., April 23.—The three members of the State corporation commission, accompanied by Allen J. Saville, consulting engineer, conferred with Gov. Peery today on the rural electrification program which the commission proposes to initiate in Virginia with approximately $7,800,000 of Federal funds.

Chairman Thomas W. Ozlin said the commission informed the Governor of plans laid so far for the project, which is to be based on a survey conducted by Mr. Saville and other engineers in February.

In presenting their survey, the engineers suggested extending present power lines in Virginia to carry electricity to 250,000 farm homes now without it.

FDIC Board Position Given Goldsborough

Roosevelt Names Former Maryland Governor as G. O. P. Member.

President Roosevelt yesterday named Phillips Lee Goldsborough, former United States Senator from Maryland and one-time Governor of that State, as the Republican member of the board of directors of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

With the customary courtesy shown a former member, the Senate confirmed the nomination without referring it to a committee and as soon as it was received, interrupting debate on the Bankhead farm-tenant loan bill.

Succeeds Bennett.

Goldsborough will succeed E. G. Bennett, of Utah, who has resigned to return to private business. Goldsborough was supported for the appointment by both Maryland Senators, who are Democrats. Senator George L. Radcliffe, who succeeded Goldsborough in the Senate, was especially active in his behalf.

The new director of the FDIC has had one of the most distinguished political careers of any Maryland Republican since Civil War days. Born almost 70 years ago at Cambridge, Md., he was elected State's attorney of Dorchester County while still a youth. Later he served as State comptroller, and from 1900 to 1912 was collector of internal revenue for the Maryland district.

On Bank Board.

In 1911 he was elected Governor of Maryland, the second Republican to reach that office since the Civil War. When his four-year term ended Goldsborough entered the banking business, in which he remained until several years ago. He was last vice chairman of the board of directors of the Baltimore Trust Co., which was succeeded by the Baltimore National Bank after the March, 1933, banking holiday.

Goldsborough was a member of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee when it considered the legislation creating the deposit insurance corporation, and he is familiar with that legislation.

Instead of running for re-election to the Senate last year, Goldsborough sought the Republican nomination for Governor of Maryland, but was defeated by Gov. Harry W. Nice.

3 City Councilmen Named for Reelection

Westminster, Md., April 23 (AP).—City Councilmen Joseph L. Mathias, Frank T. Schaeffer and Walter H. Davis have been nominated for reelection at the town election to be held May 6.

The nominations were made unanimously at a town meeting last night. Schaeffer has served on the council for 22 years, Mathias for eight years and Davis served last year and from 1910 to 1921. The election will be for two-year terms.

Chairmen of Fund Drive.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Warrenton, Va., April 23—Miss Amy Williams, of Casanova; Miss Katherine Dorst, of Warrenton; Miss Virginia Lee Bowerbett, of The Plains, and Mrs. J. B. McCarty, of Marshall, have been appointed chairmen for the several districts of Fauquier County to solicit funds for the annual State-wide drive for the Children's Home Society at Richmond. The drive will be made during early May.

COAL PRICES REDUCED

Now effective the lowest prices in many years on White Ash, Egg, Stove, Nut and Pea Sizes.

We are not sure that these prices are the lowest of the season—but they are reductions worth considering.

J. Edw. Chapman

NOrth 3609 37[illegible] St. N.W.

"What do the election returns mean?" we asked Senator Upsydaisy, the well-known politician and after-dinner speaker.

"I can't tell you right now," hr'rumped the Senator. "I haven't read Elliott Thurston's column in The Washington Post."

But you can rest assured that, five minutes later, the Senator had his copy of The Post opened to the Page Opposite Editorials, and when the delegation from South Podunk called upon him that afternoon he amazed them with his clear, accurate analysis of the entire political situation. You see, Senator Upsydaisy is a very, very astute man, and he knows the value of Thurston's brilliant, impartial, probing interpretations of such things as elections and political trends and inflation drives and Administration plans. Senator Upsydaisy isn't the only man on Capitol Hill who turns to Thurston to find out What's What and Why in national and international affairs.

Thurston has been observing the Washington scene for so long he can remember when Republicans won landslide elections, and he has watched the New Deal outgrow three alphabets. He is one of Washington's best known newspapermen, and was chief correspondent of the old New York World. He has specialized in economics, and in 1933, when the eyes of a hopeful world were fixed upon the London economic conference, expecting its delegates to say "Presto!" and conjure up Prosperity, horn of plenty and all, Thurston was on the scene. His interpretations gave Americans not only the day-by-day, argument-by-argument account of the conference, but also enabled them to understand the need for such a conference . . . and the political and economic laws which had resulted in the world crisis. And as the Administration charges its New Deal course toward recovery, Thurston keeps the log book so well that even landlubbers can read the barometer and know when the rigging must be changed.

His opinions are formed only after a calm study of the problem at hand, and a careful analysis of all facts in the case, but Thurston is no political soothsayer, marketing gossip for the edication of vicarious keyhole listeners. Political writers, he believes, should be conscientious about their work, for politics is a serious business. If you don't believe that, look what it's costing us!

If you want a clearer picture of Congress, a better analysis of today's problems, or a fuller understanding of the economic trends of today, take our advice and real Elliott Thurston's signed articles. You'll find them each Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday on the Page Opposite Editorials in

The Washington Post.

A CORDIAL INVITATION TO ATTEND AN INTERESTING SALON OF THE NEW

AT THE WARDMAN PARK HOTEL
IN THE WEST LOBBY, APRIL 23d THROUGH APRIL 27th FROM 10 A. M. TO 10 P. M.

MANY fine things are being said about the special Lincoln Salon, and all of them are true. You are cordially invited to attend this exhibit, where you will see on display representative body types, formal and informal.

In the new Lincoln, the famous V-12 cylinder engine is placed forward several inches in the frame; the weight of rear-seat passengers is now poised ahead of the axle, rather than directly over it. Because of this new designing, there is greater room, as well as greater comfort, in the new Lincoln bodies. Many other important changes are worthy of your time and attention.

The new Lincoln V-12 is available in eighteen body types, among them custom models built by Brunn, Judkins, LeBaron and Willoughby. From honeycomb radiator grille to graceful, slanting rear end, these cars combine the best of modern design with a dignity which is Lincoln's own.

Come in any time during the day, or in the evening until 10 o'clock.

Peggy Tyner Will Be Wed In England

Capital Society Girl to Be Bride of John Dugdale.

Mother to Leave Soon to Attend Nuptials in July.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

Of great interest to members of Capital society is the announcement made today by Mrs. Elonzo Tyner of the engagement of her daughter, Miss Peggy Tyner, to Mr. John Dugdale, son of Col. and Mrs. Arthur Dugdale, of London, England.

Miss Tyner, who is one of the most charming and popular members of Washington's younger set, is visiting in England, where the wedding will take place in July. Mrs. Tyner will sail next month to join her daughter in London. Mr. and Mrs. William Stork, jr., of Holland, son-in-law and daughter of Mrs. Tyner, spent several weeks in Washington earlier in the season, and on their return to Europe, Miss Tyner accompanied them.

Completed Education Abroad.

Miss Tyner attended Holtbn Arms School in Washington and later completed her education abroad, where she was a student first at L'Ermitage at Versailles and then at the Princess Vladimir Galitzine's country school in Surrey, England. Still later Miss Tyner studied with the Countess de Precour in Paris. She was presented at the Court of St. James several years ago, after her debut in Washington.

Miss Tyner's father, the late Elonzo Tyner, who was a nephew of James Noble Tyner, one-time Postmaster General, was related to Elizabeth Barrett Browning. He was a member of the Council for National Defense in Washington during the war. On the maternal side, Miss Tyner is a direct descendant of Gen. Thomas Gage, of Revolutionary fame, who was the second son of the first Viscount Gage, of Sussex County, England. She is also related to the late Lyman Tyner, one-time Secretary of the Treasury. Her brother, Mr. John Gage van Rensselaer Tyner, after spending two years at Oxford is now making his home in England.

Graduated From Oxford.

Mr. Dugdale, who is a nephew of Field Marshal Lord Roberts, is a graduate of Oxford. He was later sent to Shanghai as honorary attache of the British Embassy and two years later came to this country on a lecture tour.

Miss Tyner is visiting her fiance's parents at their country home near London, where she will remain until Mrs. Tyner joins her later in the spring.

Miss Jester Wed To Mr. Giddings

Ceremony Takes Place at Albright Memorial Church Here.

The marriage of Miss Doris Jester, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Emmet E. Jester, of Takoma Park, Md., to Mr. John Giddings, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Giddings, of Clifton Park, Md., took place Friday night in the Albright Memorial church.

The Rev. George Schnabel, pastor, performed the ceremony. Easter lilies and ferns were used for decorations.

The bride's only attendant was her sister, Miss Martha Jester, and the best man was Mr. Warren Magner, of Clifton Park.

The bride wore a long fitted gown of white crepe with long sleeves, white satin slippers and a veil of tulle with a cap of chateau lace. She carried a white prayer book, from which hung long satin ribbons and lilies of the valley. The maid of honor was attired in a yellow chiffon gown with a turban to match and yellow linen slippers, and carried an arm bouquet of yellow roses.

After the ceremony Mr. Giddings and his bride departed for a motor trip.

Douglas Chandors Return From Texas

Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Chandor have returned to the Shoreham from Texas. Mr. Chandor, noted portrait artist, attended the ceremonies in Fort Worth, Tex., at which his portrait of President Roosevelt was presented to the State of Texas.

Mr. Chandor, although known as an English painter, is an adopted Texan, having passed considerable time in the Southern State in recent years. He also has painted portraits of President Hoover and his Cabinet, the Prince of Wales, Queen Marie of Rumania and other celebrities. Mr. and Mrs. Chandor expect to be in Washington for an extended visit.

Col. and Mrs. Guggenheim To Attend Horse Show

Col. and Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim will come to Washington late next week to remain for the National Capital Horse Show at Bradley Farms, May 9, 10 and 11.

On May 8 Mr. and Mrs. Carlos del Mar will entertain at a dinner for Col. and Mrs. Guggenheim and on May 11 Capt. and Mrs. John P. Jackson will entertain at a buffet supper in their honor at their home on McGill Terrace.

Engagement to Briton Is Announced

MISS PEGGY TYNER,

whose mother, Mrs. Elonzo Tyner, has announced her engagement to Mr. John Dugdale, son of Col. and Mrs. Arthur Dugdale, of London, England. The wedding will take place in London in July. Miss Tyner is now visiting her fiancé's parents at their country estate near London.

Facial Cream Gives the Skin A New Bloom

Leaves Thin Film to Which Make-up Adheres for 6 or 8 Hours.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

IT WOULD seem like magic if it weren't science! That one cream can make the skin look years younger from six to eight hours at a time is almost too good to be true!

Thanks to a certain expert chemist and cosmetician there is such a cream with just such rejuvenating properties. You put it on first thing in the morning, and then apply your make-up. Although the cream is instantaneously absorbed by the skin it leaves the thinnest possible film to which make-up adheres for long periods.

The aging woman who would recapture her youth has but to seek it in this wonderful cream.

It is impossible to say what rare ingredients are in the cream. It is sufficient to say that its effect is like that of a freshening rain on parched and dusty fields.

You've seen them—parching, shriveling up, drying—and then, a shower of cooling rain. The grass is green, the whole earth fresh and new. This cream does just that to tired and aging skins. It brings a new bloom, a new smoothness. The skin is literally aglow with youth!

An elderly woman can have no truer friend than such a cream. The old beyond her years will receive it enthusiastically. It is a new discovery, an innovation in the cosmetic field which deserves sincere acclaim.

A New Nail Polish.

"Tile" is the name of a fascinating shade of nail polish which has recently appeared on the store counters. It was concocted particularly for navy blue. "It's a blue season," the stylists have said. "Very well," said the beauty specialists, "we'll bring out the beauty of blue with new make-up and new polishes!" And so it happened. Several new make-up ensembles have made their appearance. Now this delightful "tile" polish. It's a marvelous blend of orange, yellow rose and deep red. The result is a gorgeous Tahitian shade, defying any name but "tile."

It comes with a polish remover in a neat, reasonably priced little package. However, you may buy it alone if you already have your favorite remover.

Nonirritating Powder.

It was not until recent years that scientists discovered many of the ills to which the human flesh seemed heir were caused by powder. Sometimes it was the starch, sometimes the talc, and sometimes the orris root which disagreed with the individual and caused frequent colds or surface irritations.

As a result of this discovery a Frenchman made up a powder which is free of all these. It is an exceptionally fine-textured powder, which imparts a smooth chiffon finish to the skin.

Combs for Eyelashes.

Nothing gives the eyes the subtle beauty and rare distinction that beautifully groomed lashes and brows do. Nothing else makes them quite as irresistible, quite as fascinating. In view of these facts why do you suppose there are so few well groomed brows and lashes? Why so few eyes as charming as they might be? The answer seems to center around the bother attached to eye care. Most women do not want to be bothered to use an eyelash cream on their lashes each night, a small brush on their brows and the tweezers as regularly as "stragglers" appear.

They will, however, use a comb. Why? Well, chalk one down for feminine contrariness. Or, perhaps it's because the combs themselves are such intriguing little things, for all the world like regular combs, except hundreds of times smaller. They were designed especialy for the brows and lashes, with fine, delicate teeth.

It cannot be denied they serve their purpose well. The woman who uses such a comb as often as she makes her toilet will find that her brows and her lashes are better groomed and that they will, with this consistent care, improve indefinitely.

The little combs come in peach, lavender, green and tortoise shell. They cost only 15 cents.

Smart Accessories.

Smartly dressed women insist on lovely accessories. They want even the smallest details to be part of the charming picture. So—with discrimination they choose their compacts, cigarette case and even comb case to match.

Lovely sets in black and silver topped with marquesite initials, are available in a downtown store for a small sum. It isn't necessary to buy all three, as they are sold separately, but the three together make a smart trio.

Miniature Etchings.

The visitor who wants a souvenir in perfect taste will find nothing lovelier than the miniature etchings which artist, Don Swann, has made of Washington scenes. These exquisite little pictures are lovely things to frame and keep always as Washington reminders.

A local store now featuring these etchings gives you a wide choice range. There are some of the Lincoln Memorial, the Capitol, Washington Monument, the Masonic Temple and Pennsylvania avenue. Yours for 50 cents.

Homes Listed for Garden Week Tour Include Three Periods of Architecture

Among the fine manor houses designed in Virginia by Thomas Jefferson is Bremo, in Fluvanna County. This fine old mansion, built at least 115 years ago, is open to visitors this week as part of the annual tour sponsored by the Garden Club of Virginia. Bremo was built by Gen. John Hartwell Cocke and today is in the possession of one of his descendants.

Bremo, Fluvanna County, Is Fine Example of Temple Type.

THREE distinct periods of Virginia architecture are exemplified in the historic old houses opened this week as part of the annual tour sponsored by the Garden Club of Virginia.

According to an eminent architect of the South, William Lawrence Bottomley, these types include the earliest houses in the State—those which reflect a strong English influence and which are situated in the Tidewater sections of the James, York and Potomac Rivers; those which show the rather classical lines of Italian palaces, a form of architecture which gained favor during the reigns of the Georges; and those houses which lean strongly toward the temple type, with rows of columns two stories high.

A particularly fine example of the third period in Virginia architecture is Bremo in Fluvanna County, designed by Thomas Jefferson and built by Gen. John Hartwell Cocke about 1818. Today Bremo is in the possession of Mrs. Forney Johnston, one of Gen. Cocke's descendants. Mrs. Johnston has arranged for the estate to be open to visitors during the Garden Club's tour.

Bremo, which resembles another famous house designed by Jefferson—his own home, Monticello, atop a mountain near Charlottesville—is classical in proportion and style. It extends more than 200 feet in length, has three Tucan porticos, a loggia connected to two flanking dependencies by long colonnades of brick. The adobe slave quarters, stables, fine trees and group of brick service buildings help make Bremo one of the most interesting as well as one of the most beautiful of the old places listed for the tour.

Most of the proceeds from this year's tour will be spent on planting the grounds of Wilton, a house which belongs to the second period in Virginia architecture. A penciled inscription on the back of a cornice molding proves Wilton was built in 1752. Its first owner was William Randolph, who saw to it that all eight rooms and both halls were beautifully pannelled in the Georgian style.

Has Typical Georgian Entrance.

Not long ago Wilton was moved brick by brick, timber by timber, to a new site above Richmond where it now faces the river as it originally did. This complete restoration was made possible by the National Society of the Colonial Dames of America in the State of Virginia.

The exterior brick of the mansion's wall surfaces is a curious and beautiful mauve gray, while window jambs, lintels and arches are of bright cherry-colored handmade brick. Inside the house the original color scheme of ivory and green in olive, light, and grayish tones is used throughout.

Wilton has four great chimneys,

Designed by Jefferson, Its Lines Resemble Monticello.

a roof with only a slight pitch, many windows made up of small panes, and a typical Georgian entrance.

Yet to be restored is Bacon's Castle, an example of the first period in Virginia architecture. Probably built in 1667, it has endured many changes and additions so that its original lines are considerably marred. When it was first built it had leaded glass casements with brick mullions which must have given it the appearance of a late medieval building. In a later addition to the original house is embedded a brick building distinctly Tudor in many details. The curved gable ends, chimney stacks and steep roof proclaim a style of architecture which flourished in England as early as the time of Henry VIII.

Among the other old places included in the Garden Club's tour are Claremont Manor, Shirley, Tuckahoe, York Hall, Mount Airy and Mount Sabine.

Fresh Daintiness Is Assured On Warm Days by This Frock

Pattern, No. 737.

HERE IS a dress that will help you to keep that fresh daintiness you want on the warm days to come. The shaped side panels in the skirt, the cut of the blouse section, and the V neck are excellent aids to slenderizing. The short sleeves are cool, but not too informal.

This pattern is suitable for voile, novelty cotton, or sheer silk. It is cut in sizes 36 to 46, each size guaranteed accurate. Size 40 requires 4⅝ yards of 35-inch fabric and ¾-yard for contrast.

Woman Elected Judge as 'Joke'

But 'Aunt Lucy' Takes Post, Plans Crime Drive.

The inhabitants of Blue Springs, Mo., elected Mrs. Lucy McGuire police judge as a joke. Now the joke is on them as Mrs. McGuire, affectionately known as "Aunt Lucy," is taking her job seriously, according to the Associated Press.

She has announced she intends to inaugurate such a reign of terror against all offenders that Carrie Nation in comparison will seem "like a timid, retiring old lady who never did anything more exciting than bake a cake or knit a sweater."

Crime so far has been pretty dull but 'Aunt Lucy" is ready to spring into action at a moment's notice. If necessary she'll use her ironing board or kitchen sink as a bar of justice. Her husband has offered her the use of his filling station for a courtroom.

Here's a Menu Wives Can Fix In 20 Minutes

Sample Dinner Is Planned for Evening After Bridge Party.

By Dorothea Duncan.

THAT GOOD old thrust about the dinner of cold sardines and potato chips on the day the little woman goes out for a rubber of bridge is a worn-out story. Any housewife who can plan seven dinners a week is not going to fall down on her family just because of one weekly session of bridge. A little planning and a few turns around the kitchen in the morning will start off a dinner that needs only 20 minutes to complete.

First of all choose a menu that calls for preliminary preparation and very little attention at the last moment. Here is a sample menu that runs true to form:

Dinner Menu.

Mulligatawny Soup
(canned variety)
Tuna Fish a la King in Taost Cases
Sliced Tomato Salad
Fresh Asparagus with Melted Butter
Whole Wheat Bread and Butter
Lemon Coconut Cake
Coffee Milk (for children)

The soup won't need a thought until just a few minutes before dinner is ready, the asparagus may be washed and the tough ends removed during the preliminary preparation and kept in the vegetable box in the refrigerator until time to cook. The lemon coconut cake, a new version of your favorite white cake, may be made in the morning.

Lemon Coconut Cake.

Bake a white cake in three 8-inch layers, placing enough batter in each pan to make a 1½ inch layer when baked. Spread lemon coconut filling one-half inch thick over tops of layers and let stand until filling is set. Then place one layer on top of the other and spread filling on sides as thickly as possible. Sprinkle moist, shredded coconut generously over the sides and around top edge of cake to make a 1-inch rim, leaving circle of filling in center uncovered.

Lemon Coconut Filling.

3 cups water
½ cup lemon juice
¾ teaspoon salt
1½ cups sugar
10 tablespoons cornstarch
4 egg yolks
1 tablespoon grated lemon rind
1 tablespoon butter
1½ cups moist, shredded coconut

Put two cups water, lemon juice, salt and one cup sugar in top of double boiler and bring to a boil over direct heat. Place over boiling water. Add slowly, paste of cornstarch and one cup cold water, and cook five minutes, stirring constantly. Beat egg yolks with one-half cup sugar; add slowly to cornstarch mixture, and cook two minutes, stirring constantly. Add lemon rind and butter. Cool ten minutes before spreading on cake. Sprinkle with coconut as directed above.

Tuna Fish a la King.

1 tablespoon butter
1 cup mushrooms
1 tablespoon green pepper
4 tablespoons flour
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon celery salt
Few grains cayenne
1½ cups milk
1 cup chicken stock
2 cups flaked tuna fish
1 tablespoon parsley, chopped
1 tablespoon pimiento, cut in small pieces

Chicken stock may be made by adding one or two chicken bouillon cubes to a cup of boiling water. Melt butter, add mushrooms and green pepper. Stir and cook five minutes. Mix flour and seasonings and add to fat. Cook five minutes. Add milk and chicken stock slowly. Add tuna fish, parsley and pimiento. Reheat.

Dorothea Duncan will be glad to help you with your culinary problems. Write to her, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope, in care of The Washington Post.

CULBERTSON on BRIDGE

1390.

Humorous But Sound.

Whenever the bidding has proceeded—one spade—two spades—three spades—four spades, by a partnership, gales of laughter arise from opponents or kibitzers. I must confess I do not understand the reason for this laughter. Such bidding is very normal and commonplace among expert players using the streamlined 1935 System and is not as humorous and unsound as some people think.

On the deal below, a Double Dummy inspection of all four hands shows a game in spades can be made by North and South. However, with correct bidding North and South will stop at three odd, which is the correct final contract, as it takes three finesses to make four odd.

South, Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

	♠ J 8 6 3 ♡ K 9 5 4 ◇ 8 4 3 ♣ J 9
♠ 7 2 ♡ A 10 6 ◇ A 10 7 2 ♣ 8 6 3 2	W N E S	♠ K ♡ Q 8 3 2 ◇ K 9 6 5 ♣ K 7 5 4
	♠ A Q 10 9 5 4 ♡ J 7 ◇ Q J ♣ A Q 10

The bidding: (Figures after bids refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

South	West	North	East
1♠	Pass	2♠(1)	Pass(2)
3♠(3)	Pass	Pass(4)	Pass
Pass

1—It is proper to raise partner's bid with only ½ honor-trick, if the hand contains adequate trump support and a doubleton. This is a "shaded raise," made only when the next opponent has passed.

2—There is the temptation to double for a take-out with this hand because of support for the other three suits. Such a double, with so few honor-tricks in the hand, and when vulnerable, would be foolhardy.

3—South sees hope of game if his partner's raise was a good one. South is not strong enough to jump to game himself and makes the only possible game-invitational rebid open to him.

4—North has told his full story on the first round. If South can not jump to four himself, there cannot be a good play for game.

The Play.

If West opens a low heart four-odd can be defeated, provided that South, reasoning that West has led from the Queen, ducks. With any other opening declarer will play West for the heart Ace and East for the spade and club Kings. Since all three of these cards are in favorable positions, a seven-to-one shot, four can be made, but to reach that contract would be losing bridge in the long run.

OBJECT—Not MATRIMONY

By LILLIAN BARKER.

OBLIVIOUS of the queue of standees behind her, of noonday crowds milling about her, even oblivious of Gladys, who stood right at her side, Katrina stared at the envelope in her hand. The one containing a certified check for six hundred and twenty-five dollars and addressed to

Mr. Tazewell Bronson
Palazzo Dell'Aquila,
Rome, Italy.

"Post your letter, honey," whispered Glad. "You're holding up the line. People are just looking daggers at you. They want to get off their mail, don't you see?"

"Oh," Trina blushed guiltily, dropped her letter into the post-office receiver. "I'd forgotten . . . how stupid! I didn't realize I was delaying others."

"Of course you didn't, darling. I saw you were distracted. That's why I spoke up." Gladys, a bride of a month—on the strength of Frank Holloway's increase in salary they'd celebrated New Year's by getting married—buttoned a caracul coat up close about her neck, hooked her arm through Katrina's and out they scurried to Thirty-fourth street.

"Where do we go from here?" asked the New Year's bride.

Debt Paid Off.

"I thought," said Trina, trudging through heavy snow toward Seventh avenue, "that I'd take you to the Hotel Pennsylvania tea room to lunch. It's only a block away and the weather's so rotten."

"You're taking me! How come? Why don't we go Dutch, per usual? You must be feeling terribly rich today—"

"No, not terribly rich. But at last I've got the load of that $625-dollar debt to Tazewell Bronson off my shoulders, so . . . so I want to treat you to luncheon. After lunch I'd love to 'blow' you to a matinee. We both have the day free. Why not make the most of it?"

"Why not? I adore this 'lady-of-leisure' feeling and all the privileges that go with it. When I think of the months and months I slaved away in that old Blue Moon Restaurant . . . gee, sometimes I wonder how I stood it!"

"You stood it at first because you were determined to stay on in New York and study scultpure . . . because of your ambition . . . and later you endured it, also, in order to be near Frank. Aren't those the reasons?"

"Right-o! And now, thanks to you, to the job and raise in salary your fiance, Mel Edwards, gave my boy friend, I'm married. Married and studying scultpure, with which I'll do something one of these days—a little something, anyhow, watch me—in the daytime instead of at night, after working hours. And am I grateful to you? You'll never know how grateful."

"Talk about happy newlyweds," Glad's eyes were love-illumined, "only this morning at breakfast Frank said he knew there never could have been a happier married pair. This fur coat I'm dolled up in," exulted Gladys, "is the first I've ever owed: Doesn't it look like opulence? But as the wife of Melvin Edward, you'll soon be sporting chinchilla and sables, I'll bet. But," passing from the hotel lobby into the tea room, "meanwhile there are no flies on the pretty squirrel coat you're wearing—your grand Christmas present from Madame Lombardi. She's certainly done a lot for you, Katrina, that opera star . . . giving you a $35-dollar-a-week job, lavishing on you presents galore and getting three singing engagements for you. She's been your good angel right straight through, hasn't she?"

Gladys Was Curious.

Preoccupied with ordering lunch, Trnia let Gladys' question slide. But returning to it with enthusiasm, she said:

"Indeed, Rosa has been my good angel. Except for her and those singing engagements you just spoke of I would still be in Taz Bronson's debt. Fof while I saved every nickel I could, as secretary to America's most famous coloratura, I just had to be stylishly dressed. That Mme. Lombardi made plain at the outset. But of course, then she knew nothing of the 'I. O. U.' I'd given Tazewell."

"You don't need to tell me you kept that dark, you proud, close-mouthed, tantalizing creature! But now explain to me this vocal miracle; how it was you blossomed out as a drawing-room artist overnight. When I learned that you were singing in the homes of New York plutocrats you could've knocked me over with a feather. It was all I could do to believe it."

"No wonder!" Katrina, mincing over lobster patty, smiled: "I could hardly believe it myself. But please, Glad, don't ever call me an artist again. I'm a million miles from that. All I can do is warble Southern folksongs in my own amateurish way——"

"Amateurish or not, Rosa Lombardi must've been sold on your warbling."

"She was, strangely enough, after coming in and catching me 'in the act' while I was doing the folksongs for Elena Holt. You know, my boarding school chum now married and in Europe——"

"Whew," whistled Glad. "Wasn't that a break? But what I want to know now is, why Rosa Lombardi thought you needed money. You said a moment ago she wasn't aware of your obligation to Taz Bronson. . ."

"She wasn't," replied Katrina. "Not till the evening she caught me carolling away just to please Elena," the same evening, as it happened, that Mel took out the lease on our future home. The penthouse just across the corridor, which he rented a few minutes after we looked at it."

Wanted to Settle.

"In a mighty big hurry, wasn't he?"

"Uh huh, because he didn't want to risk losing the place, so he planked down the first month's rent notwithstanding the fact I'd just refused to marry him at once, as he wished. And pressed for my reason, I had to confess the debt I was determined to pay off before my wedding. By confessing I put my foot into it, too——"

"I can imagine. Your fiance insisted upon paying the debt for you," concluded Glad, dropping two lumps of sugar into her tea cup. "That would be exactly like him."

"And that's what he did. But," proudly, "I wouldn't let him. Then Rosa and I had a session. She, unable to see any good reason for delaying a marriage she'd done everything in her power to bring about, also wormed out of me admission of the debt to Taz. And that led to more trouble, for she also wanted to relieve me of the burden of the obligation. But determined to clear the debt myself, I refused to accept her help. Gifts are one thing and cash another."

Rosa Had a Plan.

Katrina sipped tea and continued: "But Rosa Lombardi is not a business woman for nothing. Take it from me, she's one artist with plenty of business acumen. She's also a matchmaker of matchmakers. So, bent on speeding up my marriage to her brother-in-law, she put on her thinking cap, remembered the Southern airs she'd overheard me sing, scrammed to her booking agent with me in tow, if you please, and you know all that followed"

"To think, you had a fortune in your throat and didn't realize it! If only you'd made the discovery earlier you could undoubtedly have carved out a real career in New York as a singer of Southern songs. But you should worry when you're going to marry Mel Edwards next Thursday—the day after your third and last booking at Mrs. Calhoun Beverley's, isn't it? And when you'll have that ritzy penthouse to live in! Your wedding dress, though, Trina, is it finished?"

"It will be this afternoon. Want to go with me to try it on after the matinee?"

"Do I? Try and shake me!"

From the matinee, the rollicking comedy, the bride in the caracul coat and the expectant bride in the squirrel one, went to Mme. Ernestine's, Fifty-fifth street dressmaker known far and wide for her trousseaux. And Glad, seeing her girl friend emerge from behind black portieres, arrayed in "bodiced," cowl-necked white satin gown and tulle veil, exclaimed:

"You beauty, Katrina Harman! You raving, raving beauty! I never saw a person so entrancingly, so 'bridally' lovely. And won't Mel Edwards be proud of you?"

"I h-o-p-e so," Trina drawled, regarding herself in a long gilt mirror.

But tragically enough, as she answered Gladys, her mind was more on Tazewell Bronson than on Melvin Edwards.

Bad News at Home.

Katrina's mind was still on Tazewell when she reached home. But no sooner was she in the hall than her thoughts jumped — leaped, really—to her fiance. For Rosa, hearing her step, burst out of the living room, wringing her hands and screaming:

"Trina, Trina, Mel's in the Gotham Hospital. He's just had an emergency operation for acute appendicitis, and his physician, Dr. Cunningham, the celebrated surgeon, just told me over the phone to be prepared for the worst. If Melvin should die, what if Melvin should die, almost on the eve of your marriage?"

"What if he should die!" Katrina repeated as the bridal box slipped from her hand to the floor. "What if Mel s-h-o-u-ld d-i-e!"

The proceeds of the party will be used to carry on the relief and education activities of the chapter.

Dinner for Jane Addams.

Advance registrations for the dinner to be held May 2 at the Willard Hotel in honor of Jane Addams includes diplomats, society women, social workers, Government employes, labor leaders and students. Miss Edith Goode, chairman of the dinner committee, announced yesterday.

Other Washingtonians on the general committee of arrangements for the anniversary are Mrs. Ernest Gruening, Mrs. Michael Straus, Miss Mary Anderson, Mrs. Frank Hecht, Mrs. Frederick Libby, Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, Mrs. L. Corrin Strong and Miss Elizabeth Wheeler.

Mrs. Kahn Wins Contest.

Mrs. Florence Kahn, of 2513 Liberty Heights avenue, Baltimore, Md., has been awarded the first prize in the annual short-story contest sponsored by the National League of American Pen Women. The title of Mrs. Kahn's winning story is "Stand Up Straight." It is a tragedy and is related from the standpoint of a child.

Mrs. Kahn, a member of the Baltimore branch of the league, has also made a name for herself in dramatic writing.

Mrs. Quinter to Be Hostess.

Mrs. William S. Quinter, president of the Rector's Aid Society, will be the hostess at the spring dinner, which takes place from 6 to 7:30 o'clock tomorrow night in the parish hall of All Souls' Memorial Episcopal Church, Connecticut avenue and Woodley place northwest.

Assisting Mrs. Quinter will be the other officers and heads of units. In addition to the dinner a puppet show will be presented by Charles D. Drayton and a harp recital by Katherine Riggs.

The Kentucky Society of Washington will hold its annual meeting and election of officers at the Willard Hotel tonight.

A reception will be held at 9:10 o'clock, with dancing following until 1 o'clock.

Girls Warned Of a Shortage In Office Jobs

TOO MANY girls are seeking office careers, Miss Clare L. Lewis, associate director of the Employment Service for the State of New York, warns.

Miss Lewis is making a plea to parents and to school authorities to direct girls into other fields than office work because of the great oversupply of such workers. She says:

"Commercial classes should no longer be a dumping ground, as has been the case in so many instances in the past, for the girls who fail to make good in regular academic courses.

"We already have on every hand thousands of would-be office workers, and the schools are turning out hundreds more each year. The chances of employment for these younger girls are almost nil."

Sales positions in stores and factory work offer alternatives to business careers, Miss Lewis believes. She also says there is "a variety of opportunities outside the home available to the girl who has had a really adequate training in domestic science.

Aversion to factory work, Miss Lewis points out, is often only a matter of prejudice as "labor legislation tends to make so-called factory work more desirable in every way by providing for better workrooms shorter hours and pay for overtime."

What TODAY Means

"Taurus."

IF APRIL 24 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:45 to 11:45 a. m., from 1:45 to 3:45 p. m., and from 7:45 to 9:45 p. m. The danger periods are from 6:45 to 8:45 a. m., from 11:45 a. m. to 1:45 p. m., and from 9:45 to 11:45 p. m.

Attempts may be made on this date by a friend or acquaintance to sway your judgment or influence you regarding some action. It will be wise to follow your own inclination or ideas, regardless of what others may think. Gumption will be required to achieve satisfactory results in business, and any lack of shrewdness, through indifference, is to be guarded against.

Be careful that through some form of social activity you do not miss an important engagement. It will pay to give strict attention to any subject under discussion, as there is a possibility of musunderstandings arising through lack of mental alertness. It is likely to save a lot of trouble if in negotiating any deal involving money, verbal agreements are confirmed in writing.

This should be an auspicious day for friendly gatherings after business hours, but during them a great deal of discretion should be exercised. Married and engaged couples, as well as those going through the first stages of love sickness, should be careful on this date not to allow envious suspicions to cause them to jump to hasty conclusions, before they have something definite to justify any such ideas as they may entertain.

If a woman and April 24 is your birthday, you have exceptional planning ability, as well as the capacity to successfully manage difficult enterprises. You have a great deal of diplomacy and it may be that it will be through the amount of tact you possess, your social or business adriotness will become recognized and many advantages will be gained. You probably will be very fortunate in all matters involving the heart. Social welfare, educational or literary work, may offer you an unlimited opportunity to display a latent talent.

The child born on April 24 when it arrives at preparatory school age, may display keener interests in the study of history and geography than in any of its other studies, so an effort should be made to stimulate its interests in the rest.

If a man and April 24 is your natal day, you have the ability to adjust yourself to all types of people, as well as any environment. This should be a great asset in your business connections.

Among the many cartoons and sketches in Susan B. Anthony's scrapbooks (now in the rare book room, Library of Congress) are these. The bombastic finger-pointing, table-pounder at the top represents a critic's idea of the typical suffragist of the 90's. The other sketch is of Anna Howard Shaw, noted preacher, physician and lecturer, whom Senator Hattie W. Caraway (right) recently mentioned as "the best woman orator I ever heard."

Senator Caraway Pays Tribute to Orator, Product of the Table-Banging Era

Susan B. Anthony Was the Dominant Figure in Her Life.

"The skirt has no place on the rostrum!" "Woman's place is in the home!" These twin slogans became the trumpet-calls for factions opposing the women orators of the past. Yet, even then, women were successfully invading pulpit, platform and forum. In these fields, were they ever recognized as man's equal? This is the second of a series on women public speakers.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

"SHE WAS THE best woman orator I ever heard," said Senator Hattie W. Caraway, referring to Anna Howard Shaw—the English-born minister and physician who became an American suffragist leader and the most popular lecturer of her time.

"I don't believe I ever listened to a more impressive speaker, man or woman, than Dr. Shaw," continued this quiet, unassuming member of Congress, who believes, in most cases, "men should do the talking;" who confines her own speech-making to her own State; who made her first public address—"the worst my friends ever heard"—at the opening of her first campaign.

Yet even Mrs. Caraway has proved the skirt can have a place on the rostrum, for she has taken the gavel in hand and presided over the Senate a number of times. And, in campaign years, down in Arkansas, she has been known to make as many as 39 speeches in seven days. "But I'm no orator," Mrs. Caraway admitted. "I just talk."

Her record of 39 speeches in a week was perhaps never surpassed by the greatest of all feminine speech-makers — Anna Howard Shaw, the woman who was regarded as a nine-days' wonder back in the bombastic, table-banging period of oratory when lung-power went further than logic.

Spoke From Pulpit.

Furthermore, Anna Shaw prepared for the lecture platform by the way of the pulpit in the seventies when most people still believed "women should keep silent in church."

A decade before, in England, Catherine Booth, the "Mother of the Salvation Army," had already begun to preach, but was still meeting violent opposition. Perhaps no woman public speaker was so patient and so eloquent in the face of prejudice as she. When she preached in the street and led her little band in singing Gospel hymns, the mob, encouraged by press and pulpit, stoned, shot and cursed; but in the eyes of Catherine Booth these offenders were only naughty children, who might listen even as they jeered.

In America, opposition against women preachers was less obvious and more insidious. But Anna Shaw as a child had felt the call "to talk to people, to tell them things. Just why, just what, I did not know," she wrote in her autobiography, "but I had begun to preach in the silent woods, to stand up on stumps and address the unresponsive trees, to feel the stir of aspiration within me."

She was 24 when she spent six weeks preparing for her first real sermon, given in Ashton, Mich. That sermon, successful though it was, brought a shower of rebukes from her parents. But the latter counted for little against the determination of this girl "to talk to people, to tell them things." She continued preaching, paid her own expenses through college by this means, and later while she was pastor of a church in Massachusetts, attended Boston Medical School, from which she graduated in 1885.

Minister Born in England Hailed as "the Equal of Any Man."

Associated With Frances Willard.

Eventually becoming interested in the temperance movement, she was associated with Frances Willard, another superior orator, who, according to Anna Shaw, was "an intensely emotional person who swayed others by their emotions rather than by logic."

The dominant figure in Anna Howard Shaw's life, however, was Susan B. Anthony. It was this woman with whom Anna Shaw worked, shoulder to shoulder, in the cause of woman suffrage. Referring to Miss Anthony as "Aunt Susan," Anna Shaw wrote of her as "an unceasing inspiration * * * the torch that illumined my life * * * the greatest woman I have ever known.

As an orator Anna Shaw not only surpassed "Aunt Susan" but every other woman of her day. With a voice that had that indefinable quality that makes an impressive speaker, with a deep and gentle humor, a tolerant philosophy and an astounding courage, she came to be acclaimed as one of the greatest orators of her day—an orator whose spell was not to be evaded.

Her usual procedure in planning an address was to decide first on the points she wished to make. Then she thought out (never wrote) her speech. Frequently, however, she discarded all plans at the last moment and spoke extemporaneously on some theme suggested by the atmosphere of the gathering or by the words of another speaker.

Acquired Large Vocabulary.

Early in her career, she acquired a large vocabulary and conquered stage fright, although by her own admission, she was generally nervous before she began to speak and was "glad of it, because the tension kept me on my toes."

Sensitive to her audience, she knew immediately if her listeners were becoming bored (which was rare, indeed). And although she kept audiences spellbound throughout the United States and Europe, she made only three addresses that satisfied her completely.

One of these was in Coatesville, Pa., where she talked from a torch-lit temporary platform and delivered a temperance speech that caused Coatesville, a stronghold of the "wets," to vote "dry" the following day.

Another was in Chicago, during the World's Fair in 1893, where she gave a lecture before the International Council of Women. The third of her great speeches was delivered in the State Church of Sweden, where she delivered the first sermon ever preached by a woman.

Her success as an orator led Anna Shaw to be proclaimed on all sides as "the equal of any man." Once, when someone told her she had the brains of a man, however, she replied in a deep voice, "Before I thank you for that compliment, show me the man!"

Noted Contemporaries.

Although she was the greatest woman orator of her day, there were a number of her contemporaries who, as public speakers, asked no odds from any man. Among these were Belva Lockwood, a noted lawyer and reformer who obtained congressional action in favor of the admission of members of her sex to the United States Supreme Court; Charlotte Perkins Gilman, a prominent lecturer on labor problems and woman's rights; and Carrie Chapman Catt, who succeeded Anna Howard Shaw as president of the National Suffrage Association.

While she was an ardent suffragist, Anna Howard Shaw prided herself on not being a "militant feminist." Yet it was the "militant feminist" who eventually achieved the goal for which she fought for 30 years.

Tomorrow: The "militant feminists" and "soap-box orators."

X-Ray Big Factor in War on Disease

Rays Are Particularly Valuable in Cancer Treatment.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

WITHIN a few months after its discovery by Wilhelm Konrad Roentgen in 1895, X-rays were used in the treatment of disease. Experiment and investigation have expanded their usefulness until at the present time the X-ray has become an important factor in the control of many diseases.

Contrary to the usual conception, X-rays are not electricity. Neither are they a form of light. They are produced by the passage of high voltage electricity through an X-ray (vacuum) tube. The waves travel in straight lines in all directions and have the velocity of light.

Roughly, X-ray therapy can be divided into superficial and deep, depending on the voltage or power employed. For superficial application up to approximately 180,000 volts are used. Beyond that figure the rays produced are applicable to deeper structures. With the perfection of apparatus the voltage used has been increased by leaps and bounds and as much as 1,000,000 volts have been employed.

Practically all of the various skin diseases have been satisfactorily treated. Here the longer rays, produced by low voltage, are needed. To treat diseases of the internal organs the more penetrating rays are required which are produced by high voltage aided by filtration.

A factor which aids in securing penetration is the use of filters—that is, the X-rays are passed through various thicknesses of metal, such as aluminum, copper and tin. By this means the longer rays, which are so important in the treatment of skin diseases, are filtered out and only the shorter waves which penetrate deeply into the tissues are permitted to pass.

It is in the field of cancer that X-ray treatment is a particularly valuable agent and, for the best results, there should be close correlation between surgery, X-ray, and radium. In many cases, such as in breast cancer, surgery should be preceded and followed by X-ray treatment. By giving the treatment over different areas, always pointing toward the cancer, larger doses can be given without damage to the skin. Even in the hopeless cases of cancer the X-rays will frequently provide relief from pain.

Shorter Exposures Over Longer Periods Give Best Results.

Treatment by means of X-rays becomes a dangerous weapon in the hands of the untrained and inexperienced. If not properly given it may result in permanent injury to normal tissues. Like any other form of treatment it should be given in known doses, and measured amounts can be administered with modern apparatus. In the earlier days of this form of treatment it was felt that massive quantities should be given in as short a time as possible, but experience has shown that shorter exposures given over a longer interval produce the best results.

There is some danger that X-ray may be considered of value in all diseases. While the applications of these powerful waves of force are numerous, the curative qualities are relatively limited, when one considers the entire field of medicine. Each year, however, brings some new knowledge, making treatment safer and more effective.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

Lack of Woman-to-Woman Courtesy Deplored by One Who Saw Hair Pulling Narrowly Averted in Senate Squabble Over Seats.

By Mary Haworth.

"IF I WERE asked to make a constructive criticism of this country today," Margaret Culkin Banning comments editorially in the current issue of the Ladies' Home Journal, "and replied that it would be well to improve its manners, the answer might seem trivial at first thought. But it would not be an inconsequent remark, nor a slight criticism.

"Some attention given to good manners in both public and private affairs would be a blessing all around just now . . . Better manners would improve the national bearing and dignity, steady our nerves and reduce current disorder and ill temper very considerably. . . . Manners are morals, as shown in conduct and in the prevalent custom.

* * * *

". . . This is where women can make themselves useful," continues Miss Banning. ". . . There is the possible effect of mannerly dealing with thousands of tradespeople. I don't mean merely saying 'Thank you' when you take a package, but a giving of reassurance, a friendliness, an exchange of sympathy which everyone needs just now . . . "

* * * *

All of which is so remarkably apropos of a discussion now holding the center of the stage in this column that I would feel derelict in duty not to reprint it. Indeed, the first letter in the following symposium affords a graphic illustration of the need for women to become consciously active in promoting a return to better manners.

M. H.

Feels Very Strongly.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: From your reply to "Jaundiced" last Friday, I gather you had in mind stimulating controversy on the subject of women's manners with sales women in department stores, for you seemed to lean toward philosophic endurance, or change of position on the part of the plaintive sales woman as the only solution.

Now, I feel very strongly on the subject of women's manners among themselves, not only in stores, but everywhere. Yesterday I witnessed an example of disgusting ferocity: two different groups of women contending for seats at a crowded Senate hearing.

* * * *

In each case a woman had left her seat, leaving her coat and pocketbook on her chair as a sort of "claim stake," while she absented herself less than three minutes. No sooner did she leave than another woman promptly appropriated the chair, depositing the former occupant's coat and purse on the floor. When the first woman returned, hot words were exchanged, but in both cases cited, the usurper failed to yield.

* * * *

Those nearby were subjected to the sorry spectacle of four supposed ladies (?), red-faced and mean-looking, exchanging unpleasantries, while the baffled sergeant at arms looked on helplessly—probably wondering how he should go about ejecting the women should they start hair-pulling, as seemed to threaten any minute.

These women are well-groomed, intelligent-looking equals in both cases, but they behaved as though they had no standard of woman-to-woman courtesy. And that is the crux of the matter and deserving of serious thought. When, how and where are women to learn to treat other women in public places with at least a modicum of graciousness? Is there some primitive mistrust in all of us which makes us take unfair advantage, practice petty meannesses, lord it over other women when they serve us or perform some paid service?

* * * *

Men may be ruthless with each other in competition for something important, but has anyone ever seen a man savagely elbow another out of an elevator unless a fire or panic threatened? I detest generalizations dividing men and women. I prefer to group them as "human beings," with much the same faults and virtues. Yet it may be women have not been around enough to learn how to be impersonally polite with each other, as men have.

I hope "Jaundiced's" letter will be widely read and that the women readers will resolve to check up on themselves. Why save all our consideration and charm for the masculine members of the human race? Why indeed?

M. S.

One Woman's Opinion.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: You say you hope someone will come forward with the customer's story in the shopping situation outlined by "Jaundiced." Probably every customer and every salesgirl sees things from a different angle—so I can only give you mine for what it is worth.

First of all, I can't believe the average shopper is deliberately rude or overbearing with whoever is showing her merchandise. I think she is usually more tired, discouraged and hurried than anything else. I know the average busy woman with the thousand-and-one obligations of social life in Washington simply hasn't time for "window shopping." When she is able to slip a few hours for shopping into her schedule—perhaps once in several weeks—she has very definite needs in mind and is much more anxious to find what she is looking for than the salesgirl is to sell it to her.

* * * *

Since the depression we are all lucky to have one dress for each necessity—for sports, for street wear, for afternoon, and one or two for evening. We can't afford mistakes, for whatever we choose we must wear and wear until we and our friends are sick of the very sight of it. In ready-made things all these points have to be found: The size, the style, the cut, the fit, the color, the becomingness and, most of all, the price.

* * * *

When we find anything, from shoes to hats, that answers all these needs, we call it a lucky day. We have to have a test to go by. For myself, I know when I look at myself in the fitting room mirror that if I haven't the urge to wear the garment somewhere at once, I will never like it. So I give to the salesgirls, who has been so sweet and patient, a regretful "Thank you," and go on my weary way. Sincerely yours, A Customer Who Knows She Isn't ALWAYS RIGHT.

Voice of 'Gay Nineties.'

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: After reading the letter from "Jaundiced" in last Friday's paper, I want to state my own experience in the working field. My first efforts were as a saleswoman—in the gay nineties! It was during the Christmas holidays in the toy department of one of the largest stores in Louisville, Ky.

I learned in even this short period that patience, kindness, understanding and courtesy were the outstanding tools of the successful saleswoman and that her Waterloo may be oversensitivity. I had not always had these qualities, but had to cultivate them, especially patience. I found that patience and kindness are their own reward.

* * * *

Some of the best "breaks" I have ever had came because of patience and kindness shown others. In the workaday world you certainly meet with various types of persons, and the one I found most trying was the snob. (Dictionary definition: "A vulgar person who apes gentility.")

* * * *

Those accustomed to wealth and position are never snobbish or pompous. Those who come from the ranks by the "hard knocks" route are more apt to be. I know whereof I speak, for my husband's work brought us in close contact with the immensely wealthy class. He always said to me, "If you ever have to go into the working world, try to find a place among those who are used to riches, for you will find them always kind and gracious."

In some ways I think I know the working world better than "Jaundiced" does. When my father was living he was a prominent lawyer in southern Ohio. We were never rich, yet I was not educated for the working world as in those days women didn't hold positions as they do now. After my father died and my first marriage went on the rocks I had to become self-supporting. I took work of the most menial kind, and at first my associates of the so-called working class did not take kindly to me. But consistent patience and kindliness won over those that were most worthy.

Later, when I became hard of hearing, I learned how unkind the world can be toward one who is afflicted. No matter what walk of life we take, all of us meet with people who are unjust and inconsiderate. So I have figured out that the best we working people can do is to get interested in the finer things in life, and thus forget the ugly side of things. We can always remember, too, that "a soft answer turneth away wrath." As I am past 60, I think I have some understanding of the trials and tribulations of life. What say?

Parents Given Tips on Taking Youths Abroad

Travel Has No Advantages Unless Carefully Planned, Expert Warns.

SHOULD children be educated through travel? That question, a pertinent one to parents who are planning summer vacation trips, is discussed by Josette Frank in the current issue of Child Study.

The too-young child does not get much good out of travel, Miss Frank believes. She also warns against travel that is not carefully planned and ably supervised.

"The most we can say for travel for children up to 7 or 8," she says, "is that it is possible to see that they do not suffer. Even living in another country is of slight permanent value to little children. If they must go, their daily routine needs to be guarded so that they are disturbed as little as posible. Outdoor play is preferable to trudging through galleries and museums. Sightseeing should be cut down to a minimum and, if at all possible, a period of quiet country or seashore life should break the summer.

Emphasize Excursions.

When children up to 14 or 15 are taken abroad, it is ordinarly as part of a family party; and the trip is usually geared to the desires of the adults. Somewhat similar precautions against overfatigue and wear some sightseeing need to be observed even with older children.

"Boys and girls of upper high school and college age are ordinarily enthusiastic tourists, but not necessarily together with parents and younger children. Small groups with a reliable tutor, older friend, or group leader are excellent. In planning a trip with or for young people, a definite, though flexible, itinerary with much activity is important. Cameras, bicycles, tennis racquets, and other hobby equipment are valuable adjuncts to even very light traveling. The chief benefits of foreign travel is to get the "feel" of the country, and especially to come in contact with its inhabitants. Casual and friendly contacts are best made through the medium of a shared interest.

Travel in the U. S.

"In relation to travel in the United States, where language is no barrier, there are endless possibilities for learning about topography, governmental projects, like the big dams and reforestation, transportation, and differences in the attitudes and behavior of people living under the same government. All these and others ought to prove highly stimulating to older children and help them to a better understanding of the country in which they live."

Nice Will Fill Posts By May; Power Job Likely for Weller

Norris Reported Choice for Position on Racing Board.

Tabler Is Favored As Road Chairman

Governor Gives Assent to $1,409,000 Asked for State Relief.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., April 23.—Gov. Harry W. Nice, here tonight to attend the annual banquet of the Izaak Walton Chapter, said he would name appointees to his various commissions and to several other vacant posts before May 1, a week from tomorrow.

While the Governor said he could not announce at this time his appointees, it was learned that former United States Senator O. E. Weller would be named chairman of the public service commission.

There will be but one vacancy on the State racing commission, and it is understood that the Governor will name George R. Norris, Baltimore Republican, to this post.

Hanna in Line.

Another vacancy this year is to be on the State insurance commission, and Wessler S. Hanna, department comptroller of Baltimore, is slated for the job.

It was revealed yesterday that Dr. H. E. Tabler will be appointed chairman of the State roads commission this week.

Another vacancy, which will be filled shortly, is a Fifth District judgeship, due to the death of Judge Nicholas Green. Linwood L. Clark, of Anne Arundel County, will likely be named.

The other majority place on the conservation commission will likely go to Dr. David G. Everhart, Frederick Republican and sportsman.

The Governor said he had reached no decision as to the appointment of a State banking commissioner, but that he planned to make the appointment within the next week.

Approve Relief Request.

Gov. Nice said that he today approved application for $1,409,000 in Federal funds for May for Maryland and that the application had been sent to Relief Administrator Hopkins at Washington.

This, he said, was nearly $400,000 short of the amount of Federal relief funds received in April. He hopes, despite conditions in the western Maryland area, where the relief load will be greater during May than in April, that money received from the gross sales tax will enable Maryland to meet its relief needs.

Speaking to 500 sportsmen, Gov. Nice said he would appoint a Western Maryland sportsman as a member of the new three-man conservation commission, and that his duties would be to look after the interests of fresh-water fishermen and upland hunting.

While the Governor did not announce tonight the name of the man he was considering as the other majority member of the conservation commission, it is generally understood that the appointee will be Dr. David G. Everhart, Frederick Republican and a leading sportsman of that city.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Leonardtown, Md., April 23.—William S. Thrall, chairman of the St. Mary County Republican State central committee, and well-known business man and seafood dealer, has been unanimously indorsed by leading Republicans here for the position of conservation commissioner of the Western Shore of Maryland.

This position carries a salary of $3,000 per year.

400 Expected At Conference On Social Work

Leaders Will Be Heard at State Sessions in Frederick.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., April 23.—Final plans for the annual State conference of social welfare here April 29 and 30 were outlined at a meeting of the Frederick committee yesterday. Between 350 and 400 delegates, representing the various charitable and social work organizations of Maryland, are expected.

At a luncheon meeting addresses will be made by the president, Miss Anna D. Ward, Baltimore, and Miss Margaret E. Rich, assistant general director of the Family Welfare Association of America. Group conferences will be held under the leadership of Miss Mary Goodley and Miss Katherine Griffith, National Catholic School of Social Service; Dr. Bertha Kraus, professor of social work, Carnegie Institute of Technology, Pittsburgh; Miss Anita Faatz, supervisor of State Aid and Charities, Baltimore; Miss Ruth B. Blakeslee, regional social worker of the FERA, Baltimore; Miss Lucia Murchison, director social service department, Children's Hospital, Washington, and David J. Lewis, Representative from the Sixth District.

Round-table discussions and group conferences will be held the second day. Dr. George H. Preston, Baltimore, commissioner of mental hygiene, will preside at the luncheon meeting and an address will be made by Miss Edith Abbott, dean of the school of social service administration, University of Chicago.

The local committee is composed of Lewis R. Dertzbaugh, head of the Frederick Welfare Board, chairman; Dr. Ignatius Bjorlee, superintendent of the Maryland State School for the Deaf; Charles McC. Mathias, president of the Frederick branch of the Maryland Children's Aid Society; Mrs. Michael E. Pue, county probation officer and executive secretary of the Children's Aid Society; Miss Pauline Miller, executive secretary of the local welfare board; Dr. Henry I. Stahr, president of Hood College; Mrs. Richard Mallin, Mrs. Edgar H. McBride, Miss Florence Garner, Holmes D. Baker, James H. Gambrill, jr., Walter F. Zeigler and John A. Shires.

Banking Law For Virginia Brings Attack

Bronson Asserts Present Statute Is Ample if Enforced.

Louderback Urges Non-Salaried Commission for Institutions.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., April 23.—Opposition to new criminal penalties for violations of the banking code of Virginia, on the ground that provisions for civil liability are ample, was voiced today by Sherlock Bronson, Richmond attorney and a receiver for the defunct American Bank & Trust Co., in a statement before the sub-committee named by the Governor's advisory council to inquire into the possible need of revision of the State banking laws.

Perfect enforcement of the banking laws is as impossible as enforcement of the Volstead act was, Bronson told his listeners, and to attempt to check every act of "dishonest directors" would result in laws that would handicap well-managed banks.

Most banks are well managed, he declared, though the American Bank & Trust Co. indulged in "every unsound practice ever known."

Commission Is Praised.

Bronson praised the State corporation commission for its supervision of Virginia banks in the face of what he said were extreme difficulties during rapid price changes in the last five years.

He said the commission, if it had the time, could govern the State banks as well as any regulatory body could.

H. H. Louderback, Page County member of the House of Delegates, who said he had had 25 years of experience as a "small town banker," recommended that State banks should be supervised by a nonsalaried banking commission, penalty clauses should be inserted in State laws now without them, and provisions now incorporated in the national banking law should be included in the State code.

Among the changes Louderback said should be made in State law to correspond with national requirements are:

Limit to 10 per cent (instead of 15) the amount a State bank can lend to any single borrower;

Limit loans on mortgages to a fixed percentage of the appraised value of the property involved;

Make it illegal to use as collateral second-mortgage paper or stocks except to secure loans already contracted;

Mortgage Paper Defense.

Make it illegal for a bank to lend to an affiliate except on gilt-edge security;

Eliminate loopholes in the code whereby banks doing trust business and trust companies doing banking business may do a security business;

Provide for the removal of bank officials who will not obey the law and rules.

Members of the banking subcommittee present were Senator George W. Layman, chairman; Dr. E. A. Kincaid, professor of finance at the University of Virginia; William Meade Fletcher, of the State corporation commission; J. Sinclair Brown, Salem banker and Speaker of the House, and William R. Shands, State research director.

Records Are Moved At Frederick Court

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., April 23.—Thousands of court papers and records dating from the formation of the county in 1748, many yellow with age, are being removed from the old equity room on the second floor of the courthouse to a larger room lately vacated by the employment service and for many years occupied by the election supervisors. The papers include equity cases, deeds, mortgages and contracts, and among the records are criminal, appeal, trial, judgment, license and miscellaneous dockets. Eli G. Haugh, clerk of the court, is supervising the removal and classifying the old documents.

The most interesting record contains the order of the 12 Frederick County judges repudiating the English stamp act in 1765, and was removed from the equity room years ago and is now under glass in the clerk's office.

17 Contracts Let for Work Upon Roads

More Than $100,000 Is Involved in Jobs in Maryland.

State Roads Official Is Coming Here to Confer on PWA Funds.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, April 23.—The award of 17 contracts, all but one for furnishing road surface treatment material and for applying it to highways, was announced today by the Maryland roads commission.

The Atlantic Refining Co., of Philadelphia, obtained awards of eight contracts, for a total of 1,821,197 gallons of surface treatment material. The total cost was $78,119.

For applying the material, the Bituminous Service Co., of West Chester, Pa., submitted low bids and received five contracts. The amount involved was $10,510.

Two other companies also submitted low bids for parts of the resurfacing jobs. Phillips Bros., of Salisbury, Md., was awarded two bids, totaling $2,966, and Carter Bros., Inc., was awarded one contract, at a price of $1,546.

A. W. Hewitt & Sons bid $16,123 for construction of 1.63 miles of gravel highway from Friendship toward Old Colony Cove. They received the award.

Following are the quantities of material to be supplied contractors and the counties in which they will work:

Phillips Brothers, 395,536 gallons; Dorchester, Wicomico, Worcester, Caroline, Cecil, Kent and Queen Annes counties.

Carter Brothers, 190,933 gallons; Baltimore and Harford counties.

Bituminous Service Co., 1,233,728 gallons; Howard, Montgomery, Prince Georges, Carroll, Frederick, Allegany, Garrett, Washington, Anne Arundel, Baltimore, Calvert, Charles and St. Marys counties.

State Roads Officials Coming to Washington

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., April 23.—Chairman Nathan L. Smith of the State Roads Commission will go to Washington Thursday to confer with Federal Bureau of Roads officials regarding Maryland's allotment of $7,700,000 in Federal Public Works funds.

It has been announced that Maryland will receive that allotment from the $800,000,000 roads fund of the $4,000,000,000 public works program, but Federal officials have not yet announced when it will be made available.

The funds will be expended by the new State roads commission named yesterday by Gov. Nice. Smith, now acting chairman, is to become chief engineer on May 15, succeeding H. D. Williar.

Dr. Homer E. Tabler, Republican, Hancock physician, was named chairman. The other two members are C. Nice Wilkerson, Cumberland, Republican, and Frank F. Luthardt, Baltimore attorney, Democrat.

60 Volumes Received By W. & L. Library

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Lexington, Va., April 23.—Sixty volumes of the Carnegie Corporation's gift of art boks to Washington and Lee have been received and placed on display in the Carnegie Library of the university, it was announced today by Miss Blanche McCrum, librarian. The books, described as "extremely valuable" although no estimate of their worth has been made pending further sudy, constitute part of an art reference library that eventually will include 209 volumes.

Twenty-two of the 60 volumes are in German, seven in French, one in Dutch, one in Italian and the remainder are in English.

200 Delegates Attend Carroll Youth Session

Religious Education Body Sponsors Gathering at Westminster.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Westminster, Md., April 23.—More than 200 young people and church workers attended the first Carroll County Youth Conference, held here yesterday, under auspices of the Carroll County Council of Religious Education.

Sherwood Eddy, of New York, lecturer and author, and former secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association for Asia, made the two prinicpal addresses during the sessions at Western Maryland College.

The main philosophy in the Far East today, Mr. Eddy said, is Communism and Christianity, adding that the Christian religion must meet the needs of these people more adequately, in order to become the principal philosophy. Using as his text last night, the theme of the conference, "Christian Youth Building a New World," the speaker drew a comparison between Russia and the United States, with the assertion that the former provided justice but lacked liberty, while the opposite was true in the United States. Concluding, Mr. Eddy said that before civilization can be permanently enduring justice and liberty must be merged.

During the morning session, Dr. W. R. Barnhardt, professor of religious education at Hood College, Frederick, spoke on "A Christian in Our Modern World."

Leaders and discussion groups, held during the afternoon, included "The Christian View of Life," chairman, Richard Simms, Finksburg; leaders, Dr. M. J. Shroyer, Westminster Theological Seminary; Marshall R. Wolfe, professor of history and sociology at Blue Ridge College, New Windsor, and George K. Mather, director of leadership training of the Carroll County Council.

"The Church in the Modern World," chairman, Charles Bankert, Silver Run; leaders, Dr. Lawrence Little, dean of the School of Religious Education, Western Maryland College; Berkley O. Bowman, professor of mathematics, Blue Ridge College, and the Rev. W. H. Stone, pastor, Pipe Creek charge, Methodist Protestant Church.

"Life Partners," chairman, Miss Novella E. Keilholtz, Blue Ridge College; leaders, Frank Liddle, director of boys' work, Y. M. C. A., Baltimore; Mrs. Frank Liddle and the Rev. J. Earl Cummings, pastor, Westminster M. P. Church.

Yesterday's program also included a banquet, with Dr. L. M. Bertholf, professor of biology, Western Maryland College, as toastmaster.

Garden Week Brings Crowds Of Williamsburg Visitors

Colonial Setting Restored to Duke of Gloucester Street; Governor's Palace and Garden Are Open to the Public.

By Elizabeth C. Taylor.

By a Special Correspondent.

More than eight years ago work was started on restoration of the colonial capitol of Williamsburg, Va., through the interest of John D. Rockefeller, jr. Always an interesting place because of its historical associations and typical colonial buildings, the town is flooded with visitors attracted by the beauty of the gardens and homes which are open during Virginia Garden Week.

Duke of Gloucester street, the principal thoroughfare, has undergone many changes during the year in restoring the colonial setting of Williamsburg. The street itself, which had become modernized, has been returned to the old surface, cobble gutters, lamps, brick and flagstone sidewalks. The gardens of the Governor's Palace have been restored to the lines and designs of the days when the building was the most important in the colonies. While the palace is not completed, the landscaping is in readiness for the restoration of the building, of which only the foundations remained a few years ago. The capitol and the Raleigh Tavern have been reconstructed and furnished as exhibitions.

Recently the Ludwell-Paradise House and kitchen were opened with Mrs. John D. Rockefeller jr.'s loan collection of American folk art. The local pilgrimage is sponsored by the Garden Club of Williamsburg and by organizations of the Bruton Parish Church in co-operation with the restoration.

The President's house, which dates from 1732 and has been the home of all presidents of the College of William nad Mary; the Cole house, built about 1750; the Brush house and garden, the Orrell house and the Archibald Blair house and garden will be open today and tomorrow. Friday and Saturday four other homes will be oper to the public. They are the Carter-Saunders house and garden, the Waller house and garden, built in 1753 and owned by Benjamin Waller, clerk of the council and a judge of the Admiralty Court; the Powell-Hallam house, dating from about 1756, and the Kerr house and garden.

The Governor's palace, outbuildings and gardens will be open all week, as will the Capitol, Raleigh Tavern, Coke-Garrett house and garden and the Bassett Hall garden.

Not far from Williamsburg are Jamestown and Yorktown, both important in history and worthy of a visit at this time. The island of Jamestown covers about 22 acres and is the site of the first English settlement in America. The island is owned by the Association for the Preservation of Virginia Antiquities and is kept as a park with the remaining foundations, old church, fortifications and graveyard.

At Yorktown, York Hall, formerly known as the Nelson House, may be seen. It is an imposing brick mansion with a garden surrounded by a brick wall and was once the home of Gov. Thomas Nelson. Grace Church, built about 1699 from marl rock from the York River, will also be open.

Medical Unit Indorses Plan For Relief Fees

Washington County Group Proposes State Pay for Indigent Cases.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., April 23.—The Washington County Medical Society, which for the last two years has furnished $20,000 annually in services to indigent sick here, has gone on record as favoring acceptance of Federal and State fees for this service.

Dr. W. D. Campbell, delegate of the county medical society to the State convention opening today in Baltimore, has been instructed to bring the matter before the convention.

Members of the county medical society have furnished this service to indigent sick free. Some of the members had been apprehensive lest the practice of accepting Federal and State fees would lead eventually to State medicine.

The society, however, heard Dr. E. H. Bitner, of Martinsburg, W. Va., explain the plan as it is is in operation in West Virginia, where physicians receive fees for services rendered to needy sick.

The plan of accepting fees, as suggested by the local society, would have to be indorsed by the FERA and the State relief organization.

The State society is expected to pass on the question at the session tomorrow in Baltimore.

Sheriff's Son Reveals Vast Liquor Plot

Distilleries Run With Official Sanction Bared at Trial.

23 Accused in Roanoke Include Prosecutor, Kin of Gen. Lee.

By the Associated Press.

Roanoke, Va., April 23.—J. P. Hodges, jr., son of a late sheriff of Franklin County and brother of former Sheriff D. Wilson Hodges, today related from the witness stand an amazing story of liquor distilleries operated with official protection and of distilleries and automobiles without protection seized, the liquor sold and the money divided.

He was still on the witness stand on direct examination, after about an hour and a half of testimony when United States District Court adjourned until tomorrow in the trial of 23 persons under indictment charging them with conspiracy to violate the internal revenue laws through operation of a gigantic liquor ring in the county.

D. Wilson Hodges, brother of the witness, was one of four defendants out of 34 persons and a corporation named in the indictment who pleaded guilty.

Former Deputy a Witness.

J. P. Hodges, jr., who said he now lives at Jackson, Tenn., and is 23 years old, followed on the witness stand L. E. Bridges, a former deputy sheriff, who testified that J. P. Hodges, sr., while sheriff, tried to persuade him to promote and offer protection to distilleries in the county which would pay tribute. During the afternoon, Bridges was given a grueling cross-examination by Stephen D. Timberlake, Staunton attorney, representing Charles Carter Lee, Commonwealth's attorney of Franklin and a defendant in the conspiracy charges.

Bridges asserted on direct examination that the late Sheriff Hodges made the proposals to him at a conference to which he was invited by a letter on the stationery and signed with the name of Carter Lee, and that Lee and Luther Smith, another deputy sheriff, were present. Bridges said he worked "as honestly as I could under instructions from my superior officers."

Hodges is expected to go under cross-examination early tomorrow.

To Attack Witnesses.

The defense announced at the outset that it would attack the credibility of Government witnesses and try to show them law violators filled with fear and eager to obtain protection for themselves by accusing men who had prosecuted them.

Timberlake said the defense would seek to show that three of the Government's principal witnesses were unworthy of belief by any jury. He praised Lee, a grandson of Charles Carter Lee, elder brother of Gen. Robert E. Lee, as not only a good citizen but an able, alert and successful prosecutor who had incurred the enmity of those he prosecuted.

District Attorney Hutcheson outlined the Government's charges without going into specific details of the testimony to be offered. He said the charge was conspiracy to violate the internal revenue laws and not to violate prohibition laws. He said 68 overt acts were listed in the indictment; but that if the Government could establish that there was a conspiracy, only one overt act need be proved.

Driver Gets 15 Months In Pedestrian's Death

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chambersburg, Pa., April 23.—George M. Fahnestock, 29, of Thurmont, Md., pleaded guilty in Franklin County Court today to a charge of involuntary manslaughter and was sentenced to 15 months in jail and fined $25.

The case grew out of the death of Arthur Wells, aged Negro, hurt fatally when struck by a car driven by Fahnestock here April 3.

Sterilization and Birth Control Favored to Aid Virginia Group

Prof. Garnett Urges Steps, With Educational Program, as Way to Capitalize Potential Abilities of 'Marginal' Population.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., April 23.—Extension of the sterilization law, encouragement of birth control and development of an educational program to meet needs were recommended today by Prof. W. E. Garnett, of Virginia Tech, as a means of capitalizing on the potential ability of Virginia's "excessive marginal population."

"Adverse environmental conditions" and not "inferior biological inheritance," the educator said in an article in the May issue of the Virginia Journal of Education, are responsible for the fact that "practically half of the white families of Virginia's rural areas occupy a marginal status."

Sterilization is necessary, however, to eliminate the "defective family strains" responsible for more than 12,000 feeble-minded and additional thousands of near morons, he held.

Tables were printed to show that there was practically as much native ability among the children of marginal families as among those of more prosperous persons.

Eight Screen Features Included in List of "Box Office Champions for March"

Capital Liked Them All When Locally Shown

Quality Steadily Improves; Johnny J. Jones Is Here; About the Showshops.

Reprinted from yesterday's last edition.

By Nelson B. Bell.

The motion pictures given national release during the month of March were of so superior a quality of excellence that it required eight entries to make up the list of Box-Office Champions for March, compiled from bona fide weekly financial statements and published in its issue of April 20 by the Motion Picture Herald.

First, second, third, fourth and fifth ratings, strangely enough, were uncontested. Three releases were tied for sixth place. All of the pictures included among the March champs have been viewed on Washington's first-run screens. In the main, the ratings are about as critical and public opinion here would have listed them.

The undisputed five leaders for the month were "Roberta," "Ruggles of Red Gap," "The Little Colonel," "The Scarlet Pimpernel" and "Folies Bergere," in the order named. Also in the order named, the stars of these pictures were Irene Dunne, Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers; Charles Laughton, Charles Ruggles and Mary Boland; Shirley Temple, Lionel Barrymore and "Bill" Robinson; Leslie Howard and Merle Oberon; Maurice Chevalier, Ann Sothern and Merle Oberon.

Those That Tied.

The three in the stalemate for sixth place are "The Whole Town's Talking," starring Edward G. Robinson; "West Point of the Air," starring Wallace Beery, and "Sequoia," that extraordinary nature study, in which the animals were the major factor of appeal, with Jean Parker, Russell Hardie and Paul Hurst in the principal human roles.

This is a score that casts up to one champion for RKO-Radio—the leader of them all, by the way; two for United Artists, two for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and one each for Paramount, Fox and Columbia.

The Motion Picture Herald's valuable monthly summary of the screen leaders in Nation-wide acclaim is still a valuable bit of evidence that Washington is one of the best and most discriminating "show towns" in the United States.

Today is Shirley Temple's sixth birthday. Washington's thousands of juvenile admirers of the "biggest little star of them all" will not be unmindful of her as she lights the six candles on her birthday cake. These Capital kiddies are doing precisely what adult patrons of the theater did on the occasion of the revered Marie Dressler's last birthday — signing their names upon a huge birthday book, occupying a place of honor in the lobby of Loew's Palace Theater. This handsomely bound birthday volume, which will convey to Shirley the collective best wishes of Washington's younger movie fandom, will be shipped to the tiny star as an anniversary gift from her "fans" in the Nation's Capital. The autograph book is dedicated to Shirley as "Our Little Girl," which, needless to say, by a shrewd stroke of showmanship, happens to be the title of her next picture!

"One of the Jones Boys."

The season of outdoor amusements will get under way in Washington tomorrow, when, at noon, the Johnny J. Jones Exposition will set up its "fronts" and unfurl its bunting out at Fifteenth and H streets northeast. The engagement will be for 10 days.

The Johnny J. Jones Exposition stands in no immediate need of identification in the minds of Washington's amusement-seekers. It has been coming here every spring since a time when the memory of man runneth not to the contrary. It is now controlled and operated by Lawrence Phillips, local motion picture exhibitor and for many years—before the era of loudspeakers—announcer out at Mr. Griffith's concrete ballyard whose "Batter-e-e-e-es for Washin'ton" was known to every enthusiast who ever heard maple smack horseside or pop bottle bean ump.

Under its old, original trade name, Larry brings to town this year the biggest "exposition" the Johnny J. Jones label ever has covered—30 cars, each 70 feet in length, loaded with 22 attractions, some of them newly acquired from the Chicago Century of Progress Exposition, which, during two years of operation, attracted millions. These former World's Fair features are the "Rocket Ride" and quadruple "Loop-the-Loop."

Two Sessions a Day.

The show will not be any customary all-day grind carnival exhibit. Like the big circus attractions that come to town, the Johnny Jones outfit will show only twice a day—from 1 to 5 and 7 to 11 p. m.

Johnny J. Jones, during his lifetime, was the leading citizen of Dubois, Pa. He looked upon the "show business" not as a gamble and something to be taken lightly in a spirit of speculation, but as a legitimate business to which attention to public taste, benefit and welfare, a strict adherence to the ethics of big business and a thoughtful sense of entertainment values would bring rewards as substantial as any other form of worth-while endeavor.

It is in the same spirit that Larry Phillips is carrying on the traditions of this traveling exposition.

Public response to the high caliber of the Jones enterprise is ample justification of the elevated plane upon which it is conducted.

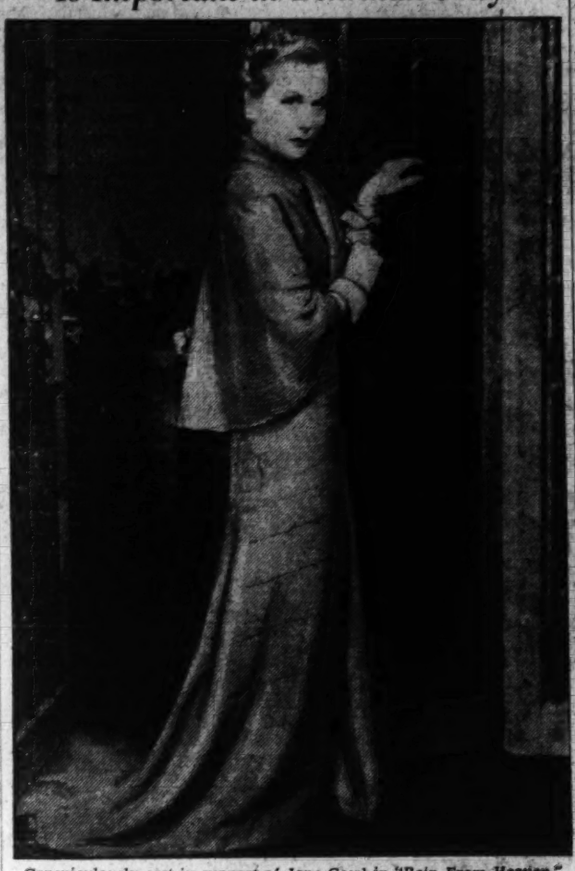
Is Important in Behrman Play



Conspicuously cast in support of Jane Cowl in "Rain From Heaven," the Theater Guild's production of the S. N. Behrman comedy which opened a week's engagement in the National Theater last night, is Lily Cahill, attractively pictured above. Although not recently seen on a Washington stage, Miss Cahill's performance with Katharine Cornell in Sidney Howard's "Alien Corn" was viewed by many residents of the Capital either in Baltimore, where it opened, or in New York. She also is a popular figure on the London stage. There should be something about "Rain From Heaven" elsewhere on this page—and probably is.

nell's production of Sidney Howard's drama of "Alien Corn," either when it opened in Baltimore or during its run in New York.

Following that engagement, Miss Cahill toured Canada in the Lynn Fontanne role in Robert Emmett Sherwood's "Reunion in Vienna." Even more recently she has appeared in two London productions, where she has enjoyed a wide popularity ever since her first appearance there several seasons back with Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne in "Caprice."

During her Washington engagement Miss Cahill will be the house guest of her brother-in-law and sister, Capt. and Mrs. S. A. Greenwell, 2319 Twentieth street.

Books Ace Band.

Gus Arnheim and his internationally famous "ace band from movieland" will furnish the stage attraction at the Earle Theater for the week beginning Friday, May 3, according to announcement made yesterday by John J. Payette, general manager of the Warner interests in the Washington territory.

Arnheim, who gained his reputation during seven straight years at the Cocoanut Grove, in Los Angeles—where screen stars gathered nightly to dance to his music—will bring with him his own radio stars of 1935. Gene Sheldon, who was recently seen in "Roberta;" Louise Fischer, the Downey sisters, John and Edna Torrence, Jimmy Newell, Maxine Tappen, Woody Herman and Johnny Hamilton are included in the company.

The Arnheim orchestra is well known to radio listeners through its many coast-to-coast network broadcasts. The band has been featured in a number of pictures, including "Puttin' on the Ritz," with Harry Richman; "The Cuban," "Flying High" and "Her Majesty, Love."

Arnheim himself is well known as the composer of such song hits as "Sweet and Lovely," "It Must Be True" and "I Surrender, Dear."

One strolling by the Belasco Theater this week—and perchance attempting to get in—might be tempted to believe that he had stumbled upon a recrudescence of those fabulous old days when David Warfield, Sothern and Marlowe, Katharine Cornell and others of comparable note were accustomed to tax the capacity of the famous old Lafayette Square house almost to the bursting point. For that is the kind of business the Belasco is doing this week with George Arliss in "The Iron Duke."

From the time of its opening in February, under the new policy of presenting foreign-made pictures, the Belasco has done an increasingly profitable business. Many have been the times when orchestra floor and mezzanine have been packed to capacity, but during this engagement, which opened Saturday, it has been necessary to throw open the theoretically abandoned first balcony to accommodate the crowds that have stormed the house. Nice going. So nice, in fact, that "The Iron Duke" seems destined for a long run—perhaps the longest of any under the policy inaugurated by the new management.

Notables Coming Down.

When the National Theater Players open their eleventh consecutive season in the National Theater next Sunday night, April 28, with an Actors' Fund Benefit performance, jointly sponsored by Daniel Frohman, dean of producers and president of the Actors Fund of America, and Stephen E. Cochran, impresario of the troupe, a notable group of New Yorkers will be down for the occasion.

Leonard Bergman, representing the A. L. Erlanger Amusement Enterprises, owners of the National Theater; Ward Morehouse, dramatic critic of the New York Sun; Jack Pulaski, of Variety; G. R. Thomas, of Vandamm's Studios; Brock Pemberton, producer of "Personal Appearance" and "Ceiling Zero;" Wales Winter and Chamberlain Brown, important booking officials from Broadway, will be among those who will augment the representative Washington audience that will be on hand to assist in one of America's worthiest charities as well as to greet the National Players upon the inauguration of what promises to be their most successful season in years.

The play to be presented, of course, will be "Accent on Youth," still running successfully in New York.

The first six plays of the National Theater Players' "little season," incidentally, will be as follows: "Accent on Youth," "Petticoat Fever," the Dennis King vehicle that was to have opened in Washington, but didn't; "The Bishop Misbehaves," in which Walter Connolly has been starring successfully; "The Outsider," "The Bride the Sun Shines On" and "Immoral Support." An unusual number of benefits for local societies, organizations, clubs, alumni associations and the like, have been booked for these opening weeks of what bids fair to be an auxiliary season running well into the summer.

Booking Is Changed.

Owing to the fact that the studio laboratories are unable to get prints ready in time, "The Bride of Frankenstein," with Boris Karloff and Elsa Lanchester (Mrs. Charles Laughton), will not be presented at RKO-Keith's Theater until the week of May 3.

On this ensuing Friday, accordingly, the major film offering will be "Thunder in the East," costarring Merle Oberon, very much in favor of late, and Charles Boyer, popular European star who, also, is rapidly acquiring an enviable American reputation.

"Thunder in the East" is an adaptation to the screen of the novel, "The Battle," by Claude Ferrers. The picture was originally known by the same title as the book. The novel was a popular pre-war French creation and relates a fascinating story of love, intrigue and romance from which the element of tragedy is not wholly absent. It is a United Artists release.

Deep genuflections and a low bow to that acute showman of the hostelries, Mr. Harry P. Somerville, managing director of the Hotel Willard, for his thoughtfulness in having dispatched to this desk a huge chocolate Easter egg, stuffed with choice nut meats—all in a tasty and seasonable box bearing tidings that this column greatly appreciates and heartily reciprocates.

Club Honors the Bard.

The anniversary of Shakespeare's birth will be celebrated by the Arts Club of Washington tonight by the presentation of scenes from "Cymbeline," especially adapted to the uses of this occasion by Dorothy Lawrence.

It is interesting to note that this particular play of the Bard's is seldom presented in English-speaking countries—perhaps because it is extremely crude in certain of its aspects—yet is played frequently in Germany, where, as one critic has suggested, either they do not mind the crudity or the translation has in some manner circumvented it.

The scenes selected for tonight's performance have been judiciously pruned, but not enough to impair the continuity or significance of the story. Miss Lawrence will play Imogen and Mrs. Esther Waldron the queen. Cymbeline will be played by Maurice Jarvis, Postumous by John Wilson, Iachimo by Milton Hirschfield, Pisanio by John Shaw, Philario by John Victory and Gaius Lucinus by Thomas P. Hickey.

Before the presentation of the scenes, Charles Edward Russell will discuss the play briefly and also the

New Comedy at National Is a Profound Play

Jane Cowl and Fine Cast Lend Sparkle to a Heavy Subject.

By Nelson B. Bell.

"RAIN FROM HEAVEN," The Theater Guild, Inc., presents a new play in three acts and four scenes by S. N. Behrman, with Jane Cowl and John Halliday; final offering of the American Theater Society's subscription season. Directed by Philip Moeller; setting designed by Lee Simonson. At the National Theater.

THE CAST:

Joan Eldridge	Hancey Castle
Mrs. Dingle	Alice John
Rand Eldridge	Judson Laire

Nikolai Jurin	Jose Ruben

Better than any playwright who has essayed the monumental task, S. N. Behrman in "Rain From Heaven" has penetrated and illuminated the turbulent psychologies that have conspired to make the world the place of chaos and conflict it is today.

"Rain From Heaven," through the medium of a small group of house guests in a fashionable home on the outskirts of London, deals brilliantly, at times brutally and at other times with the crackle of brittle speech and lively humor, with the social, economic and racial problems that harass the peoples of the earth.

It betrays a fine quality of straight thinking on the part of the author and a facility in expression that transcends anything he heretofore has contributed to the theater, and he has always revealed a fine flair for crisp and pungent speech. At least from the viewpoint of technical perfection, it is the best thing he has done, by far.

But "Rain From Heaven" is no primary exercise in theatergoing. It affords an evening of intellectual refreshment that demands—and receives from all thoughtful spectators—close and undivided attention, at least a casual appreciation of what is going on in the world and a predilection on the par of the auditor for a vigorous attack on the more serious of the personal and mass puzzles of living that confront a bewildered, baffled and groping mankind.

Is Well Mannered.

Into the development of his numerous theses, Mr. Behrman has not at any time introduced a jarring or false note. The bitter conflicts of ideas and ideals among the guests at Lady Wyngate's home are conducted after the well-bred fashion of ladies and gentlemen who are literate and whose arguments are logical and luminous, if at times a little loquacious. The play is staged, acted and directed in the most approved drawing-room manner and glistens with the high polish of good taste, good breeding and intellectual integrity.

These numerous clashes of viewpoint emanate from the divergent social classifications into which Lady Wyngate's guests naturally fall. There is the brilliant music critic, who has fallen afoul of Hitler's Aryan obsessions; an emigre from Russia, who has wandered the face of the earth without a country for 18 years; a young Jewish pianist, selfish, unscrupulous, ambitious, but a great artist; an American millionaire, intent upon organizing a Fascist movement in England and the United States, to safeguard the money that is his god; his wife, who hates her husband and feels no love for her daughter, but makes herself a martyr to the ecstasy of being in love with love; an Antarctic explorer, brother of the American millionaire, whose vision extends scarcely to the end of his own nose; the millionaire's young daughter and, of course, Lady Wyngate, alert, intelligent, courageous and willing always to take life in its stride.

Covers Wide Field.

Necessarily, the movement of "Rain From Heaven"—and the movement is mental and spiritual rather than any expression of physical action—covers a range of subject matter almost as far-flung and catholic in appeal as George Bernard Shaw wrote into his infinitely less compressed, concrete and convincing play of bafflement, "Too True to Be Good."

There will be no attempt here to explore the wide reaches of Mr. Behrman's intellectual excursions, beyond saying that there are no two players in the cast who do not, at one time or another, have their flings at scenes that are gracefully contrived, cleverly and powerfully written and discreetly directed.

The final moment of the play, in which Hugo Willens, the exiled critic, gives Lady Wyngate back her love and manages to make her understand why, is as beautiful and potent a bit of writing as the Washington theater has seen since the last act of Robert Emmett Sherwood's memorable "Reunion in Vienna," to which it bears a scant resemblance except in the vigor and sheer strength of its writing.

The curtain of every scene and a majority of the exits of the important players are marked by pithy speeches which last evening occasioned an incessant barrage of laughter and many outbursts of spontaneous applause.

Is Beautifully Acted.

In the roles of Lady Wyngate and Hugo Willens, Jane Cowl and John Halliday give performances that disclose the finesse, the fine interpretative sense and the effective shading that are to be expected of careers that have lent luster to the better things of the theater through the years.

Miss Cowl's reading is flawless, her poise and beauty what they always have been and her command of her scenes charming, impressive and unfailing. Mr. Halliday, in the first role he has had in the living theater since his emancipation from the celluloids, is no less efficient in everything he does. He plays with a restraint and a nice sense of timing that add distinction to a performance of the first rank.

There are others who contribute generously to the high plane of excellence early established and consistently sustained by "Rain From Heaven."

Miss Cahill Scores.

Lily Cahill, in the role of the vapid, whining, boring wife who will have none of her husband, but easily entertains a completely false suspicion regarding the fidelity of her lover, executes with conspicuous success the extremely difficult task of creating a visually perfect creature that no sane man could tolerate. Jay Fassett, the American millionaire, pursues a course of cumulative effectiveness as the play progresses. In the early scenes I was conscious of a feeling of disappointment that he seemed less skillful than he had in "As Husbands Go;" at the end of his last scene I was sure he had been infinitely more so.

No part, save that of the maid, can be looked upon as minor in this closely knit play. Hancey Castle, Jose Ruben, Judson Laire, Marshall Grant and Staats Cotsworth all do their share toward the consummation of an evening in the theater not easily forgotten.

Necessarily, the movement of "Rain From Heaven"—and the movement is mental and spiritual rather than any expression of physical action—covers a range of subject matter almost as far-flung and catholic in appeal as George Bernard Shaw wrote into his infinitely less compressed, concrete and convincing play of bafflement, "Too True to Be Good."

widespread theory that Shakespeare really was Edward Vere, seventeenth Earl of Oxford.

The Three Cossacks—Ferguson, Gaynor and Rose—whirlwind roller-skaters, appearing on the Earle stage program this week, execute all their sensational stunts on the smallest skating space in use by any contemporary team, an elevated "postage stamp" measuring 8 by 8 feet. From the front their act looks like the perfect prescription for how to keep from growing old! This team goes to Europe to open at La Paramount in Paris on June 27, with two weeks at the Savoy in London to follow and, after that, the Scala in Berlin in August—provided they don't break their necks in the meantime.

Money-on-the-Line Note.

This is the season of the year when I begin laying the coal bin against the combination of groundhog and weather man. Right now the odds are 6 to 5 and take your choice!

And has anybody heard of that old-time team of roadside acrobats, Oscar and Etheldreda, who used to make their jumps in a Ford? Whatever became of them?

Hollywood

Watching Them Make Pictures.

Hollywood, April 23.

THERE IS a large sign tacked outside the sound stage reading, "Positively No Admittance." But you are not expected to really pay attention to it, for standing guard behind the door is a special police officer. He is there to stop those who become enticed by the "No Admittance" sign, who feel that they must accept the challenge and see what's going on in there. And in there Marion Davies is making her first flicker at Warner's. Miss Davies is at work the same as she had been at Metro. She not only imported her studio bungalow from Culver City to Burbank but also the same troupe of stage hands, the special cop who guards the entrance, and the five-piece orchestra which sits on the set and plays "mood" music. This orchestra is a hangover from the silent flicker days when every big star had a violin player, at least, on the set to play music fitting the sequence he—or she—was to play.

• • • •

These small orchestras have been replaced by the phonograph records, but Miss Davies and Norma Shearer are the two stars who cling to the old custom. Once you have passed the sign, and the cop, and the orchestra and get to meet Marion Davies, you meet what can best be described as "a regular guy." She doesn't need that protection. She can take care of herself. She is easy to make conversation with, has a quick answer for a question, and is eager to swap gags. The picture she is making is "Page Miss Glory," and this particular day she was getting ready to play a love scene with Dick Powell.

"I forgot," says Miss Davies to Mr. Powell, "that you are to kiss me this afternoon and I ate scallions for lunch."

"It's all right," answers Powell. "I'll tell you what," says Miss Davies. "You go out and eat a couple of scallions and we'll be even."

• • • •

GRACE MOORE, in "Love Me Forever," has left the honky tonk night club called the Silver Slipper and is now working in the elaborate and high-class cafe Marguerite. Here, on a large stage, Miss Moore and a troupe of players are singing "Funiculi Funicula." This one number takes three days to shoot . . . The next setup is Miss Moore's dressing room after she has completed the number. The room is filled with enough flowers to open two florist shops. Leo Carrillo, who built the beautiful cafe for Miss Moore, has sent her the flowers. He is keeping his promise that she will be a big success . . . From here the next step is into the Metropolitan Opera House, the climax of the flicker. A huge set, said to be an exact duplicate of the Metropolitan, has been constructed at the General Service Studios. This set is so large that they didn't have the space to erect it at the small Columbia studio.

• • • •

Miss Moore explains that a man connected with Columbia Pictures in New York was ordered to take photograph of the Metropolitan Opera House, and that the set was copied from the photographs and that it will be perfect in all details . . . She explains that the Fortieth street stage entrance is famous, but that it is the entrance door on Thirty-ninth street through which the leading ladies, the chorus and the other females enter for a performance. The women's dressing rooms are on this side of the Met.; the men on the other. There isn't any mixed dressing at the Metropolitan Opera House.

• • • •

THE dance number for "The Great Zigfeld," which went before the camera last week, is still being filmed. Harriet Hoctor, a ballet, and three ponies continue to dance for Director Seymour Felix. This one dance routine is having a long run. For hours during takes and retakes, Miss Hoctor is dancing on her toes and is as magnificent to watch as she was in the Ziegfeld show and on the vaudeville and concert stages. It is too bad that the Harriet Hoctor fans can't be on this set watching this one number, for they could see Miss Hoctor for a longer period than they ever saw her on any stage. It seems to be a dance marathon.

Joan Crawford and Robert Montgomery are playing a scene in "No More Ladies" for Director E. H. Griffith. But it is neither Miss Crawford nor Mr. Montgomery who receives Director Griffith's attention and special care.

• • • •

There is another performer in the scene, a big sheep dog named Rover. Rover's real name is Piccadilly Circus, and he is owned by a Mrs. Herbert Manners, who stands on the set to watch her pet perform and to give instructions when necessary. Piccadilly Circus is not a regular picture dog, although it has worked in several flickers. "I only let Piccadilly Circus work in a picture when it is a class picture. I always read the script first to approve," said Mrs. Manners. She is really a member of the Colonels—that group of nonprofessionals who are associated with a performer and consider themselves part of the act. Piccadilly Circus receives $25 a day. "We wouldn't work for less," said Mrs. Manners.

U. of Virginia's Student Ballot Dispute Widens

Honor Committee Plans to Go Ahead With Election Today.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., April 23.—Another angle to the much-disputed election of officers for the academic department at the University of Virginia was added yesterday when the student senate and assembly asserted its jurisdiction.

In a statement released by George E. Harrison, of Richmond, president of the senate, notice was served on Lambdi Pi and Skull and Keys, honorary social fraternities which have traditionally offered opposing sets of candidates from their memberships, that no election would be legal until students were given another opportunity to determine the method of selecting nominees.

Two Polls Conducted.

Two polls were conducted last week on whether the present system should continue in effect or whether nominations should be made by the student assembly. One ballot, conducted by College Topics, student newspaper, which started the controversy by denouncing the nonrepresentative manner of nominating candidates, found the students in favor of placing the selections in the hands of the assembly.

At the same time the honor committee, composed of the presidents of the several departments, sounded the opinion of the electorate in a vote which resulted in an overwhelming majority in favor of no immediate change in the method of making nominations.

Third Ballot Is Set.

Temporarily, at least, the vote of the honor committee was declared, by its own authority, to constitute the official ballot, and the regular election of candidates proposed by the two societies was set for tomorrow. It was learned that the honor committee proposes to go ahead with its plans for the scheduled election, further confusing an already somewhat dazed student body.

A third referendum, still dealing with the nominating system, has been set for May 1 by yesterday's action of the senate and assembly.

Year's Best Catch Of Fish Reported

Northern Neck Still Fears Financial Disaster.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Heathsville, Va., April 23.—Northern Neck fishermen had the best catch of shad and herring of the season during the past week, although the catch was far below the catch for the same period in former years. Prices were high the middle of the week. Lower prices and larger catches are expected this week. Some of the fishing rigs caught as high as 200 shad and several thousand herring last week.

The packing houses on Coan, Yeocomico and Great Wicomico Rivers opened today for the first time this season, the latest they have opened in several years, giving employment to several hundred people in the Northern Neck.

The fishermen believe a financial disaster is certain. Unless this season is unlike all others, the fishermen say, they will not be able to repair their losses.

Fees Planned to Avoid Property Tax Increase

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., April 23.—In an effort to avoid a large increase in the city tax rate on real and personal property, the mayor and city council yesterday considered an ordinance providing for a privilege license fee on natural gas and electric meters, telephones, vending machines, pinball machines, billboards and signboards. The ordinance, if adopted, will provide more than $20,000 a year additional and indirect revenue, officials claim.

The ordinance places the amount of the fee on each meter and telephone at $1 a year, with a similar charge on vending and pinball machines, while the license on billboards and signs would be $30 a year.

Sawdust Kills Bass, 2 Men Fined $10 Each

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., April 23.—Jacob Shaffer and R. M. Sunderland, operators of a sawmill located near Bass, Hardy County, W. Va., on a stream leading into the south fork of the Potomac River, were each assessed a fine of $10 and costs in a justice's court at Moorefield yesterday on charges of dumping sawdust into a stream.

Game wardens said sawdust lodged in gills of fish had killed hundreds of bass in the south fork.

Emmitsburg Rail Case Will Be Heard May 2

Baltimore, April 23 (AP).—The State public service commission today set May 2 as the date for a public hearing on the application of the Emmitsburg Railroad to discontinue all passenger services.

The 7½-mile steam line operates between Emmitsburg and Emmitsburg Junction. In its petition to abandon passenger service, its officials asserted traffic has dropped to the vanishing point and unless relieved of the expense of the service the road will be unable to operate at all.

Nats Nip Rally in 9th to Trim A's, 6-4, as Manush Sets Pace

Bump Hadley Hurls Well Until 8th

Quits in Midst of 2-Run Attack; Ed Linke and Pettit Follow.

Cain Suffers Brunt of 14 Hits; Left Fielder Raps Out Four.

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

SHIBE PARK, Philadelphia, April 23.—Within a half-hour after Mayor J. Hampton Moore threw out the first ball to launch the American League season here today, most of the 10,891 Philadelphia fans were beseeching Manager Connie Mack to throw out Pitcher Johnny Cain.

All of which is by way of intimating that the Nats broke their three-game losing streak with a 14-hit assault on three Philadelphia pitchers, Cain absorbing the brunt of the punishment.

It ended 6 to 4 in favor of the Nats and the Nats were glad when it ended, because the A's had the tying run on base in the ninth, Bump Hadley and Ed Linke had been knocked from the box and little Lefty Leon Pettit was up to his neck in grief.

Hadley had pitched a magnificent all game for seven and two-thirds innings before Manager Bucky Harris deduced that discretion was the better part of heroism and removed him in the midst of a two-run rally that reduced the Nats' lead to 5-2.

Heinie Manush was the prime mover against Cain and Hank Lieber and LeRoy Mahaffey, who were called to the rescue after the ball game had been won. Manush emerged from his mild batting slump with three successive singles and a double.

Manush was the first victim, too, of the 20-foot appendage to the former 12-foot right-field fence in this pitch and putt baseball park. His double, high up on the fence in the ninth inning, would have been a home run in any other yard.

Numerous Double Plays.

The game began as if the two clubs were more concerned about setting a new double-play record than they were about winning the ball game. All of the first four innings were marked by twin killings, two occurring in the second as the infielders began a busy day.

As a matter of fact, it wasn't until the seventh inning that a Washington outfielder was credited with a putout and the two catches made by Johnny Stone in right field stand as their only defensive contribution of the day. Like Powell and Manush, of the Nats, Centerfielder Cramer and Rightfielder Coleman didn't have a fielding chance.

Getting the first man on base in each of the first four innings did the Nats no good, with the A's cutting 'em down with three double plays, and it was the Athletics who finally took the lead when Foxx tripled in the fourth and scored on McNair's single.

Hadley Starts Rally.

Hadley himself started the rally in the fifth that brought the Nats a 2-1 lead. A demon hitter this year, he singled to right with one out, Travis pushed him to third with two out, and Manush scored him with a sharp single to left center. The Nats went ahead when Joe Kuhel scored Manush by bouncing a single off Cain's midriff.

The A's couldn't score against Hadley in the fifth, despite Warstler's triple that began the proceedings, because Hadley struck out Cain and Cramer while the 10,891 in the park shouted for a pinch hitter for Cain.

In contrast to the A's, who had been unable to score despite three 5-Run Rally Is Aided by Morgan's Misplay.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 23.—A fly muffed by Chester Morgan, rookie Tiger fielder, with the bases loaded and two out in the fourth, gave the White Sox their chance to score five runs and defeat Detroit, 7 to 2, in the opening game of the American League season here today.

The error alone allowed two runs, but three more followed as Vic Sorrell, thrown off stride, walked Sam Jones, Sox pitcher, and Jack Hayes and Rip Radcliff clicked with timely singles. Radcliff, rookie outfielder from Louisville, led the Chicagoans' 11-hit attack off three Tiger pitchers with four consecutive singles.

The 42-year-old Jones went the route, minimizing the effect of ten Detroit hits.

Tribe's 2 Runs In 9th Down St. Louis

Indians Victorious, 7 to 6, After Early Big Lead Is Erased by Foe.

CLEVELAND, April 23.—A two-run rally in the ninth inning enabled the Cleveland Indians to defeat the St. Louis Browns, 7 to 6, today in the season opener here. Approximately 23,000 fans saw the game.

The Indians piled up five runs in the first inning, three of them knocked in by Hale's home run over the right-field fence. The Browns made four runs on four hits in the fifth frame and took the lead in the sixth when Melillo scored as Hughes threw out Burns.

Clint Brown, Cleveland pitcher who replaced Mel Harder on the mound in the fifth, was credited with the victory.

Ruth Hitless, 50,000 See Giants Win

Braves are Beaten, 6 to 5 In 11 Innings; Five Homers Pounded.

Mel Ott's Single Scores Winning Run in N. Y.'s Home ebut.

By Alan Gould.

Associated Press Sports Editor.

NEW YORK, April 23.—Despite the signal failure of Babe Ruth to find fresh inspiration in the old home town or contribute anything striking to gala proceedings, the Boston Braves carried the Giants through 11 hard-fought innings before yielding a 6-to-5 decision before the biggest crowd that has ever witnessed a National League opening in New York.

Fifty thousand fans, including 47,009 cash customers, nearly filled the Polo Grounds for the occasion. Obviously they were attracted more by the Metropolitan debut of Ruth in National League uniform than by the homecoming of the Giants. They roared lustily for the Babe, hoping to see him celebrate his return to his favorite hitting grounds with old-time vigor, but the big fellow failed dismally to produce and was out of the game, all but forgotten, by the time Mel Ott lashed a single to right to score George Davis with the winning run and break up a tense over-time struggle in the gathering gloom.

Five Homers Clouted.

There was plenty of excitement for the record outpouring, including five home runs, but Ruth failed even to get the ball out of the infield in four trips to the plate. He grounded out twice to Bill Terry, once was tossed out on a hard smash to Mark Koenig. He walked on his other trip to the plate and trotted home, in the sixth, on Pinky Whitney's circuit clout into the left-field stands. Feeling the effects of a cold and complaining of a sore leg, he yielded his outfield post to Joe Mawry in the last half of the eighth inning.

Ruth didn't seem to feel at home in the shadow of the right field stands either. The big fellow misjudged Terry's terrific smash in the third. It sailed over his head and rolled to the bull pen as the Giants' manager circled the bases for a homer. The Babe also played the rebound on Gus Mancuso's double badly in the fourth, but he made up for this by backing up against the wall and pulling down Terry's 410-foot drive in the next frame.

Buck Jordan, the Braves' first sacker, forced the game into extra innings by slamming out the fifth homer in the ninth with Rupert Thompson on base, and Allyn Stout, who had relieved Fat Freddy Fitzsimmons, in the box for the Giants. Up to that point the home club had the situation well under control, thanks to Dick Bartell's first-inning homer—his first in two years—and a steady attack that forced Walter Betts out of the game after four innings on the mound for the Braves.

Bob Smith to Rescue

The veteran Bob Smith, although touched for the fifth New York run in the sixth inning on hits by Hank Leiber and Mark Koenig, coupled with Travis Jackson's sacrifice bunt, pitched brilliantly in the relief role. Smith stopped the Giants with two on in both the ninth and tenth but finally yielded in the eleventh to an unexpected source of punch.

Adolfo Luque, 44-year-old Cuban right-hander who had relieved Stout in the ninth and held the Braves in check for the next two innings dropped a single along the right-field line to start the Giants toward victory. Joe Moore and Bartell were retired on flies, but Terry walked. Davis replaced Luque on the bases and Ott blasted the decisive hit, his third of the game. Luque received credit for the victory.

All five of the Braves' runs were due to homers. In addition to those by Whitney and Jordan, each with a man on base, big Shanty Hogan slashed one of Fitzsimmons' knuckle balls into the left-field stands in the third. Hogan collected three hits and a pass in four trips to the plate, narrowly missing another home run in the fifth when a towering drive to left sailed foul by a few feet.

Mark Koenig, playing second base for the Giants in place of Hughey Critz, was spiked by Bob Smith in

50,000 Crowd Park to See Ruth; Plays Poorly, Says He's Sick

By Paul Gallico.

A Special Correspondent.

NEW YORK, April 23.—When Babe Ruth stepped to the batting box for the first time in the first inning at the Polo Grounds here today, there were some 50,000-odd fans sitting in grand stand and bleachers to say "Hello" to him. And this is how they said it:

It began instantaneously, a great, swelling roar of voices that had a rattling background of handclapping and a high-pitched top covering of shrill whistling. Here and there one heard a different sound, the cry of the inverted soul, the knotted spirit, the hater, hidden in the crowd. He said "Boooooooo," and it was strange how you could spot two or three of them from different sides of the field.

Now, who would there be saying "Boooooooo" to the Babe's homecoming? And why weren't they buried beneath the breaking combers of the welcome? But they weren't, and they never are. Funny how one can always hear those lone dissenting voices. There is no thunder of applause loud enough to drown them.

The roar rises and swells and increases in intensity. Louder and shriller grows the whistling as the figure with the thick middle and the slim ankles pulls his cap down over his eyes and swings his bat. It was a warm and generous welcome, and echoes of it swirled around the big man's head all through his trick at the bat until he lashed a grounder down the first base line to Bill Terry, who ran him out unassisted.

The measure of Ruth today is something around 25,000 persons. Without him one would figure the Giants to open with Boston at about just that many people. Ruth

Cash Forfeits By Fighters Ordered

N. Y. Commission Invokes Weight, Appearance Unwritten Rule.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 23.—The New York State Athletic Commission revived an old unwritten rule of the past today and announced that in the future contestants in championship and other major boxing bouts would be required to post cash weight and appearance forfeits.

With the explanation that the commission desires to protect the fighters themselves, as well as the public, the boxing fathers served notice on Tony Canzoneri and Lou Ambers, who will meet May 10 in Madison Square Garden for Barney Ross' vacated lightweight championship, that they are compelled to post $2,000 each to guarantee making the 135-pound limit and assure their appearance.

The same edict was handed out to Jimmy McLarnin and Ross, who will clash May 28, with McLarnin's welterweight crown at stake at 147 pounds.

Primo, Louis Affected.

In the matter of heavyweights $2,500 forfeits must be posted to cover appearance only. This affects immediately Primo Carnera and Joe Louis, the Detroit Negro sensation, who meet at 15 rounds in the Yankee Stadium on June 25, and Champion Max Baer and James J. Braddock for their heavyweight title engagement in the garden's Long Island bowl on June 5.

"This is really a protection for the fighters," John J. Phelan, chairman of the commission said. "Supposing a couple of fellows are matched for a fight and one of them runs out the day before. Well, the other fellow's training expenses would be partly defrayed by his opponent's forfeit."

Jack Doyle, the Irish heavy-

Pitchers Again Fail to Last, But Nats' Hits Cheer Harris

By a Staff Correspondent.

PHILADELPHIA April 23.—Reminded after today's victory over the Athletics that no Washington pitcher had as yet lasted nine innings, Manager Bucky Harris only smiled.

"Who cares?" he said. "If we can keep on winning ball games, I don't give a hang if our pitchers last only two-thirds of an inning. The team has started to hit—that's what I like."

Tomorrow Bob Burke will attempt to become the first Washington pitcher to last the route. The lean left-hander who was batted out of the box in the sixth inning by the Red Sox in his first start will get the call to oppose Al Benton or Joe Cascarella.

The world's worse inaugural-game ceremonies were staged by the Philadelphia officials today. The march to the flag pole was a cross betwen a snake dance and a Holy Roller revival.

Mayor J. Hampton Moore, President Tom Shibe of the Philadelphia club and Vice President William Richardson of the Washington club headed the drum major and the Marine Reserves Band on the march to center field and were out of step for half the distance. The players of both teams, supposed to follow the band, were out of step for the full distance and took the Great Circle route.

The flag raising completed, the band wheeled for the return march, leaving the dignitaries to follow in its wake, while the Washington squad, which had already broken for the bench, was hastily summoned again into a formation, if you can call it that.

Manager Connie Mack and the Shibes have finally listened to the pleas of their pitchers and added 20 feet to the 12-foot fence in short right field, which used to reach out and embrace glorified bunts for home runs.

The short fence was a landmark of the old Shibe Park, erected in 1909, but Mack's sluggers always protested any move to heighten it. Such as Max Bishop, Mickey Cochrane and Al Simmons liked its inviting appearance. Only Jimmy Foxx didn't care.

The new fence has shut off the view of the poachers, who for 25 cents could sit on the bleachers erected on the roof tops of Twentieth street and see the Athletics' games, including the world series when played here.

The bleachers are still standing.

Pirates Pound Freitas In 6th, Top Reds, 4-3

Cincinnati, April 23 (AP)—Pittsburgh's Pirates put on all sail in the sixth today and broke down the Cincinnati Reds' defense to win, 4 to 3.

Four hits, coupled with two errors by Myers, gave the Pirates their sixth-inning lead. Brennan stepped in for Tony Freitas after this outburst.

Jesse Owens Runs 100 Yds. in 0:08.4 From Flying Start

By the Associated Press.

Columbus, Ohio, April 23.—Ohio University's "Ebony Antelope," Jesse Owens, took a flying start and flashed his spikes through 100 yards today in eight and four-tenths seconds.

He started 20 yards behind the first marker and was hittnig his full stride as he went into the measured distance. Three watches catch him in 0:08.4, a full second under the world mark from a cruoching start.

Track Coach Larry Snyder said, "that's the fastest any human being ever moved for 100 yards, under his own power."

LeDuc, Argyle; Tom Belshe, Indian Spring; Bob Stead, Chevy Chase; Fred Stringer, Beaver Dam; Leopold Freudberg, Woodmont; Ed Olsen, Kenwood, and Harry Pitt, Manor.

Moore, Phils, Hits .500 To Lead in "Big Six"

By the Associated Press.

The first publication of baseball's "Big Six" for the 1935 season finds John Moore, Phillies' speedy outfielder, leading the pack with a healthy batting average of .500. In 30 times at bat, Moore has cracked out 15 hits, including three home runs, to lead Floyd Vaughan, Pittsburgh shortstop, by 12 points. Sam West, of the St. Louis Browns, tops the American League trio with 9 hits in 21 trips to the plate for an average of .429.

150,000 Saw Delayed Major League Openers

New York, April 23 (AP).—With far better weather than prevailed for the opening of the season last week, baseball fans turned out more than 150,000 strong today for the inaugural games in seven major league cities.

The aggregate attendance was 156,490 as compared to 148,187 for the eight openings last week. Cincinnati opened its home season last Tuesday and so was not figured in today's total.

Red Sox Beat Yanks, 7-4, For 6th

League Leaders Return Home; Are Greeted by Crowd of 20,500.

Pounce on Murphy After Ruffing Leaves Game Because of Injury.

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, April 23.—The league-leading Boston Red Sox won their sixth game out of seven starts today as they turned the official opening of the American League season here into a triumphant home-coming by defeating the New York Yankees, 7 to 4.

A crowd of 20,500, including Gov. James M. Curley of Massachusetts, saw the Sox pounce on four Yankee hurlers for 10 timely hits, while Fred Ostermueller and Henry Johnson kept the New York bats well in check with nine safe blows, one of which was a home run by Frank Crosetti.

Charley Ruffing, the Yanks' big red-headed right-hander, who started on the mound, was forced to leave the game voluntarily with one out in the third inning, because of a stiff back. When he retired he had held the Sox scoreless to one hit in 2 1-3 innings and had pitched to only seven batters.

Murphy Is Routed.

Once Ruffing was out of the way, the Sox started scoring. They walloped Johnny Murphy for eight hits and all of their runs before Jimmy Deshong was rushed to his rescue in the sixth with two runners on and one out. Deshong pitched through the seventh, when he was lifted for Pinch-Hitter Earle Combs and Vito Tamulis finished the game.

Ostermueller was knocked out of the box in the fifth when the Yanks rallied to score two runs. Johnson relieved him with the bases full and two out and forced Crosetti to fly to Julius Solters to end the uprising. Crosetti's home run came off Johnson in the eighth, but that was all for the Yankees.

Workman Up, Roustabout Wins at Havre in First '35 Start

Gelding Beats All Forlorn By Length

Returns $4.90 Mutuel; Ladfield Runs Third; 7,500 Look On.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

HAVRE DE GRACE, Md., April 23.—Roustabout, which earned $23,000 for the C. V. Whitney Stable last year, made his first start of the 1935 season here today and scored a rousing victory for the light blue and brown of his owner. Under a perfect ride by Sonny Workman, the Washington jockey, Roustabout left no doubt as to his superiority over the seven others which accepted the issue over the 6-furlong sprint course. Workman rode three winners in all.

Roustabout had a length margin over All Forlorn, which, in turn, was two lengths in front of a fast-closing Ladfield. The winner was coupled with Mister Gander, but Trainer Tom Healey announced before the race that he was trying only with Roustabout. Mister Gander, a derby candidate, appeared to be sore both before and after the contest and merely trailed the field.

Ideal racing weather brought out a crowd of some 7,500 and Roustabout's victory was one of several that cheered the hearts of the favorite players. The son of Chicle and Traffic paid $4.90 mutuel and ran like a 1-to-10 shot.

All Forlorn and Dust Girl battled for the doubtful pace-setting honors as the field went up the back stretch with Roustabout in fourth place. Dust Girl threw in the sponge approaching the far turn and Roustabout came forward to press the fast pace. There was a hot skirmish between the front pair which lasted to the eighth pole, where Roustabout, slowly but surely, drew out. Workman was pulling in on his mount nearing the finish line.

Ladfield, forced wide at the stretch turn, came with a belated rush which accounted for the show money.

The time of 1:11 3-5 was the best for the meeting. Roustabout was Workman's second winner for the day.

Last Time Triumphs.

Favorite players were off on the right foot in the first race when Last Time defeated a mediocre field at six furlongs. Kowtow was second and Boocord third in the field of nine Maryland foaled horses. Tody Con was the early pacemaker, but quit to a walk when collared by Last Time. Lindberg rode the winner well and the combination paid a $4.30 mutuel. There was a 1½-minute delay at the post, with Boocord and Lone Miss the chief offenders.

Although Bright and Early bumped Clarksdale and caused a jam in the stretch, the colt's number was allowed to stand as the winner of the second race. Apprentice J. Lynch carried a complaint to the stewards, but they waved the "official" sign into position. Clarksdale, after being bumped, knocked Jubilee Jim off his stride, but the colt was third. The winner, owned by Mrs. Walter M. Jeffords, was making his first start and paid $13.20. Flower Time, the choice, was fifth. Gilbert rode the winner in a late jockey shift.

Sonny Workman continued his fine riding by bringing Night Sprite home a winner in the third race, a dash of six furlongs. Acautaw was second and Currants third in a thrilling finish. Currants set the pace and appeared an easy winner until he tired nearing the finish line. The winner was in the Gratton entry and paid $3.50.

Teddy Carl came from far back to win the fifth race at a mile and 70 yards. Ridden by J. Lynch, the son of Carlaris rushed through the stretch to take the decision from Happy Flag, another fast finisher, and a tiring Leana G. The last named was rushed off her feet to get to the front and had nothing left for the final drive. The winner paid $12.10.

Workman rode his third winner of the day on Black Falcon in the sixth race. He punished the son of Omar Khayyam to draw out on Boocap and Brains in a blanket finish, Black Falcon paid $24.60.

Renovah, the favorite, won the last race under strong handling by Apprentice Lynch. Standout was second and Darkling third.

Dear Al, Havre de Grace Race Track, Md., April 23.

There were several bets of 3 to 1 in the press box yesterday that the number of Bright and Early, winner of the first race, would not be taken down. Apprentice Lynch was in the stewards' stand at the time complaining that the colt owned by Mrs. Walter M. Jeffords had bumped his mount off the pace. These colors just don't come down at this track, so the boys say. I'm thinking seriously of turning Clocker Mike out for a couple of weeks so that he can be freshened up. He seems to have had too much racing of late and dreams workouts now and then. He did pretty well yesterday with Blind Brook, his special, but every horse he mentioned today couldn't get out of a gallop. It may be a case of spring fever. I know it isn't lack of solid food. It seems that the worse Mike gets the more he eats. I knew Teddy Carl would win if I put him second. BILL.

First race—Paradun has run three seconds in a row and by gradual elimination should take care of this field of maidens. His last was a length behind Song. Canimar met with trouble last out and could be dangerous among these cheap ones. Wayward Sun might be turned loose but has shown little in two starts.

Second race—Waterset would prefer an off track but has a class edge over those she meets here. I expect no mistakes. Spixi ran well last year and could surprise. O'Neil for the show end.

Third race—Davoc, making his first start of the season last out, turned in an impressive race and needs only to improve a little to take care of this sort of company. Vacillate and True Charm should take care of the others.

Fourth race—Deliberator breaks off the rail and may be the winner here, providing Porter can make a quick getaway with the colt. Wise Duke had no chance last out, being virtually left at the post. This colt has worked well and is dangerous. Bright Light, winner for Bowie, may be third. Clocker Mike reports Conquer is better than shown and a possible long shot winner.

Fifth race—War Glory comes back to the races in splendid condition I'm told. Meets only fair opposition and may win at the first asking. Howard has been rested and trials indicate that he is fit. Only One for the show.

Sixth race—Polo Bar has been showing a return to form of late and seems to have found the right spot here. Jambalya closed like an express train last out and may be second at box car figures. Polites may be fooling.

Seventh race—Hereward was scratched yesterday with this in mind. Can not be rushed at the start if the attempt is serious. Kibitzer's last points to better things. Zembla to show.

Reds' Night Game May 23.

Cincinnati, April 23 (AP).—Officials of the Cincinnati Reds announced today that the first night ball game of the major leagues will be played here May 23 against the Phillies.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LAST TIME, $4.30, $3.20, $2.40; KOWTOW, $8.20, $4.70; BOOCORD, $3.50.

LAST TIME, outrun in the first three furlongs, went to the leaders strongly when reaching the home stretch, sprinted into a clear lead and held away until the end. KOWTOW, in the thick of contention raced TODY CON into submission, but was no match for the winner. BOOCORD bettered his position steadily on the outside in the first five furlongs, swerved to the inside during the stretch drive, and was held safe. MR. PETE broke slow and was never able to enter contention. TODY CON had speed for the first half-mile and then tired. DALMATIA weakened after a half-mile. LONE MISS was fractious at the post and was outrun. YEHONALA had brief early speed.

SECOND RACE—Four and a half furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For maiden 2-year-olds. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:16. Off at 3:18½. Winner, Mrs. W. M. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BRIGHT AND EARLY, $13.20, $8.10, $5.80; CLARKSDALE, $6.00, $5.20; JUBILEE JIM, $4.70.

BRIGHT AND EARLY, away nicely and hustled to the front soon after the start, held on strongly after reaching the home stretch, was inclined to swerve and interfered with CLARKSDALE all during the final furlong. CLARKSDALE went up fast on the outside to reach the pacemaker, met with interference during the final drive, but held on determinedly. JUBILEE JIM went close up until reaching the home stretch and then tired. DIXIE DORA was under stout pressure, but could not better her position. FLOWER SHOW lacked early speed and could not enter a forward position. LITTLE MIRACLE showed a good effort while racing on the outside. SURRY was in trouble early and could not enter contention. SAKUNTALA was outrun. The others were outrun.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate and chute. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:51. Off at 3:53. Winner, J. U. Gratton's ch. c. (4), by Nocturnal—Dark Phantom. Trained by W. Irvine. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23, 0:47 2-5, 1:12 3-5.

†J. U. Gratton entry.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—NIGHT SPRITE, $3.50, $2.30, $2.10; ACAUTAW, $3.70, $2.70; CURRANTS, $2.80.

NIGHT SPRITE, rated back of the pace for the first half-mile while on the outside, challenged strongly when reaching the home stretch, was steered through on the inside of CURRANTS midway of the home stretch and was up in the last sixteenth. ACAUTAW, slower than usual to settle in his stride, circled his field and closed in resolute fashion. CURRANTS showed good speed to set a fast pace, bore out slightly entering the home stretch, but held on well for the final drive. DANCING CLOUD was a contender in the final stages. COMMUNIST began tiring after a half-mile. FREDRICK tired fast. SHAUN PADRAIC was outmatched.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. Grade "B" Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate and chute. Won cleverly; place, driving. Went to post at 4:21. Off at 4:23. Winner, C. V. Whitney's b. c. (4), by Chicle—Traffic. Trained by T. J. Healey. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 1-5, 0:47, 1:11 3-5.

†C. V. Whitney entry.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—†ROUSTABOUT, $4.90, $3.50, $2.30; ALL FORLORN, $7.40, $3.20; LADFIELD, $2.30.

ROUSTABOUT, nicely handled and a keen factor in the early racing, responded willingly to engage ALL FORLORN when approaching the home stretch, took command at the final furlong pole, then came out gradually under pressure. ALL FORLORN showed high speed while setting the pace, saved ground, and held on gamely after being displaced. LADFIELD, permitted to drop out of contention soon after the start, went up between horses midway of the turn, was carried very wide, then closed with a belated rush. DUST GIRL weakened steadily after the opening three furlongs. HUG AGAIN could not threaten seriously. WISE SISTER had speed for a half-mile. MISTER GANDER was outrun.

FIFTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:51. Off at 4:53. Winner, Miss L. C. White's b. g. (3), by Carlaris—Honey Pot. Trained by J. Gorman. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24, 0:48 3-5, 1:13 4-5, 1:40, 1:45.

COLORIST	106	3	2	1¹	2½	4h	7	Critchfield	80.05

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TEDDY CARL, $12.10, $5.10, $3.30; HAPPY FLAG, $10.00, $4.60; LEANA G., $2.50.

TEDDY CARL, steadied along for the first six furlongs, gained fast when put to a drive, came around his field to take command during the closing furlong, and was under pressure to the end. HAPPY FLAG worked her way up stoutly in the last half-mile, swung to the outside and closed fast. LEANA G. was used up alternating in settling the pace with COLORIST and OGLE, and she weakened fast under punishment. OGLE faltered after moving into a slight lead at the final turn. BELLATOR went well placed and showed a good effort. FAIR VERBENA was unable to secure racing room during the closing furlong. COLORIST stopped.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:26. Off at 5:30. Winner, Mrs. H. D. Cox's blk. g. (4), by Omar Khayyam—Nora-later. Trained by H. D. Cox. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24, 0:49 2-5, 1:14 2-5, 1:40 3-5, 1:47 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BLACK FALCON, $24.60, $8.70, $5.70; BOOCAP, $6.80, $4.10; BRAINS, $3.50.

BLACK FALCON, hurried around the first turn to hold a prominent position, worked his way to the leaders steadily, wore BRAINS down when straightened into the homestretch and was under stiff pressure at the end. BOOCAP, shuffled back going to the first turn, worked his way into contention on the inside and finished in game fashion while in close quarters. BRAINS followed CAERLEON closely, took command at the final turn, but faltered after reaching the home stretch. MINTANA was jammed back leaving the black stretch, but recovered and closed gamely. PROTRACTOR showed a good effort. CAERLEON tired. LOFTY LADY appeared sore and showed a dull effort.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won handily; place, driving. Went to post at 6:02. Off at 6:03. Winner, C. J. Almendola's ch. g. (5), by Transmute—Circus Girl. Trained by M. Harris. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:48 2-5, 1:13 3-5, 1:40 3-5, 1:47 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—REVONAH, $4.90, $3.90, $3.00; STANDOUT, $8.80, $4.60; DARKLING, $3.60.

REVONAH sprinted into an easy lead going to the first turn, shook off JUSTA TEACHER after six furlongs, then resisted STANDOUT during the closing stages under slight urging. STANDOUT bettered his position stoutly in the last half-mile, came through on the inside entering the home stretch, and closed gamely. DARKLING was badly blocked when attempting to come through on the inside leaving the back stretch, but recovered and finished stoutly. PRETTY WISE was a stout factor most of the trip and held on well. COUSIN GEORGE went well placed, but failed to rally in the closing test. WALKALONG broke sluggishly out of hand and had no chance. JUSTA TEACHER stopped badly.

Record Entry Of 29 Races At Graw

Aberdeen Field Is Largest in History; Sun Monk Not Poison Victim.

By a Staff Correspondent.

HAVRE DE GRACE, Md., April 23.—Unless there is some wholesale scratching by post time tomorrow, the largest field in the history of this racetrack will face the barrier in the $7,500 added Aberdeen Stakes for 2-year-olds. The overnight entry sheet shows 29 juveniles named for the sprint of 4½ furlongs. This is an unheard-of number for this race, run annually since 1913, and old-timers could not remember a larger field on any Maryland track during this century.

Practically every 2-year-old which has shown speed this year is on the list, which includes representatives of virtually all of the best-known stables. Some idea of the anxiousness of the owners to gather in the coveted purse is indicated by the fact that six entries of two horses have been made and the Brookmeade Stable has entered a three-some.

Inasmuch as the starting gate here can accommodate only 14 starters, the old-fashioned barrier and tape will be used to send the field away. Unless there are at least ten scratches by post time, there is no telling what kind of a race it will be. The juveniles go into the far turn almost immediately after breaking, and a horse will have to be lucky to get close to the top if he fails to get away fast.

So large is the field that all of the better jockeys on the grounds and many of the lesser lights have been assigned mounts. Much depended on the post positions drawn this morning and Deliberator, one of the favored youngsters, drew the No. 4 position, considered to be in his favor. The Vanderbilt entry of Parade Girl and Postage Due was not so fortunate, being placed in No. 11 and No. 23 positions.

Pony McAtee, the veteran jockey, is likely to be seen in action aboard Quick Look, of the Brookmeade entry. McAtee, now attempting a comeback, was a former star in Maryland racing.

A rumor made the round today that the horse Sun Monk had been poisoned. However, all concerned agreed that it was a case of colic that forced the scratching of the sprinter out of today's fourth race.

Mrs. Walter M. Jefford's Commonwealth was given an easy workout this morning over the Derby route, which he negotiated in 2:12. The colt was clocked at 1:17 for the three-quarters, and 1:44 for the mile without being out of a pull during the drill. Commonwealth will be shipped to Louisville either Monday or Tuesday morning, his handler said today.

Sonny Workman is leading the race for the $500 gold stop watch which goes to the leading jockey at this meeting. The Washington boy has nine winners to eight for Lynch.

G. W. Nine Plays; Noonan to Pitch

Washington College Host to Colonials Today.

Lanky Bill Noonan, the thin man who distinguished himself in the Capital City League last season by winning 13 victories for Gulf Refining, will toe the mound this afternoon at Chestertown, Md., where George Washington hooks up with Washington College.

The Colonials are out for their second victory of the campaign, and, if Wild William is as good as last season, the downtown school is already home. Washington, nevertheless, can be depended on for some grade A competition. It displayed its real power two weeks ago, upsetting a favored Maryland nine in a slugging bee.

Here Are Five That Didn't Get Away

George M. Gooch, of 1335 Kennedy street northwest, has no alibis to offer for his recent fishing expedition to Oregon Inlet, N. C. Here he is with his party and five sea bass that total 155 pounds in weight, an average of 31 pounds per specimen. Left to right, Arthur Herbert and William Herbert, of Alexandria; Mrs. Gooch and Mr. Gooch. Capt. Arnold Daniels, of Wanchese, N. C., was the boatman.

Weights Listed For Pimlico Inaugural

Evergold, Roustabout and Gay Monarch Assigned 120 Pounds Each.

BALTIMORE, April 23.—Evergold, Gay Monarch and Roustabout have been assigned top weight of 120 pounds for the Baltimore Spring Handicap, $2,500 added 6-furlong sprint to feature the opening program at Pimlico on April 29.

Weights for the race, for 3-year-olds and upward, were announced today by Racing Secretary Frank J. Bryan. Of the 31 horses assigned weights, Wise Sister got the lightest—95 pounds.

Included in the horses are eight eligibles for The Preakness, $25,000 added feature of the Maryland Jack Club's spring session. They are Brannon, Gillie, Nautch, Pitter Pat, Supreme Court, Song, Mr. Gander and Today.

A. G. Vanderbilt's Dogmata and Dreel, are to carry 114 and 116 pounds, respectively, and Maj. Ral Parr's Star Porter has been assigned 119 pounds. Dogmata is a winner of the Bowie Memorial Handicap.

Friends School Beats Blair High Nine, 6 to 4

A four-run attack in the fifth inning gave Friends School a 6-to-4 victory over Monigomery-Blair High, of Silver Spring, yesterday on the Friends' diamond.

Singles by Wannan, Elliott, Gwynn and J. Smith combined with a walk and a hit batsman to send the four runs across the plate. The Marylanders rallied in the sixth and seventh innings to tally three runs, but were cut short after scoring once in the seventh and final frame.

Burnett's 70 Wins Rock Creek Medal; Finishes With 2 Birdies

Marks Trails By 1 Shot; 100 Vie

Harold Bowers Is Third; Rippy Is Far Down List With 77.

By Dave Herman.

SCORING birdies on the last two holes, Volney Burnett, Washington's golfing fireman, put on a great stretch finish yesterday to win the medal with a 70, two over par, in the qualifying round of the Rock Creek Spring tournament.

Burnett's four-alarm finish, a masterpiece in every sense of the word, enabled him to nose out Bob Marks, the carefree municipal star, by a single shot in as close a fight for the honor as the championships has ever witnessed.

With a field of 100 competing, the steady-plodding Burnett, also a member of Indian Spring Country Club, negotiated the A and B courses in 35, each, while Marks came through with 36—35—71.

Harold Bowers Third.

One stroke behind Marks was Harold Bowers, the Anacostia champion, who had a brace of 36's. H. C. York, a dangerous man in any tournament, banged out a 74, and Bill Wilhelm was next with 75.

Par at the hilly course was too tough to shatter yesterday, and Claude Rippy, the defending champion, who holds the course record, was listed among those who shot in the high seventies. His 38—39—77 was way off the Rippy standard. His six 5s disgusted the transplanted North Carolinian no end, and his 7 on the long fifteenth, where he parked a couple of shots in the woods, made him feel even worse.

79 Good Enough.

Seventy-nine was good enough to land a place in the qualifying circle of 16. Herman Allen was around in 77. Russell Sullivan, Eddie Bean and Bob Leapley had 78s, and bracketed at 79 were Bob Mertie, Andy (Chubby) Oliveri, E. W. Pearson, Ernie Gerlem, P. A. Walton and Bob Morris.

The medalist, Burnett, had only three birdies on his card but they came when he needed 'em most. He poked out an iron dead to the pin for a deuce on the eleventh, ran into a 5 on the next hole, parred the short thirteenth and shot 5—5—5 for the next three holes.

Turns on Heat.

Told that he needed a birdie to tie Bowers for the lead, Burnett turned on the heat. He blasted out a mashie on the 158-yard seventeenth to within 4 feet of the pin, and got his deuce. A long wood and a healthy iron second found him 30 feet from the pin on the home hole, and the fire fighter immediately extinguished Bowers' hopes by sinking his putt for his second straight birdie.

Marks, who finished late in the evening, didn't have a single birdie. He had 14 pars. Just off the edge of the, green on the eighteenth, Marks made one last effort to tie Burnett, but his niblick shot ended up 8 inches past the cup.

Putts Prove Costly.

Bowers had birdies on the second and twelfth. Three putt greens on the seventh, eighth and ninth, a trapped shot on the fifteenth, where he took a 6 and a three-putt green on the home hole, where he wound up with 5, ruined the Anacostia champion's chances.

Two rounds of match play in all flights will be held today. There will be no postponement of matches, Ed Burns, manager, stated, and players must be on the tee on time.

Northern Va. Loop Opening Delayed

May 5 Date Is Set Due to Condition of Fields.

The Northern Virginia League will not open its season until May 5, it was announced last night by President James Buchanan. The poor condition of diamonds at Manassas, Falls Church, Berryville and Marshall forced this postponement. The schedule, itself, will remain unchanged. Twelve teams, scattered throughout a 30-mile radius in Northern Virginia, will compete for post association honors in this loop.

Md. Nine Is Host To William-Mary

Physioc or Willis Due to Face Indians Today.

Still suffering from a bad case of jitters after their narrow escape from defeat by William and Mary on Monday, Maryland's diamondeers return to action today at College Park, meeting St. John's of Annapolis at 4 o'clock.

Steve Physioc, the ambidextrous hurler, probably will draw the pitching assignment, although Coach Burt Shipley indicated last night that Vic Willis may start. Willis finished the game with William and Mary in fine style, but either boy will be ready to work.

The Terrapins have been off their feed for the last ten days and have played far below par. A turn for the better must be evidenced today or another game is going on the wrong side of the ledger.

Opener Is Awaited By Corriganville

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., April 23.—With a new manager and a host of new players, the Corriganville Hustlers, of the Interstate League, are in active preparation for the 1935 season.

The new pilot is Earl V. Diehl, who directed the Ellerslie Cardinals to the Potomac Valley League championship last season. The only holdoyers from the Hustler squad of 1934 among the 17 players now under contract are Fred Clapper, veteran pitcher and infielder, and Clayton Van Meter, also a pitcher.

Hustler outfield prospects include Joe Clancy and John Mangus, B. & O. veterans; Joe McGinn, of F. O. Eagles; Bob Shroyer, former Ellerslie gardener, and Edward Kammauf, of Cresaptown. For infield duty, Diehl will have Mel Rankin, "Bus" Porter and Fred Porter, of the 1934 Ellersville crew; Mel "Newt" Henry, erstwhile B. & O. performer; Leo Irons, a promising youngster, and Clapper.

Chevy Chase's Golfers Cling To Lead

Women's First Team in 9-3 Triumph Over Army and Navy.

CHEVY CHASE CLUB, defending champions, clung tenaciously to its lead in the District women's first team matches at Congressional Country Club yesterday by defeating Army and Navy, 9 to 3, in the feature match.

Meanwhile Congressional, scoring a 9-3 victory over Woodmont, advanced to second place, 1 point to the rear of the pace-setting champions. Chevy Chase has 24½ points and Congressional 24.

Beaver Dam, strengthened by the addition of Ellen Kincaid, 16-year-old club champion, and Mrs. Florence Godfrey, public links star, went into third place with 20½ points by virtue of conquering Columbia, one-time champions, 6½ to 5½.

Kenwood Is Fourth.

Kenwood took possession of fourth place with 19½ points after tying Indian Spring at 6-6, and Manor turned back Washington Golf and Country Club, 9 to 3.

Army and Navy has 18½ points; Columbia, 18; Manor, and Indian Spring, 17½, each, and Woodmont and Washington, 10, each.

The big upset of the day was the defeat of Mrs. L. G. Pray, Manor champion, and Mrs. B. C. Hartig, at the hands of Mrs. Douglas Tschiffely and Mrs. W. G. Goodwin, No. 1 team of Washington.

G. U. Coach Holds Time Trials, Names Team for Penn Relays

WITH a noisy cap pistol in one hand and stop watch in the other, Jim Mulligan, Georgetown track coach, yesterday selected the squad that will represent the Blue and Gay in the Penn relays at Philadelphia next week-end. Mulligan put the boys through their paces at the Hilltop in a series of time trials.

The tests ended with Dave Keene, Johnny Costello, Johnny McCluskey and Capt. Bill Doherty winning places on the sprint medlay relay. This group will race against a crack field, including Princeton, Cornell, Ohio-State, Colgate, Manhattan, New York University and Maryland. The team drew No. 5 place in the draw for positions.

The 2-mile relay will be comprised of Jim Gallagher, Johnny Quirk, Dave Keene and Bill Doherty. Their principal opposition will come from Maine, whose team is expected to take the honors.

Mulligan still is undecided about the freshman 1-mile relay quarter, but plans to make a final decision today. Dick Hogue, Irwin Warder, Ed Brown and Cabel Chipman, the latter a graduate of Roosevelt High School, are candidates for positions.

Johnny Navin will represent the Hoyas in the high jump.

Maryland and Catholic University are to conduct time trials today to select their teams for the relays.

Arrangements for the all-star boxing show to be staged during Shrine convention week here in June were announced yesterday afternoon at a meeting of the Shrine convention boxing committee at the National Press Club. Left to right—William Mooney, chairman of the Shrine boxing committee; J. Fred Huber, member of the committee; Goldie Ahearn and Joe Turner, local matchmaker and promoter; Commissioner Melvin Hazen; Curtis Hodges, publicity director, and Robert Smith, potentate of Almas Temple and director general of the Shrine convention.

Central Faces St. Alban's At Tennis

Crack Net Teams Clash Today; Tech Nine Plays Washington-Lee.

Today's Scholastic Card.

Baseball.
Tech vs. Washington-Lee, at Ballston.
Episcopal vs. National Training School, at Episcopal.

Tennis.
Central High vs. St. Alban's, at St. Alban's.
St. John's vs. Friends, at Friends (Prep School League match).

BASEBALL and tennis share the spotlight on today's interscholastic sports bill. While Tech's surprisingly strong nine tackles Washington-Lee High at Ballston, the tennis courts at St. Alban's school will be the scene of one of the major scholastic encounters of the year as Central High's inter-high champs engage St. Alban's perennial king of the Prep School League.

It will be the first time that an inter-high championship team has met a prep school title-holding aggregation in a number of years. Unbeaten in league competition for several seasons and defeated last year only by Episcopal High's invincible team, St. Alban's reigns a slight favorite to topple the public school lads.

Central will be weakened by absence of its No. 1 man, Nate Ritzenberg and of Charlie Dorst, one of its ranking players. Ritzenberg is recovering from an operation and Dorst will be out of the city. While Ritzenberg, the elder, will be unable to play, young Al Ritzenberg, city junior playground champion, will handle the No. 1 assignment in which he will meet Alex (Zan) Carver, prep school champ, in the feature match.

Channing vs. Freleigh.

The other pairings pit Charlie Channing against St. Alban's No. 2 man, Morton Freleigh; Harold Lansman, of Central, against Gilbert Edson; Harry McGinnis against Robert Fowler, of St. Albans, and Myer Gelford against Ashton Beadles. The Central doubles teams will be picked later. Carver and Freleigh will play No. 1 doubles for the private school and Beadles and Edson will be the No. 2 team.

Central was unbeaten in interhigh ranks last year and St. Albans went unbeaten in prep school league ranks.

Coach Ed Foxley's Tech team should give some indication of its comparative strength this afternoon against Washington and Lee. Western High nosed out the Little Generals, 5 to 4, while Tech has beaten Episcopal, 6 to 3, and the Navy Plebes, 1 to 0. Bill Liggett will probably hurl for Tech, and Birch for the Generals. The latter have won three out of four games, winning from Manassas High, Hyattsville High and Episcopal.

Winchester Golf Club Plans Women's Teams

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, April 23.—The Winchester Golf Club will have two teams for women this year and a schedule of matches will be played.

A committee consisting of Mrs. Stewart O. Elting, Miss Frances Page, Miss Mary Miller, Mrs. Philip Williams, Miss Virginia T. Boyd and Mrs. Paul Rutledge, is in charge of arrangements.

Baseball at Roosevelt Trampled by Cadets

(The interhigh baseball series, more than 40 years old, opens Tuesday afternoon at Eastern High Field. At that time, Western and Tech will begin the race for the championship and the Clark Griffith Trophy, now held by Eastern. This is the first of a series of articles dealing with the championship prospects of the schools.)

By John R. Vosburgh.

A SAD reflection on high school athletics in general and Roosevelt High in particular is the baseball situation at that institution, handsome and newest addition to Washington's high school system. Were it not for the unquenchable loyalty and enthusiasm of some baseball-minded youths, you could count the school out of the running now for the interhigh championship.

A week from Friday, Roosevelt opens its interhigh schedule. Yesterday it held its third practice of the season—without a coach. Last Thursday it held its first practice. In the meantime, Central High has played four games, Western has played three, Tech has played two and Eastern two.

Delayed by Cadets.

The cause of the Roosevelt delay? The baseball squad will tell you the cadets monopolize the new athletic field every Monday, Wednesday and Friday. The ball players cool their heels waiting for Tuesday and Thursday, while the cadets march up and down the field. Coach Donald Brown, of the ball team, is, primarily, instructor of cadets. His military duties also cut short the time he spends with the team when practice is held, according to the ball team.

"Naw," the ball players say, resignedly, "we're not gettin' much help from anybody and we're not expectin' much."

Yesterday's practice was held under direction of one of the team, Frank Baroni, pitcher. Coach Brown was in New York. They expect him back tomorrow. Meanwhile, his team is making the most of the Easter vacation period, during which the cadets are not using the field. The reason practice was delayed until last week, the boys say, is because of the cadets, who have been using the athletic field, as though it were a barracks parade ground, ever since the snow melted.

Potentially Powerful.

Given some close coaching and plenty of time for practice, this Roosevelt team would be a power in the coming series. But the students declare that the military duties on Coach Brown's shoulders handicap his baseball coaching and prevented practice until Thursday. They point to Mike Kelley, of Eastern, former basket ball coach, who resigned to give all his time to cadet work, as evidence of the requirements of a cadet instructor.

Last year, Roosevelt lost all four of its inter-high games, some of which Coach Brown was unable to attend.

But the school has the makings of a ball team. The squad is full of spirit despite the situation and is predicting that it will kick the dope bucket for a row of ash cans in the series.

Has Snappy Infield.

Certain it is that Roosevelt will enter the series with a snappy infield, a veteran pitcher and some natural hitters of power. Baroni is entering his fourth year as a regular hurler. Powerful and experienced, he could easily prove the sensation of the series. Experts have termed him one of the most natural pitchers that ever twirled on an interhigh game. He had a great year in 1933 but a mediocre year last season when his support was pitiful.

As a battery mate he will have either Frank Bovello, a .389 hitter last year, or young Julius Lewis. With outfield prospects a little dark, Bovello may be shifted to garden duty, in which event Lewis will catch. At first base, the Rough Riders have Frank Bailey, a sweet-fielding sophomore who appears to have more promise than any high school first-sacker in town.

Coakley at Second.

George Coakley will be at second base, Elwood Ey at short and Jack Neely, a brilliant thid baseman last year, at the hot corner. Neely was a .333 hitter in the 1934 series.

Francis Coakley is the sole outfielder of last year's team back in uniform, while Horace Sheehan, a good hitter, and Ed Thompson, James Weber and Bob Sheehan, good fielders, are battling for the other outfield berths.

All in all, Roosevelt has plenty of potential power. The question is: Will it be given the opportunity to develop it so that it will bring results?

Dodgers Rout Phillies In Two Big Innings

By the Associated Press.

Brooklyn, April 23.—The Brooklyn Dodgers took undisputed possession of first place in the National League today as they opened their home season by defeating the Phillies, 12 to 5, before a crowd of 30,000.

Johnny Moore's third home run of the season and Adolph Camilli's sixth in the second inning put the Phillies out in front, but the Dodgers shelled Snipe Hansen and Joe Bowman to the showers in the fourth with a six-run attack and then collected four more in the sixth off a pair of rookies—Pezzullo and Jorgens.

weight, who, since his arrival in this country several weeks ago, has gained the sobriquet of the "Irish Thrush" because of his vocal exploits, has decided to get down to business.

Accompanied by a portly individual who identified himself as Thomas McGovern, a Brooklyn travel bureau operator and Doyle's new manager, the curly-haired Irishman applied for a license to perform in this State.

"I've met lots of people in this country," said Doyle. "Some have asked me 'Why don't you sing?' and others have suggested that I fight. I've decided to fight now and sing later. Of course, I'm no iron man and will have to take things easy at the start."

Sam Pian, manager of Ross, announced Ross would leave Chicago in a few days and pitch his training camp at Ferndale, N. Y., where he conditioned himself for his two encounters with McLarnin last summer. Ross is scheduled to check in at Ferndale on May 2.

Richmond Nine Downs W. & L. With Rally

Scores Three Runs in 9th to Nose Out Foe, 8-7, in Thriller.

By the Associated Press.

LEXINGTON, Va., April 23.—Scoring three times in the ninth inning after Washington and Lee had forged ahead in the eighth, Richmond University today handed the Generals an 8-to-7 defeat in one of the most thrilling games seen on Wilson Field in years.

Washington and Lee was leading, 5 to 2, when the Spiders went to bat in the eighth and tallied three times.

With the score tied, Emerson Dickman, Washington and Lee sophomore hurler, who defeated Virginia yesterday, stepped to the plate and smashed out a long circuit drive, scoring Pette to put the Generals out in front by two runs.

Ciecko Starts Rally.

Ciecko, first up for Richmond in the ninth, garnered a base hit and Lacy got on by Bricker's error. Morris then singled, to score Ciecko, and a few minutes later Lacy tallied on Pette's wild pitch. Gilfillan dropped a hit over second to score Campbell for the winning run.

Lacy had a big day at bat, collecting three hits out of five times up, scoring three of the Spiders' runs and getting on twice through errors.

hits in the second inning, the Nats scored three times in the fourth on one hit. Cain was off to a bad start by walking Bolton and Stone, and, as the fans yelped for his removal, he picked up Powell's bunt and threw it to third base despite the fact that Third Baseman McNair was nowhere in the vicinity. The ball bounced against the stands and caromed into center field as both Bolton and Stone romped home and Powell reached second. Lary's long double to left center scored Powell with the run that gave the Nats a 5-1 lead.

A's Checked in Sixth.

Hadley had met a second severe test back in the sixth when the A's threatened the Nats' 2-1 lead after Johnson had singled and Foxx had walked with one out. But he solved the situation, after McNair's sacrifice, by striking out Coleman and handling Newsome's grounder himself.

It was not to be, however, that a Washington pitcher should go the route for the first time this season. Roy Johnson slammed a long home run into the center field bleachers in the eighth to reduce the Nats' lead to 5-2, and when McNair, Coleman and Newsome followed with singles that gave the A's another run. Harris got Hadley out of there in favor of Linke, who eased the situation by forcing Warstler to ground out.

The Nats tacked another run on their 5-2 lead in the ninth when Bolton's single scored Manush, who had doubled, but Linke couldn't get the A's out in their last turn at bat.

He walked Pinch Hitter Finney and Cramer with one out and Pettit was rushed to the rescue. The little left-hander retired Johnson on a short fly to Stone, but Foxx scored one run with a single and himself represented the tying tally. At this point, Pettit picked Cramer off third base only to see Travis drop the ball so he had to end the game by forcing McNair to hit into a force play started by Myer.

Harris Is Cheered By Team's Hitting but they are marked for firewood. The view from the roof tops now presents only a vista of third base and home plate.

The Athletics have a growing injury list. With Third Baseman Frank Higgins and Infielder Deb Williams out from the start of the season, Pitcher Johnny Marcum and Outfielder Wally Moses have joined the casualty list. Both suffered leg injuries in the New York series. Moses may return to the game tomorrow, but Marcum is out for five days.

"The greatest throwing catcher in baseball." That was the compliment paid Jimmy Foxx today by Bucky Harris, who watched the reformed first baseman throw out two Washington players on attempted steals in the course of today's game between the A's and the Nats.

"If the pitcher gives Fox half a chance by not trifling with his wind-up," said Harris, "Jimmy will throw anybody at second base. He even has time to get set for his throws if he likes. When he whips that ball, it's down there before the runner has taken three more steps."

Leon Pettit, the Confederate veteran from Chattanooga, who says his baseball age is 29, looms as the Nats' cleverest relief pitcher since 1924-25 when Manager Harris possessed in Fred Marberry and Garland Braxton the two best relief artists in two decades of baseball history.

Unabashed by his sudden presence in the big leagues after ten years spent in the tank towns of baseball, Pettit is the calmest individual on the field in the tensest situations. His attitude toward the hitter, whomever he may be, is one of mild contempt, born perhaps of his long experience on the mound.

The rookie Pettit has brought an old trick back to the big leagues. Whereas it is the custom of hitters to attempt to rattle the pitcher by stepping out of the box when the windup is about to start, Pettit puts the onus on the hitter by adopting the same tactics a the last possible moment before going through with his pitch. Today, in the ninth inning, he succeeded in disgusting Bob Johnson to the point where Johnson was so eager to swing on a ball that he hit at a bad pitch for the important second out with the tying runs on base.

G. W. Netmen Trounce Lafayette Team, 7-2

George Washington University's tennis team annexed its second victory of the season in two starts yesterday, defeating Lafayette, 7 to 2, at Columbia Country Club.

Ted Pearce, G. W. ace, kept his unbroken string of victories intact.

Singles.

Howard (G. W.) defeated Buchanan, 6—1, 6—0; Pearce (G. W.) defeated Fine, 6—1, 6—4; Sandt (Lafayette) defeated Dial, 0—6, 6—3, 8—6; Langton (G. W.) defeated Collins, 6—1, 6—4; Musser (G. W.) defeated Hatch, 6—0, 6—4; Remson (Lafayette) defeated Karr, 6—4, 6—3.

Doubles.

Harwood and Musser (G. W.) defeated Buchanan and Williams, 6—1, 6—1; Sandt and Fine (Lafayette) defeated Pierce and Howell, 6—2, 8—6, 6—0; Langtry and Walker (G. W.) defeated Collins and Hatch, 7—5, 6—1.

50,000 See Ruth; He Plays Poorly

doubled the attendance and doubled the gate. But right from the start he began to pay back for his brilliant opening in Boston.

In the first inning he grounded out to Terry. And in the third he came to bat with two men on base and the Braves needing runs. In the old days I suppose they would have walked him. The Giants insulted him boldly by pitching to him, and he topped a knuckle ball, sending a weak grounder to Terry for the third out.

Then he committed sins of senescence in the outfield. Terry hit a long, but high drive out into Ruth's precinct and the Babe misjudged it. He began to run for it, stopped, hesitated, and then began to scramble back. The ball flew over his head into the warm-up crews in the bull pen. Now Babe was positively waddling as he tried to retrieve it.

Homer Inside Park.

Berger, the Braves' center fielder, ran all the way over and picked it up for him and then himself bungled the throw in. Terry ran all the way around the bases for a home run inside the grounds. And, incidentally, old Marse Terry nearly collapsed from exhaustion when he crossed the plate. He was puffing and goggling. Those big, black cigars . . .

All that happened in the third inning. In the very next frame, Gus Mancuso slapped a hit up against the right-field wall and Babe misplayed THAT. He ran in too close and the carom got away from him. A single thus was turned into a double, and the double a moment later turned into a run on Fitzsimmons' single and that was the margin by which the Giants eventually won in the extra inning.

Catches Long Fly.

There was grumbling in the press box, and shaking of expert heads, but I just felt silent and unhappy. Everyone perked up a little in the fifth when Ruth backed up against a yellow sign announcing a frankfurter, in right field, 400 feet or more from the plate, and caught Terry's long fly ball. THAT was more like it.

I thought there was a home run in Babe's bat to start the sixth, but Fitz couldn't find the plate and Ruth had to sling his bludgeon away and trot to first base. And he got a free ride around the bases a few minutes later on Whitney's home run that hit the top of the left-field grandstand.

He waited for Whitney at the plate and patted his hands together in applause. At least, they couldn't keep him out of the scoring column. I am a Ruth fan. I accept such tiny consoling morsels on a bad day. I am glad to pass them along to you in the same meek spirit.

Alibi Turns Up.

Well, the Babe had a last turn at bat in the eighth and lined to Koenig, and ended his day's work, Mowry replacing him. But I have an alibi for Ruth. He was sick. Joe Costa, a photographer, came up to the press box and told me that all through the hour and a half before game time Babe was beefing to the photographers, something he rarely does, saying, "Hey, can't you guys leave a fellow alone when he is sick? I don't mind posing when I feel good, but I don't. I'm sick. Gimme a break, will ya?"

I believe it. He was sick. Sure, he was sick. Probably very sick. It must have been something like that. Probably coming down with something. If he had been well everything would have been different. Maybe he will be well tomorrow. I think I'll have to go up there and see.

the ninth as he covered first but continued in the game after receiving first aid. With Critz called home by the illness of his wife, the Giants have no extra infielders.

The game was preceded by a parade of both teams, headed by the Seventy-first Regiment Band, and the ceremony of flag-raising in center field, near the memorial to John Joseph McGraw. Notables in the crowd included Gov. Hoffman, of New Jersey; John A. Heydler, chairman of the board of the National League, and Mayor LaGuardia, who tossed out the first ball.

The Federal Diary

Trade-Mark Registered U. S. Patent Office.

By Morgan Baker.

ONE of the largest gatherings of Government employes this year is expected at the mass meeting tomorrow night to protest Washington rent scale and housing shortage. The meeting, which will begin at 8, under auspices of the District Department, American Federation of Government Employes and the Central Labor Union, will be held in the new Federal auditorium between the Interstate Commerce Building and Department of Labor, on Constitution avenue.

BAKER.

Representative Henry Ellenbogen, of Pennsylvania, author of the Ellenbogen rent control bill, will share principal speaking honors with Catherine Bauer, secretary of the Labor Housing Commission of Pennsylvania. John Donovan, representing the Central Labor Union, also will speak.

The Ellenbogen bill, which is now pending in Congress, provides for the creation of a rent commission. This commission would "freeze" Washingtn rent, forbidding the increase of rents of present tenants unless approved by the commission.

Employe leaders are urging passage of the bill as a temporary measure. Permanent relief, they hold, will be found in federally financed low-cost apartments and residence units.

John P. Simpson, secretay-treasurer of the District department, will preside at the meeting. Mr. Simpson reports an overwhelming response to the questionnaires his organization is circulating among all Government offices, seeking information on housing. Overcrowding, exorbitant prices, inhospitality and other abuses permeate the answers to the questionnaires, he declares.

WITH the several branches completing the election of delegates to the board of representatives this week, Local No. 2, of the National Federation of Federal Employes, will have its organization in readiness for a vigorous campaign during the last two months of the N. F. F. E.'s spring membership drive here. The largest Federal employes union in Washington, Local No. 2, is expected to lead the way.

The executive committee of the union, which is directing the drive, was elected at the first meeting of the new board and is composed of J. Ernest Brault, General Accounting Office; William B. Crowell, Navy Department; Robert W. Cushman, Library of Congress; Dr. Howard A. Edson, Department of Agriculture; Harold Keenan, Department of Commerce, and Charles H. Smith, General Accounting Office. Mr. Crowell and Mr. Smith were named for the first time.

President Joseph Stansfield, who was reelected trustee of the union for another three-year term, announces the following committee chairmen for the coming fiscal year:

Finance, Mr. Brault; membership, Mr. Cushman, credit union, James A. Solt, General Accounting Office; elections and credentials, Robert E. Lowe, Veterans Administration; entertainment, William Walsh, General Accounting Office; legislative, Mr. Smith; resolutions, Earl P. Jordan, General Accounting Office, and "good of the union," Dr. Herbert A. Smith, assistant forester. Mr. Cushman replaces Miss Lottie L. Anderson, Department of Agriculture, who resigned. Dr. Howard A. Edson, also of that department, was succeeded as chairman of the legislative committee and will devote his full time to the executive council.

Newly elected members of the board of representatives of Local, No. 2, follow:

From Interior Department.

Frank Cushman, J. F. Deeds, John Deno, Mrs. M. Dorothy Dick, J. A. Moss, Mrs. Rebekah Pedigo, David Thomas and William Walsh.

Harris & Ewing.

REP. ELLENBOGEN, of Pennsylvania, author of the Ellenbogen rent-control bill, will speak at a mass meeting of Government employes tomorrow night in the new I. C. C.-Labor Department auditorium.

I Want My 30 Days!

Let other mortals sing a song
Of what is right and what is wrong;
I'll still raise my voice loud and strong—
"I want my 30 days!"

Let all the other folks resent
The awful cost of food and rent;
I'll still pursue my sad lament—
"I want my 30 days!"

Let all the others raise a row
And walk about with wrinkled brow;
I'll still yell, 50 years from now—
"I want my 30 days!"

A. CHASANOW (F),

T. D. Webb, vice chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, was one of the higher Government officials who got out of town over the Easter holidays to visit his family in Nashville, Tenn. His debutante daughter, Miss Corrinne Webb, was recently married in that Southern city and Mrs. Webb stayed over after the ceremony.

ONE of the minor changes incurred by Soil Erosion Service in its transfer from Interior to Agriculture was that of titles. H. H. Bennett and Dr. W. C. Lowdermilk, formerly director and vice director, respectively, are now chief and associate chief.

Mr. Bennett, incidentally, is included on the program of the Newspaper Editorial Association meeting in New Orleans May 5. He recently returned from Chicago, where he addressed the convention of the Izaak Walton League.

Tom Shaw, Library of Congress, is en route to England, having sailed last week from New York. He expects to return in a month, when he will resume his duties in the office of the Superintendent of the Reading Room.

Attend Michigan Convention.

Dr. A. W. Hummel, Dr. Shio Sakanishi, Library of Congress, and Dr. Charles F. Swingle, Agriculture, are attending the sixteenth annual meeting of the American Oriental Society, which opens today at Ann Arbor, Mich. Dr. Hummel, who is chief of the Oriental Division of the Library, is one of the members of the society's board of directors.

Dr. Sakanishi and Dr. Swingle will give a paper, "The Hyakumanto Dharani, Earliest Dated Specimen of the Printer's Art." The meeting will be somewhat of a homecoming for Dr. Sakanishi, as he is a graduate of the University of Michigan.

On the Air Today

By Katherine Smith.

Outstanding among Columbia's musical broadcasts was the Pro Arté Quartet series some months ago. Now, from the same hall in which these broadcasts occurred, NBC picks up a series of programs by the Kolisch String Quartet, under the auspices of the Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Foundation, in the Library of Congress.

The Kolisch Quartet made its American debut at the music festival April 8. The players, who perform by memory (an unusual feat for any group of instrumentalists) have been placed by critics to top rank among similar groups of the world. Today's broadcast, on WMAL at 2 p. m. marks the first of a series of five chamber music concerts.

The program includes Mozart's D minor quartet, and the fifth quartet by the contemporary Hungarian composer, Bela Bartok. Through short-wave relays to far points of the world, chamber music lovers will be able to enjoy this series.

The tiny hall at the Congressional Library, from which the quartet will broadcast, holds about 300 listeners. Through the use of radio, fine music, finely played is available for a large and appreciative audience, which would be unable to hear it otherwise.

And there are still reformers who complain that "nothing on the radio is any good," and that "all radio programs are trivial, uneducational and vulgar."

Another premiere—this time John Charles Thomas, opera, concert and radio singer, is starred in a musical-dramatic script called "Our Home on the Range." Mr. Thomas is the owner of a mythical ranch, with an opportunity to sing six to ten songs each broadcast. The series promises a dramatic story of range life, strong love interest and comedy relief.

If the theme song is "Home on the Range"—well, it will be just too bad. Starts tonight, WMAL, at 9 o'clock.

Another interesting musical program features Samuel Barber, one of America's youngest contemporary composers, who is heard on WMAL, 3 p. m., as a singer. His program consists of traditional, classic and folk music.

More broadcasts from the American Chemical Industries meetings, on WRC at 2 p. m.; WJSV and WMAL at 10:35 p. m. The evening program includes talks by Dr. Roger Adams, president of the American Chemical Society, on organic chemistry; Dr. Edward Bartow, president-elect, on municipal sanitation from the chemical viewpoint, and Thomas Midgley, on automotive fuels and developments.

The afternoon program presents Lammot du Pont, Dr. Alfred H. White, of the University of Michigan, and William B. Ball, on "Human Wants in Chemical Industry," "Scientific Foundations of the Chemical Industry," and "Recovery by Alchemy or Chemistry," respectively.

Other speeches:

Prof. Philip C. Jessup, WMAL, 9:45 p. m. on "Will Neutrality Hold in Case of War?"

The Disabled American Veterans' program from Hollywood, WRC, 11:30 p. m., presents Commander in Chief Volney P. Mooney, who speaks on the rehabilitation work of his organization. Several screen stars are expected to appear.

High spots:

Ray Noble and his orchestra, WRC, 10:30 p. m.

Jack Pearl again, WJSV, 10 p. m.

Burns and Allen consider the problems of cleaning wall paper, WJSV, 9:30 p. m.

College night at Fred Allen's Town Hall, 9 p. m., WRC.

Gertrude Berg in the second episode of "The House of Glass," 8:30 p. m., WRC.

The Lombardos, WRC, 10 p. m.

Tomorrow night WMAL, 7:15 o'clock, there will be a special broadcast on behalf of the Actors' Fund Benefit performance by the National Theater Players Sunday night. Look for details in this column tomorrow.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London—A cheerful tone prevailed at the reopening of the stock exchange yesterday. Gilt-edged securities, industrial and gold-mining shares showed firmer prices due to fair support and cheap money, the latter being the chief incentive. Transatlantic issues were active and firm, while rubber and oil stocks remained quiet. The market closed firm.

Paris—Prices on the bourse opened irregular yesterday with rentes declining on news of a delay of the Franco-Russ

Wheat Breaks Under a Dollar, Corn Follows

Cotton Closes 4 to 8 Points Down Under Liquidation.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 23.—A break of 3 cents tumbled wheat prices below the dollar a bushel level today and caused a sharp recession in the prices of other grain futures.

The drop in wheat values, coming near the close of the trading session, was the result of a wave of bearishness that enveloped speculators and caused pronounced liquidation as the downward trend broadened. The market was influenced mostly by reports of showers in important grain producing areas and forecasts of additional precipitation overnight.

Wheat closed 2⅝ to 3¼ cents below yesterday's finish, May 99-99¼ and corn dropped 1½ to 2½ cents. Oats lost 1⅛-1¾, rye 1¾-2 and barley was unchanged to 1 cent off. The market was carried back to the approximate level of 10 days ago.

The market also was weakened by the uncovering of stop orders to sell. Easiness at Liverpool after that market had opened firm following the week-end holiday also was a bearish factor.

Corn and oats followed wheat. The corn pit was full of liquidating orders and shy of buying power. Provisions eased stubbornly with grains.

Cotton Market.

New York, April 23 (AP).—Cotton was lower today under near month liquidation and scattered selling. The general market closed barely steady at net declines of 4 to 8 points.

Relatively easy Liverpool cables brought in some selling at the start which was absorbed by trade buying and covering and some buying through houses with foreign connections, but prices worked gradually lower after the first half hour.

May liquidation and switching into later months was one of the chief trading features of the day, but there was considerable buying of May against sales of July toward the close.

Sumners Bill to Hasten Railroad Reorganization Is Not Favored by Most Security Holders; RFC Policies Will Largely Affect Future Plans.

By a Special Correspondent.

New York, April 23.—Holders of railroad securities, especially the large financial institutions which own a large proportion of the railroad bonds outstanding, do not generally favor enactment of the Sumners bill, now pending before Congress. This measure revises Section 77 of the bankruptcy act so as to hasten and facilitate reorganization of carriers now in financial difficulties.

As is well known, not a single railroad has yet been reorganized under Section 77, which has been in effect for three years. This law has been upheld as constitutional latterly by the United State Supreme Court in a case involving the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway. However, the highest court then pointed out that a proceeding under Section 77 must be carried through to its completion with reasonable expedition or dismissed. The Sumners bill provides specifically for speedy reorganizations with a provision that a plan of reorganization must be filed by a railroad within six months after a petition to reorganize under Section 77 has been approved by the court. For cause shown, the judge may extend the time within which a plan must be filed by a maximum of six additional months.

RFC Reorganization Policies Revealed.

The management of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation has thrown its influence in favor of speedier railroad reorganizations. Since railroads owe almost $400,000,000 to the RFC, the latter is quite an important factor in reorganizations, especially where it holds valuable collateral security. In the course of discussions between the RFC chairman and officials of Missouri Pacific, Denver & Rio Grande Western, and Western Pacific, the following basic principles have been indicated as likely to govern RFC railroad financing for the future:

1. The corporation will be quite hesitant about lending additional funds to weak railroads merely to continue interest payments. It stands ready, however, to utilize the $350,000,000 earmarked for railroad loans to facilitate reorganizations to give lasting, rather than temporary, relief to financially embarrassed carriers.

2. The RFC has indicated a desire to acquire first mortgage bonds equal in amount both to the new money it will invest in the reorganized property and the funds already advanced. Since certain of the former RFC loans are not now fully secured on the basis of the market value of collateral pledged as security, the management of the Reconstruction Corporation appears somewhat concerned, especially in view of the proposed congressional investigation of railroad financing by the Government. The position of the RFC as lender can be materially strengthened if a first mortgage position for its old loans should be obtained as partial consideration for the provision of new money. Other creditors, of course, will not be particularly pleased by such a policy.

3. The RFC will not cooperate with any plan in which fixed charges are not reduced to bring them well within current indicated earning power of the property. In the case of the Denver & Rio Grande Western, a plan was presented reducing fixed charges from some $5,500,000 to $2,250,000 annually. Mr. Jones objected on the ground that the plan was not drastic enough, and indicated that charges should not be more than $1,750,000 per annum, which would compare with earnings available for interest of $2,796,000 in 1934.

Bondholders, Stockholders Still Seeking Delays.

Financial institutions, on the other hand, generally favor further delay before reorganization, in the hope that a material revival of traffic will make necessary less drastic curtailment in railroad fixed charges. Otherwise, all except the best secured bonds of weak lines will have to bear quite substantial sacrifices, and many poorly secured underlying bonds and junior obligations may be converted largely or entirely into income bonds and stocks.

Railroad shareholders now generally occupy a very tenuous position where the issuing corporations fail to earn fixed charges by a material margin. They also favor waiting, in the hopes that a revival of earnings will improve their equity. Since stockholders are not now in position to pay assessments, or are unwilling to do so, it will be more difficult than usual for them to avoid being wiped out under current conditions.

The present Section 77 has proved especially defective because it provides stockholders must approve a reorganization plan by a two-thirds vote unless the corporation is found insolvent, which is quite difficult to prove under the existing judicial precedents. The Sumners bill facilitates a finding that a railroad corporation is insolvent by providing that earning power and functional depreciation be considered. It also permits the Federal court to impose a plan of reorganization found to be fair, after due hearing, even without approval of creditors and stockholders. Thus, this bill will remove the more basic causes for the delay that has attended all attempted railroad reorganizations under Section 77 to date.

Westinghouse Net $4,102,648 Over 1st 1934 Quarter

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 23.—Heavy billings of equipment for railway electrification, a more than seasonal increase in shipments of household appliances and about $900,000 nonrecurring income brought Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co. net income of $2,326,496 in the first quarter. This compares with a loss of $1,776,152 in the same period last year, a gain of $4,102,648.

A continuance of good business for the second quarter is indicated, but Andrew W. Robertson, chairman of the company, stated that shipments of railway equipment will be in substantially reduced volume after the next few months.

Home Repair Loans Here At $1,456,169

2,500 Washington Owners Have Borrowed in Six Months.

By R. Karl von Lewinski.

Renovizing loans through Washington financial institutions and business firms have reached a grand total of $1,456,169 since the inauguration of the campaign in September of 1934, the local branch of the Federal Housing Administration reported yesterday.

J. K. Gilchrist, director of the District of Columbia division, asserted that in the six months during which benefits of the FHA insured housing loans had been available, local banks had made 1,185 loans for a total of $635,509. Building and loan firms accounted for a total of $640,660 to 1,124 individuals and private firms operating through various finance companies loaned out $180,000.

Under the rules of the housing act, only built-in equipment is eligible for financing under the free insurance feature. By the use of simple electrical installations even Frigidaires are eligible for the no-down-payment loans. Landscaping, screens, heating systems, gas ranges, linoleum and plumbing are also eligible.

To further speed the local campaign an army of 180 canvassers is daily calling on property owners to make suggestions and give information on home repairs. In the last month this group has made 5,520 contacts, resulting in 1,739 pledges for home renovation. Total value of the repair work instigated through the activities of this branch up to April 20 is estimated at $535,000.

Tapp to Speak.

Marketing agreements under the agricultural adjustment act will be discussed by J. W. Tapp, AAA licenses and agreements director, at the meeing of the Washington section of the American Marketing Society tonight at 8 p. m. in the United States Chamber of Commerce Building.

Harry C. Carr, Division Administrator, Distributing Trades Division, NRA, will speak on distribution codes under the national recovery act. Charles J. Brand, chairman of the section, will preside over the meeting which will be open to the public.

Washington Suburban Bonds.

A new issue of $250,000 Washington Suburban Sanitary District (Maryland) 4½ per cent bonds due April 1, 1985, and redeemable in 1965 and thereafter at par is being offered by Brown and Harriman & Co., Inc. Sales price is 109½ to yield about 3.96 per cent to the first redeemable date and at 4.50 per cent thereafter.

Proceeds of the issue will be used for water main and sewer purposes.

At the meeting of the Norfolk & Southern First Mortgage Bondholders Protective Committee, of which F. J. Lisman is chairman, Wallace D. Dexter, jr., treasurer of the New England Mutual Life Insurance Co., was elected to membership on the committee in place of J. Lawrence Gilson, deceased.

Government Obligations Have Broad Advance in Bond Market

Some Short-Term Treasuries Gain Half a Point in Active Trading; Rails, Utilities and Industrials Join in Rise.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 23.—The bond market ran into some profit taking today, but leaders met prompt support and ended higher.

U. S. Government obligations enjoyed the broadest advance in more than a week, with some of the short-term Treasuries advancing as much as ½ point.

Trading was more active in all sections, the turnover aggregating $14,205,000, par value, compared with $11,454,000 on Monday. The Associated Press averages were from .2 to .3 of a point higher.

The brief flurry of profit taking in rails and utilities was regarded as a somewhat overdue corrective, inasmuch as these groups have enjoyed a broad demand over a number of days and have made substantial advances. Buying orders of sizable proportions was uncovered when leaders dipped.

Wheeler Helps Utilities.

The remarks of Senator Wheeler at the Senate committee hearing on his utility bill concerning suggestions for alternative legislation acted as something of a prop for that group and recovery was swift. Columbia Gas 5s were again favorites, advancing 1½ points to 87¾, and Montana Power refunding 5s were a point better at 81⅜. Others improving included obligations of Denver Gas & Electric, Laclede Gas, Metropolitan Edison, North American Edison and American Water Works.

Among rails getting a point or so higher were New York Central refunding 5s at 59⅝, Pere Marquette 5s at 83, New Haven collateral 6s at 54, Southern Pacific 4½s at 63½, and Great Northern general 7s at 88¾.

Such industrial bonds as Bethlehem Steel 5s, Chile Copper 5s, White Sewing Machine 6s, Penn Dixie 6s and Universal Pipe & Radiator 6s were in demand at advances of 1 to 2 points.

All Treasuries Strong.

The broadest gains among Government obligations were made by the Treasury 3½s of 1941, which advanced 13-32ds to 108.6, and the 3¼s of 1944-46, up 14-32ds at 106.6. Others averaged 6-32ds to ¼ point higher and the Liberties and indirect obligations improved nearly as much.

The foreign department was a trifle irregular. Some of the German private loans advanced while the government obligations sagged. Rima Steel 7s, a Hungarian industrial issue, dropped 11 points on small offerings.

Reports of dealers indicated a healthy institutional demand for the new Southern California Edison 3¾ per cent bonds that were offered yesterday, which heightened interest in the remarks of the chairman of the Texas Corporation that consideration was being given to refunding that company's large issue of bonds.

Exchange Seat $85,000, An Advance of $10,000

New York, April 23 (AP).—Arrangements for sale of a stock exchange seat at $85,000 was announced today, an increase of $10,000 from the previous sale.

The sale is $5,000 under the $90,000 high of this year set January 17, but $20,000 above the low of $65,000 established April 3.

Com. Credit Net $1.10 a Share

Common Stock Income Compares With 75c in 1934 Quarter.

Baltimore, Md., April 23, 1935. Consolidated net income of Commercial Credit Co., after providing for all Federal and other taxes, for the first quarter ended March 31, 1935, was $1,455,142.38, compared with $1,085,985.63 for the same period of 1934. After providing for minority interest and dividends on all preferred stock there remained for the common stock $1,089,722.34 for the first quarter of 1935, compared with $720,821.89 for the same period of 1934.

Consolidated net income on the common stock for the first quarter of 1935 was $1.10 per share on all shares outstanding with the public at the end of the period, which does not include 15,000 shares in the treasury and under option, but includes 50,000 shares sold to and paid for by Chrysler Corporation. This compares with 75 cents per share for 1934 on actual shares outstanding, including the 15,000 shares in the treasury.

Consolidated gross purchases of receivables for the first quarter of 1935 were $123,434.65, compared with $83,689,353.69 for the same period of 1934.

General Foods Profit Off From 70c to 64c.

The report of General Foods Corporation for the three months ended March 31, shows net profits of $3,361,339. This is equal to 64 cents a share on the 5,251,440 shares of no par value stock outstanding March 31, 1935, and compares with net profit of $3,679,650, or 70 cents a share for the corresponding three months of 1934.

C. M. Chester, president, pointed out that the first quarter of 1934 was characterized by unusually active buying by distributers, due largely to the rise in food prices which occurred at that time.

The William Wrigley, Jr., Co. and subsidiaries reports net income after taxes, depreciation and expenses of $1,786,095 for the first quarter, compared with $1,875,057 in the corresponding period last year. Earnings in the 1935 quarter were equivalent to approximately 81 cents per share on the common stock outstanding, compared with 96 cents the corresponding period in 1934.

Curb Continues Active Advance

Peninsular Tel. Preferred Up 14 Points; Greyhound Corporation Rises 3.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 23.—Led by the rejuvenated utilities, further gains were recorded by the curb market today. Trading broadened to approximately 251,000 shares from 206,000 yesterday.

Peninsular Telephone preferred advanced some 14 points in a thin turnover. Greyhound Corporation finished nearly 3 points higher in brisk dealings. Gainers of major fractions to a point or so included American Gas & Electric, Consolidated Gas & Electric of Baltimore, Aluminum Co. of America, Dow Chemical, Sunshine Mining, Newmont Mining and New York, Honduras & Rosario. Electric Bond & Share was slightly higher.

Surplus Freight Cars Show 4,677 Decrease

Class I railroads on March 31 had 300,466 surplus freight cars in good repair and immediately available for service, the Association of American Railroads announced today.

This was a decrease of 4,677 cars compared with March 14, at which time there were 305,143 surplus freight cars.

Allis-Chalmers Orders Up.

New York, April 23 (AP).—Unfilled orders of the Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Co. on March 31 amounted to $8,182,393, compared with $7,725,271 on the same date last year. Billings during the first quarter totaled $6,697,646, against $3,298,383 in the same quarter last year. Orders received during the period amounted to $6,866,080, compared with $4,597,656 in the first quarter of 1934.

Stocks Rally After Earlier Profit Taking

Silver Shares and Rail Stocks Hold Market Steady.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 23.—The silver mining shares and some rails and specialties seized the leadership in another active stock market session today.

While the run of market leaders, which have figured prominently in the recent rise, appeared content to coast along, silver stocks, aided by the advance of 2¼ cents an ounce in the price of the bar metal, not far from the new official Treasury buying price of 71.11 cents an ounce, found plenty of takers at gains of fractions to 3 points or so.

Rails felt the buying incentive created by individual carloadings reports for the latest week, many of which appeared today and indicated a healthy advance over the previous week. Hope for a Supreme Court decision on the carrier pension law also was a factor. Some of the sugar shares aided the bull forces as the current firmer price for the raw and refined staple attracted attention.

With the exception of Monday, today's stock exchange business was again the best in over two months, with aggregate turnover of 1,226,080 shares.

FERA Official Rules Key West As King of Old

His Florida Empire Is City Where Revival Hopes Rest With Him.

This is the last of three stories on the Federal Government's rehabilitation project at Key West.

By Harry Ferguson.

Copyright by the United Press.

Key West, Fla., April 23.—Julius Stone, jr., who is 34 years old, was writing a thesis on chemistry at Harvard nine years ago, never dreaming that in the spring of 1935 his word would be law of the land up and down the coral keys of Florida.

Today, as Federal emergency relief administrator in Florida, he possesses all the powers that used to belong to the mayor and city council. He is the king of a tight little empire consisting of Monroe County. He and his local administrator, M. E. Gilfond, can tell taxicab drivers what rates to charge, order a dilapidated house to be torn down and decide how much a turtle steak should cost in Key West's restaurants. They not only can, but do.

Nowhere else in the United States except Washington will you find a town where the Federal Government rules as it does here. Call it a "dictatorship," a "kingdom within a republic" or anything you choose, the fact remains that Key West citizens seem to like it. They asked for it and they are getting it.

Four of Five Destitute.

The town was on the edge of starvation—some people were stealing coconuts for food—when the city council confessed last July that it had no solution for a situation where four out of five inhabitants were destitute. The council abdicated and petitioned the Governor of Florida to take over the town and county under a state of emergency.

Gov. Dave Sholtz in turn named Julius Stone, Florida's FERA administrator, a thin-haired, tireless son of an Ohio capitalist, as his agent in charge of Key West. Some of the inhabitants snickered as he pedaled around town on a bicycle, wearing a shirt and shorts, but they listened when he talked and this is what happened:

Stone told them their choices were to help themselves, continue to accept direct relief, or pack up and move away. He suggested a joint enterprise between the Federal Government and Key West. The Federal Government would provide the money to feed and clothe the town. Key West had to contribute, too, Stone said, and since there was no money here the only thing the town could contribute was labor.

Sign Up for Work.

Stone told the citizens to sign contracts to work. Business men signed up to work after hours in cleaning rubbish from vacant lots. The town was bankrupt and even garbage collection had ceased. The inhabitants signed up to work 1,300,000 hours, and, at 50 cents an hour, Key West's contribution is valued by the FERA at $900,000.

The FERA says 5 per cent of the persons who signed pledges have failed to live up to their contracts. Much work still has to be done, but Key West has crawled a long way out of the slough.

Stone underwrote an airplane line from Miami to Key West; he subsidized a hotel, lent money to night clubs and in a hundred ways broke free from the usual relief formula. In some quarters he was criticized for his bold, unorthodox methods, but no word of restraint has come from Washington. There are some local grumblers and a magazine called The Florida Grower said "Key West has its Kingfish." But nine out of ten citizens credit Stone with saving the town and their worst fear is that some day the Federal Government will move out.

New Government.

That is why there may come into being here a new type of city and county government. Already there is pending in the Florida Legislature a bill to validate the abdication of the Key West City Council and leave the FERA in control for another year. Another bill, which probably will not be acted upon before the next session of the Legislature, would abolish the office of mayor and the town council and set up a three-man government—one elected by the people, one appointed by the Governor and one recommended by the United States Secretary of the Interior. Arthur Gomez, representing Key West and Monroe County adjacent territory in the State Senate, is sponsoring both bills.

It was Stone who decided to stake Key West's future on the tourist business. The answer to whether he will succeed lies not here, but up North along the islands that go stringing out to sea from the tip of Florida. To get from Miami to Key West, automobile tourists now have to drive along a highway broken by two gaps of water—a five-hour ferry ride.

Bridges Planned.

What Key West would like to see are bridges across those water gaps, so tourists could sweep down through the keys along the highway. The Federal Government already has put World War veterans to work quarrying stone for these bridges and assembling mechanical equipment. The veterans went on strike not long ago, but they are back at work now. There have been delays in getting money from Washington.

Engineers say it will take 18 months to span the water gaps if the work goes forward without any more delay.

Key West's victory to date, then, has been that it has proved that people battered by six years of history's worst depression can take new heart and solve for themselves the essential problems of food, clothing and shelter. Whether the town will go on to the larger victory of becoming a prosperous tourist center is a question that events of the next 12 months will decide.

Will the FERA Make Key West the Utopia of America?

This aerial view shows Key West, the southernmost city in the United States, where the Federal Emergency Relief Administration is conducting a program of rehabilitation.

Boys to Be Speakers At Optimist Luncheon

Inaugurating the spring program, a "Friend of the Boy" movement will be the principal feature of the weekly luncheon meeting of the Washington Optimists Club at the Hamilton Hotel today at 12:30 p. m.

Each Optimist will bring a boy to the luncheon as his guest, and the speakers, for the most part, will be the youngsters at the luncheon.

Chest to Name Trustees At Meeting Tomorrow

The annual meeting of the Community Chest will be held tomorrow at 4 p. m. in the United States Chamber of Commerce, Herbert L. Willett, jr., director, announced yesterday. Clarence Phelps Dodge, president, will preside.

Principal business will be the election of a board of trustees, consisting of one board member and one staff member of each of the 64 Chest agencies, 128 in all, and 128 members representing the contributors.

Catholics to Hold Lourdes Services

3-Day Celebration to Begin in D. C. Tomorrow.

Catholic societies throughout Washington will join tomorrow in the opening of a three-day celebration of the diamond jubilee anniversary of the miraculous grotto at Lourdes, France.

Continuous services will be held tomorrow, Friday and Saturday at the Convent of Perpetual Adoration at 1419 N street northwest. Members of the sodality from the several Catholic churches will be present during the day. More than 4,000 men from the 55 branches of the Holy Name Society, representing every Catholic church in Washington, will gather in groups of 100, to take part in the services during the night.

Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament will be conducted at 8:30 p. m. each evening.

Model Airplane Contest Planned for Saturday

A model airplane contest will be held by the Washington Air Derby Association on the north end of Bolling Field at 1 p. m. Saturday. The contest is open to model planes built by persons under 19 years of age who live within 20 miles of Washington.

The contest is being arranged by the model airplane committee of the Derby Association, which is headed by Edward H. Young. Other members of the committee are Miss Edna Gardner, William Buell and Paul Edward Garber. All types of plane may be entered. A prize will be given to the winner, and his points will be counted in the annual trophy contest of the Derby Association.

Moffett Leaves Sunday on Trip; May Keep Post

Whether He Will Resign or Take Leave Is Question; Going to Orient.

James A. Moffett is holding tight to his tickets for the Orient, but whether the wealthy young housing administrator is to retire from the Administration or merely take a leave of absence is still an open question.

More than a week ago Mr. Moffett informed the President of his desire to resign, and was told to come back before leaving to "talk things over." Obediently, he returned yesterday for a conference over the President's luncheon tray.

The chief difficulty, from all accounts, was that Donald R. Richberg cut in on the luncheon, too. Talk revolved around the NRA, the new works set-up and other pressing matters to such an extent that Mr. Moffett never was able to settle his departure.

However, the housing administrator said after the meeting that he intends to leave Washington Sunday. He added that he expects to see Mr. Roosevelt again before that time. The trip to the Far East will take two and a half months, he said.

Earlier in the day a suggestion was advanced in Administration quarters that Mr. Moffett might not resign after all; that Mr. Roosevelt might persuade him to take a leave of absence. This would enable the President to keep the housing administration intact, it was pointed out.

Mr. Moffett said such an arrangement was not mentioned in his luncheon conversation with the President. He added, in answer to further questions, that he has urged that his organization be continued. There has been no consideration, as far as he knows, of a merger of the FHA with the HOLC, he said.

John H. Fahey, chairman of the HOLC, also disclaimed any intention on the part of the Administration to consolidate the two credit agencies. He, too, conferred with Mr. Roosevelt yesterday, reporting afterward that private institutions are taking over the burden of home loans and that all of the $1,750,000,000 additional credit provided in the pending HOLC bill probably will not be needed.

Report on Quints Displeases Dionne

Colds Found Waning, but Papa's Unsatisfied.

By the Associated Press.

Callander, Ontario, April 23.—Dr. Alan Brown, child specialist, examined the five Dionne girls today, said they soon will be their usual selves again after recovering from colds, but Oliva Dionne, the father, remained unsatisfied.

Dionne advised Dr. Allan Defoe, the quintuplets' regular physician, that he wants doctors of his own choosing to make an examination.

Dr. Brown, Toronto specialist, said the girls' condition was generally "excellent." All except Marie, the tiniest, had an airing. She remained indoors, but was expected to be in perfect shape in a day or two.

The father visited the Dafoe Hospital on the Dionne farm, accompanied by his brother, Leon, and his manager, Leo Kervin. He told Dr. Dafoe he was not satisfied with Dr. Brown's statement.

"He advised me," said Dr. Dafoe, "that he wanted Dr. G. W. Smith and Dr. J. Y. Joyal, both of North Bay, to see the children and report the findings to him. I told him I would not object to the examination later, but pointed out that the children will be recovered within a day or so."

Dr. Dafoe indicated it would be injudicious to examine the babies so soon again, as the handling might upset them.

Arlington Bill Approved.

By the Associated Press.

The House Military Committee yesterday approved a bill to permit burial in Arlington National Cemetery of Cabinet members who were in office while the United States was at war with Germany.
